PRISONERS OF WAR.

The New York Sun refers to an "unofficial announcement" from Berlin that Germany is about to adopt a system of reprisals with Russian prisoners of war because of alleged brutal treatment of German prisoners in Russia, and then observes, referring to the Confederate prison at Andersonville, that "America has some bitter memories of her own in regard to the treatment of prisoners during the Civil war.

If such "bitter memories", do exist, they had best be forgotten, for practically all of them are based upon misconception. It is, of course, true that many Union prisoners did die at Andersonville, but the cold facts—all taken from the official reports of the Secretary of War in Mr. Lincoln's cabinet—show that, during the whole four years of the Civil war, 22,576 Union soldiers died in Confederate prisons, as against 26,436 deaths of Confederate soldiers in Union prisons, and this in face of the fact that a greater number of Union soldiers were captured than Confederates.

There is no escape from these figures as destructive of any "bitter memory" of harsh treatment of Union prisoners in the South, but there are things to be said in explanation of the deaths on both sides. The high Confederate death rate was due, in considerable measure, to the fact that many of the Confederate prisoners were half starved and in bad physical state when taken. The hard ships at Andersonville were, in large measure, due to the fact that the Confederacy, which was near to its fall, was without adequate supplies and drugs for either its wounded or its prisoners.

There were no reprisals directed against prisoners in our Civil war, and the more the history of that great struggle is examined the more striking does the general humanity of its conduct appear. There has been infinitely more cruelty in the European war than was known during the Civil war in America, but we do not credit the report that Germany intends any reprisals against helpless prisoners. Such a policy may be talked of, but it can not be carried out. —Louisville Post.

More Economy in Use of Paper

Additional economies and more active co-operation in the manufacture and consumption of news print paper are suggested in a letter addressed to each member of the News Print Manufacturers' Association by the Federal Trade Commission.

Because of the increasing short age, publishers of the smaller daily and weekly newspapers throughout the country fear they will have to suspend publication. The letter says the suspension of these papers would be "a national calamity."

The commission suggests that the association take steps to insure newspaper publishers not protected by contracts that they will continue to receive a supply that steps be taken to restrain members or middlemen from charging unreasonable and prohibitive prices; that Sunday operation of paper mills and the transferring of machines operating on other grades of paper to the manufacture of news print paper be considered; and that officials of Labor Union be approached regarding Sunday work.

The situation, the letter says, is one which calls for patriotic action by all parties concerned.

The colored people of Burlington and vicinity, gave a lawn fete at the colored church, last Saturday night, the purpose of the fete being to raise money with which to assist Wallace Strader, a colored common school graduate, to meet his expenses while attending a colored educational institution at Frankfort.

Stay in the Hog Business.

"We once heard a prominent hog breeder make the statement," says Farmers' Guide, "That the man who made the most out of the hog business was the man who stuck with it year in and year out, when prices were high and when prices were low. Changing about from one kind of livestock to another and from one breed to another without sufficient cause is one of the serious mistakes made by many farmers It takes some time to become established as a breeder and to build up a reputation that is an asset. The changing nearly always gets in just too late; the prices have fallen or public favor has just changed to some other breed.

But changing breeds is only one of several mistakes that breeders frequently make. In the following clipping sent us by a reader, some of these mistakes are mentioned:"

"Not all hog raisers are good caretakers. To be a good breeder of hogs means work; it means study; it takes the best that is in one to succeed. One cannot be a 'slaker and get any where; there may be easy money in pork production but there is no easy way to get results. There are too many mistakes, too many costly blunders. Let us look at some of them—lack of perseverance; too many 'in and outers; too many small litters; improper care and handling of the brood sow; feeding without study of the needs of the animal; keeping too many or too few hogs; improper housing; unsanitary housing; failing to provide suitable pasture; use of a poor sire and immature breeding stock; breed shifting; failure to recognize value of hog manure poor feed arrangement and not enough time given to study of market. Is that all? you ask. No, not all, but it is enough.

"Let us look at the first one. Who ever heard of anyone making money in the hog business or any other business for that matter, who was in one year and out the next. When prices drop sell out your good brood sows "There is no money in hogs', you declare, then when prices advance you buy at enhanced prices other men's brood sows and you are sure you are going to make a barrel of money in hogs. You buy plenty—such men are usually long on finishing pork when low prices prevail and shor' when prices rule high. To succeed one must stay with the game year in and year out, high or low prices, cholera or no cholera. Stay with the business; there is good work in pork production.

"Not only must the litters be of fair size but they must start off strong. The parents should be in vigorous healthy condition when bred and the sow given plenty of exercise and right kind of feed. A sow cannot make something from nothing, she needs protein and bone producing material if she is to make a litter of vigorous, well sourished offspring.

"When the litter comes don't crowd the sow with a lot of milk-making material for 48 hours as very little feed should be given. She should be on full feed at the end of a week and at the end of a month needs outside assistance in the form of skim milk for her brood. Get growth and get it quickly and cheaply; corn won't do it, not alone at any rate. Corn and tankage; corn and clover; corn and skim milk are needed. If the self-feeder fills the bill use it, but be sure to give the pigs a chance.

"Breed from mature stock. Save labor by hogging down corn. Study the market, but above all, do not fail to recognize blood as found in the stock of a good breed. Breed counts Blood talks. Care, study and all help to make the successful feeder produce the hog."

SURPLUS OF WOMEN.

There are said to be 2,000,000 more women and girls in Great Britain than there are men—and German guns are still increasing the disparity. This surplus of women—or shortage of men, put it as you will—is bound to set some difficult social problems when the war is over. In those parts of the continent where primitive conditions prevail or where patriotism extends into daily life, there will be a tacitly licensed polygamy. Mrs. Grundy doubtless will prove too powerful to admit of such a state of affairs in Britain—though the percentage of illegitimate births in that island is sure to increase—and other solutions must be sought, says Chicago Journal. The most promising of these is assisted emigration of women to British colonies, where males are in a heavy majority. One undoubted good which will result from the present butchery is an improvement in the status of the child born out of wedlock. With the nations hungry for children to grow up as soldiers and producers in place of those lost in the trenches, the old injustice of punishing youngsters for the faults of their parents has become unpopular.

Bright farmers hold no longer to the theory that a cow is a cow. On the contrary, they stick to the principle that a good cow is an excellent investment and a poor cow is a waste, says Philadelphia Ledger. That sale at Coopersburg of 126 animals for $80,000 proves that the bright farmers have their pocketbooks in hand ready to pay for pure blood. The man who gave $3,000 for a cow knows that she is cheaper than another cow which would cost him $50. A cow is a living machine which converts hay, grain and fodder into milk, and the greater her capacity to perform this process of conversion the better cow she is. One of the best things our agriculturil schools have taught is a knowledge of the superiority of first rate stock of every kind over inferior stock. It has come to a point where a knowing farmer can measure the quality of other farmers easily by the cows he keeps.

The great German physicist, Heimholtz, was the first to explain satisfactorily what keeps the sun hot. The sun is not burning; it is heated to the glowing point, like a piece of white hot iron. Helmholtz found that if we suppose the sun to be contracting by only 25 feet a year we would receive our present amount of heat. In other words, says Popular Science Monthly, heat is being literally squeezed out of the sun. Professor Newcomb estimated that when the squeezing process has continued for about 7,000,000 years the sun will be one-half its present size.

New Mexico is suffering from an epidemic of chlorosis. Rose bushes and trees are dying all over the state from the disease. There is no known cure for it and it is spreading rapidly. The natural green color of the plants is changed to a sickly green or even to nearly white. It is most common in the irrigated sections of the West and is now affecting shrubbery in El Paso. Neither the cause nor the cure is known, but in the older trees treatment with green vitriol gives relief.

Mexico treated with a kindly spirit of tolerance and forbearance becoming a great, powerful and prosperous nation in dealing with a weak and distracted neighbor, torn with internal dissensions and struggling for a better government.

In a spirit friendly to all, representing in our diplomatic services the interests of all of the warring nations in Europe in their respective enemies' countries.

Keeping faith with other nations in repealing the Panama Tolls Exemption Act.

Negotiating the treaty for the friendly purchase of the Danish West Indies—an acquisition long desired by the far-seeing statesmen of this country as necessary to the complete protection of the Panama Canal.

Meeting the emergencies caused by the European war by prompt but conservative legislation.

Establishing cordial relations with Japan.

Placing the right above the dollar, justice to smaller or weaker nations over special financial interests in our nation's diplomacy.

The Federal Reserve Law places the financial industrial and commercial interests of the nation on an economically sound and scientific basis and frees them from the domination of high finance or special interests.

The Federal Farm Loan Law gives to the farmers of the nation the same facilities other business men have in borrowing of money and on equal terms. It fully meets the just needs of a great and basic element of our people, utterly neglected by the Republicans in their long control of the government.

The Federal Good Roads Law with a large appropriation aids the building of good roads in all the states.

The Tariff has been honestly and sincerely revised.

The Tariff Commission will take the tariff out of politics and insure scientific, non-political handling of the subject hereafter.

The Income Tax Law.

The War Revenue Law increases the income tax on large incomes provides for an inheritance tax, the most equitable of all taxes, and a special tax on war munitions.

The amendment to the ineffective Aldrich Vreeland Law relieved the tense financial strain caused by the war abroad.

The Federal Trade Commission is arbitrating commercial disputes, preventing unfair competition and doing justice between the public and great industrial corporations.

The direct election of United States senators was a great move ment toward popular government.

The shipping Bill will afford our people transportation of goods to foreign shores free from foreign control or interference and at low freight rates.

The Seaman's Act guards the rights of sailors and the safety of ocean passengers.

The Anti-Trust Laws were wisely and conservatively amended, doubtful provisions cleared and the law made truly effective of its purpose.

The Agricultural Extension Act puts within reach of every farmer's wife and children in the nation the information, science, and practical knowledge of the agricultural experts of the national department of Agriculture. It will double the productiveness of the farms of America.

Vocational Education to be given in every high school in the country, and domestic science taught the coming woman of the land.

The Public Health Service broadened to take in rural sanitation and vocational diseases.

The Workmen's Compensation Act protects the workmen in the employ of the National government who suffer physical injury in the service of the nation.

Labor laws which constitute a Magna Charta to laborers of the country have been enacted. The principle is established that human labor is not a mere commodity.

The Child Labor Law emancipates the children of the nation from industrial oppression.

The Industrial Employes' Act established a national Board of Mediation and Conciliation. It gives the government great industrial or labor disputes.

The Cotton Futures Act protects the cotton growers from gambling manipulations of the market and from false and artificial standards of exchanges.

The Grain Standards Act gives to grain growers the protection and advantage of established grades of their commodities.

The United States Warehouse Act enables farmers to store their products safely and obtain negotiable warehouse receipts whereby they can obtain loans readily and in due proportion to the value of their products.

The Alaskan Railway bill breaks the grip of great private interests on Alaska and opens that land to all Americans.

The tremendous resources of the nation, its public lands, coal oil and gas fields, its water power, have been conserved for the benefit of the people now and in the future, while vast areas of suitable land have been made available for homesteads.

The Filipinos have been given a greater measure of freedom in accordance with the fundamental principles of our government and our pledged word.

Vaudeism in the House of Representatives has been abolished and Congress is once a deliberative body.

The principle has been materialized into law that eight hours constitutes a lawful day's work, and the country saved from a great strike.

The foregoing record of accomplishment has not only been made possible but has been pressed to completion by President Wilson's unceasing labor, firmness, patience thought and wisdom.

In addition, thru President Wilson, the invisible government has been driven from the Nation's Capital. Popular government has been restored. Close relations, as in the days of George Washington, between the President and Congress, have been reestablished.

And never since Lincoln's day have the American people felt so strongly and so surely that they had a personal representative at the nation's head whom no fear or favor could move from the straight course of duty.

Under President Wilson the various departments of the Government have pursued an active and progressive course.

The Department of Labor has established an employment bureau, beneficial alike to labor and manufacturer.

The Department of Justice has enforced real dissolution of monopolies and combinations. It has clarified the anti-trust laws and its conduct of its functions has been such that instead of years of long drawn out litigation, the cases against trusts have been settled and the laws obeyed. Interlocking directorates are now no more.

The Post Office in the fiscal year just ended returned a profit of over five million dollars. The Parcels Post has been developed into a gigantic useful service to all the people of the nation. The Postal Savings deposits have grown from thirty to eighty million dollars under the Wilson administration.

The Treasury Department besides putting into effective working the Federal Reserve Law and the Farm Loan Law, has by wise placing of the surplus treasury funds into western and southern banks at crop moving periods greatly aided both the farmers and the consumers of all agricultural products. It has put into the treasury millions of dollars by collecting interest on long time government deposits instead of allowing favorite banks the use of this money free.

The Department of Commerce has been re-organized and commerce promoted, both foreign and domestic.

The National Parks have been beautified and made accessible by good roads.

The Bureau of Markets and Rural Organization, and the news service to farmers have put the farmer on the same level as to the selling of his products as the Rural Credits Law did as to his financial status.

The record of Wilson and Democracy for the last four years is a powerful plea for the verdict of mankind, and for a favorable verdict from the American people at the polls in November.

WILLIAM CLORE

Another One of the County's Good Citizens Passes Away After a Lingering Illness

William Clore died at his home in Burlington last Thursday evening after a protracted illness, during which all that was possible was done to restore his health. The funeral took place from the residence at 10 a. m. last Saturday, Rev. Baker, pastor of Belleview Baptist church conducting the services, the interment being in the Odd-Fellows cemetery near town.

William Clore was a son of the late Churchwell and Julia Aylor Clore, being one of a family of two daughters and four sons, Henry, the oldest son, being the only survivor of the family. He was born March 15th, 1847, consequently had been in his 69th year since last March. He and Miss Agnes Acra were married October 18th, 1868. She survives and was a devoted companion of the departed one. To them no children were born.

William Clore was reared on a farm and never resided outside of Boone county. The attraction's of a farmer's life to him were many, and he never abandoned the rural life until his health became so badly impaired he could no longer give his farming interests the attention they demanded. He bought and moved to property in Burlington two years ago, and never saw a well day thereafter.

William Clore was a quiet, frugal citizen, and so long as his health permitted he was a nice, and very successful farmer and a clever neighbor. In his death the county loses another member of one of its oldest, most influential and prosperous families.

The presence at the funeral of the very large number of those with whom the deceased had passed his life was a strong testimonial of their esteem for him, and many were the expressions of sympathy for the bereaved companion, of nearly fifty years.

Undertaker Phillip Taliaferro, of Erlanger, had charge of the funeral.

Icebergs the Deadliest Menace to Ships.

There are a few matters about which such wide-spread ignorance prevails as about the ice masses with which the North Atlantic, in the region of the Grand Banks, is bestrewn every spring and summer. The general impression is that this is ice which is formed along the coast of Newfoundland and Labradore and is released every spring, but, in truth, the origin of the icebergs and icefloes is essentially different. Icebergs are huge masses of glaciers formed in the vast arctic continent of Greenland.

The glaciers slowly but irresistibly press seaward through the Greenland valleys into the ocean where, when the weights of their outer portion, once it is supported by the land, becomes too great, it breaks off from the present mass, a process called "calving." The calving process becomes an iceberg, and sometimes these are of enourmous size, many miles in extent indeed, and often so vast that they ground on the shoals in the region until by the play of the winds, the sea, the currents and the sun they become top-heavy and tumble over again to break apart into smaller fragments that are ferried southward on the bosom of the Polar current and they ugtimately reach the avenues of ocean travel. These floes can only make their escape from the Arctic waters during the brief summonths.

It takes these ice-masses six or eight months to voyage over the 2,000 miles separating Melville Bay, in West Greenland, from the Grand Banks, and the large bergs which often ground along Labrador are even longer on the way.

These floes, and the bergs which are often amongst them, but which are increased later in the season by a vastly larger number of bergs that sail along in solitary grandeur after having had their progress retarded by grounding on shoals or points of land as they came southward, disperse themselves over the Grand Banks and become the very worst sort of menace to ocean shipping. It would be possible to occupy the whole of the space devoted to this article in merely summarizing the cases of ocean steamers which during the past fifty years have met disaster through collision with icebergs in the waters off Newfoundland, all other records in this regard, however, were completely overshadowed by the appalling disaster to the Titanic. This mighty master creation, the greatest the world has ever seen was eliminated in the brief space of a few hours, through the mistaken idea of some of those in authority on board, that she was so staunchly built that she could defy all agencies of nature and race with impunity thru ice-laden seas.

As the summer advances and the sun becomes more powerful, the bergs melt into smaller fragments or upset and break into pieces on the shoal ground of the Grand Banks, being then swept into the Gulf Stream, where they lie in the way of the steamers plying east and west and cause the shipping casualities so frequently during these months. Still mightier bergs, however, ground along the coast of Newfoundland in the spring and summer, and move southward in the fall.

Admittedly the worst danger menacing transatlantic travelers in modern days with steamers of such speed as are plying on the Atlantic, is that of collision with an iceberg in a dense fog. It is morally certain that the mysterious disappearance of big steamers like the Naronic and the Huronian in more recent years, and of many others previously, is attributable to this cause, for no rescue agency is usually powerful enough to work the ruin of a modern liner with her cellular bottom and water-tight bugkheads.—Ex.

MINTS

Working Hard Turning Out Ten Million New 10-Cent Pieces.

Orders for the newly designed ten cent pieces are being received daily at the U. S. mint at Philadelphia. Two hundred and fifty thousand of the new coins are coined daily, 150 men being employed exclusively in this work. Mint officials say the supply is ample, and that ten million of the new dimes will be turned out within the next four months. The new piece bears the figure of a Grecian woman on the obverse side and the bundle and rods and the ax of the Roman lictors on the reverse. Superintendent Joyce also announced that within the next two weeks work will be begun on the new twenty-five cent pieces. The newly designed quarter of one side has the full figure of a woman coming through a gate in a wall, the reverse side shows an eagle in flight. The 25-cent piece bears a full length figure of the Goddess of Liberty holding olive branches, while the reverse design is that of an spread eagle standing on a rock.

From the corporation line of Burlington, over the Belleview pike to the top of the river bank at Belleview is 7.57 miles.

Pastures in this part of the county look considerably better than they do along the Lexington and Beaver and Richwood pikes.

Many good things were served, such as cakes, pies, etc., and demonstrate that the girls are noted for their cooking. After the feast nine girls were requested to take seats together just in front of the veranda, Mr. Powers then entertained them for a while with music made on his new Columbia Grafanolia, purchased from E. P. Northcutt. They were special records for the occasion furnished by Mr. Northcutt such as, "Will the Circle be Broken?" "Tell Mother I'll be There," "Memories Of Mother," etc. All expressed their appreciation of having such a selection for the occasion. The men enjoyed themselves watching the children on the Ariel railway across the lawn that so many children have enjoyed on previous occasions. Cigars for the men and chewing gum for the nine sisters and children were passed by the hostess, G. B. Powers. The next meeting will be held at Dr. R. E. Ryle's home of Mrs. Hattie Griffith, Beaver Lick, some time in 1917.

G. B. POWERS.

Tobacco growers should not fail to bear in mind the establishment of the loose leaf tobacco market at Walton and should give this market their utmost support. The object of the promoters is to give the growers the best prices possible and to eliminate all the objectionable features that are frequently found on loose leaf markets. The gentlemen controlling this market are well known for their honest dealing and will see to it that everyone gets a square deal. Their facilities for quick handling of tobacco from the wagons cannot be excelled as the wagons will be unloaded right on the floor. Automatic scales will be used in weighing so that every one can see for themselves just what their tobacco weighs. The building is amply lighted and will be ready before the tobacco is ready for market. The company proposes to give the grower as much on this market as they can get on any other loose leaf market, and owing to its close proximity to the large cities expect to have the best buyers there in on the market.

The Prodigal Son Returns.

The return of the Prodigal Son and the reception recorded him by his father was enacted Sunday on a tempoon by the Rev R. Quaries, of Paris, who has been conducting a camp meeting on the Barry farm at the intersection of the Hueston and Lexington pikes.

The Rev Quaries is said by members of the ministry of the colored churches to be one of the best negro preachers in the State and the staging of the return of the family "black sheep" and his parental forgiveness is always a feature of the closing days of his meeting.

Followed by the preaching of a powerful sermon on the ills and evils that beset the younger set and sentence given to those who partake of things unclean, the congregation was invited outside the tent, where the fatted calf, ring, robe and crown awaited.

It was almost sundown and the slanting rays in the distance soon disclosed the coming of the profligate. With bowed head, hands crossed behind him and wearing a downcast look, a youth of fifteen years was seen to approach.

Amidst the shouts of joy and gladness the blessings bestowed by the father and members of the congregation, the "black sheep" arrived and was embraced by the Rev. Quaries.

After a hearty welcome the robe was brought forth and placed upon his neck to replace the tattered and worn garments that adorned his body since the wasting of his estate in riotous living. A crown was placed upon his head and the ring brought forth.

Next in order was the feast. A fatted calf, a prize Jersey bull of some six months, of age, and slightly unruly, was roped and led through the crowd to be killed in honor of the return of the lost son.

An imitation slaughter of the animal and the festive spread was given as a finale.—Paris Democrat.

If all the pavements are laid this fall in Burlington for which arrangements are being made the town will have a pretty good system of sidewalks.

A gentle rain of several hours duration, followed by warm weath er would be a great benefit in securing good fall pastures in this county.

Lights for Country Driving.

A man who says he was driving a horse-drawn vehicle on the extreme right of the road, at a point on the Upper River road opposite Bullit Station, was run down by an automobile in a head-on collision. His horse was killed and two of his limbs were broken. The the speed at which the auto struck the vehicle and horse indicated high speed The man who drove the automobile is quoted as saying it was so dark that he did not see the other vehicle until the lamps showed it a short distance ahead, and it was then too late to stop"

It is as easy and safe to drive an automobile on the darkest night as on a moonlit night All that can be seen with any certainty in in any case is what the headlight show The speed at which it is safe to drive—insofar as collisions with slow-moving and unlighted vehicles are concerned—depends upon the power of the lights carried by the automobile In no event will the motorist see the unlighted vehicle in his path until his headlights reveal it Unless the lights are strong enough to reveal it in time for the automobile to be slowed down a collision is probable In other words, the highest speed that can be maintained with any reasonable hope of avoiding striking other vehicles—those proceeding in the direction in which the automobile is being driven, but slower and unlighted, or those driven in the opposite direction of the automobilist on the wrong side of the road, by reason of negligence or error—is that at which it is possible to stop within the distance covered by the full glare of the headlights

If it is too late to stop when the lights reveal the unlighted vehicle, the strength of the headlights is not great enough for the speed at which the automobile is driven There is no intention to pass upon, or to discuss, the question of whether the driver who figured in the accident on the River road was at fault Participants in accidents often, are unavoidably, quoted incorrectly, and the question in this case was not "direct" The point that is sought to be made is that for country driving, and especially as long as horse-drawn vehicles are not compelled to carry signal lights for their own protection and for the safety of others, powerful headlights are necessary It is unsafe to drive an automobile on a country road at any rate of speed at which automobiles are run customarily without good head lights Whenever it is proposed that lights be dimmed in the country as well as in cities the proposal is made by someone who is ignorant of the paramount importance of enough light ahead of the automobile to reveal the unlighted vehicle—to say nothing of fixed obstructions, holes, ditches or other obstacles—far enough ahead to admit of the car being brought to a standstill before reaching it

Dim lights for city driving are demanded for public safety Strong lights for country driving, on unlighted highways and where there are unlighted vehicles and unlighted obstacles which may cause a wreck if not seen in time, are essentials of fairly safe driving For safety the speed of the individual car must be kept low enough to make it possible to stop, without too sudden and violent application of the brakes, when confronted by the most unexpected obstacle squarely in the path and fully revealed by the headlights

Everyone who has had any experience in country driving at night, and especially everyone who has driven over unfamiliar roads at night knows that inadequate lights are nerve-racking to careful drivers and a source of extreme danger to the passengers in the car and to others on the road if the car is driven rapidly by a too confident driver There is a growing habit of courtesy and care for safety between drivers of automobiles in the matter of passing The general custom nowadays is for each of two automobiles going in opposite directions to slacken speed In the circumstances there is little danger of annoyance even when no dimmers are used by either car, When the two cars have passed and quickened speed, each may proceed with assurance of seeing the unlighted vehicle, the pedestrian or the horseback rider in plenty of time if his lights are strong enough for the speed at which he drives.—Courier Journal.

Does a Hen Get Too Fat to Lay?

The question, "Does a hen get too fat to lay?" is often asked and naturally this question is associated with feed and feeding.

After observing many experiments we are led to believe that this question should be reversed and instead of saying the hen gets too fat to lay we should say the hen can't lay is the reason she gets too fat.

If a hen is fed a ration which makes ten yolks for each five whites, she will make only five eggs and the other five yolks are taken back into the hen's system and built into fat. In this way she becomes very fat, yet produces only a few eggs, in this case the hen is not at fault, for if she had been given a balanced ration, she would have manufactured eggs instead of fat. A good example of a mistake of this kind is permitting hens to eat with fattening hogs. We often hear farmers say that the hens eat with the fattening hogs and waste the feed. They are right so far as egg production is concerned, for a ration which is good for fattening hogs is not good for laying hens. The reason is that the ration produces more yolks than whites and therefore the hens get fat instead of producing eggs.

If the hens have range and access to the hog feed, the better plan is to furnish meat food of some kind which is heavier in the production of whites. In this way, the hens eat less of the hog feed, yet produce more eggs.

During the fall and winter the hens' meat supply is cut off for during the summer they have a supply of worms, bugs, grasshoppers, etc. but frosts and cold weath er destroy this supply. It is a mistake not to correct this condition for most grains fed to hens are stronger in the production of yolks than in the production of whites. Meats of all kinds, skimmed milk, etc., are stronger in the production of whites than yolks, and would therefore be good to feed in connection with grain to form a balanced ration.

About the only solution for this problem where hens have free range and access to grain is to place the meats, milk etc. where the hens can get it and let them balance their own ration, which they do very well where they have an opportunity, but if they are allowed to eat all the grain they want, such as corn, they will get fat and lay only a few eggs, yet should be held blameless for the condition.

Properly Graded Tobacco.

A review of the relative efficiencies of past and present marketing methods in connection with Burley tobacco in Central Kentucky, as well as recommendations for improvement over the present loose leaf system of marketing, constitute the text of Bulletin 202, issued recently by the Experiment Station.

The investigators, Dr. J. H Kastle, C. D. Bohannon and Mr. D. P. Campbell, point to the need for better curing methods and more exact standards for tobacco grades. It is believed that the realization of these improvements would greatly increase the income derived from the tobacco industry in the State.

On a conservative estimate, 60 per cent. of the total amount of the annual sales over the Lexington floors could be increased at least $2.00 per hundred weight by proper handling. Making a liberal allowance for increased cost for strict grading, the grower raising his own crop would realize 380 per cent and the shareman 140 per cent. on that extra investment.

Applying this to the 35,000,000 pounds sold over the Lexington floors during the last season we find that the total value thereof might have been increased by at least $120,000 by proper grading. Figuring on the same basis the normal annual Kentucky Burley crop of 170,000,000 could by proper grading be increased in value by $2,040,000.

Kentucky needs a state marketing law. This law should delegate to some department or institution the authority to describe and establish standard grades for all farm products which permit of division into grades and for standard receptacles for products sold in containers. No product not graded in accordance therewith should be permitted to be exposed or offered for sale unless specifically described as not graded or placarded in legibiel etters "NOT GRADED."

To facilitate the placing of blame for improperly graded leaf, contract strippers should be required to obtain a license bearing a registered number and certifying to their ability in grading tobacco.

The Department of Agricultural Economics is prosecuting its investigations still further, covering curing and grading tests, that will be published when finished.

Every grower should obtain and read this bulletin No. 202—a preliminary Study of the Marketing of Burley Tobacco in Central Kentucky.

The Lesson of the Strike.

There is a lesson in the proposed great railroad strike which it would be well for us as a nation to learn and to profit by.

Probably a very small per cent of the membership of the brotherhoods, when they voted on the proposition to strike, had ever given serious thought to the far reaching effects of their action should it come to an actual walkout. The same can be said of the citizenship of the country at large. Strikes had been of so frequent occ?rrence during the past half century, and the business of the country had suffered such small checks therefrom, that we had been lulled into a false sense of security.

In the great crisis, which has been for a time averted, however, the country has at last been awakened to the enormous power of organized labor. But even now we would not be alive to this great power had it not been threatening the very life of the nation.

Few of the masses of people had ever realized how fully were the railroads the arteries thru which coursed the commercial life blood of the nation. Not until we were threatened with a stoppage of that life giving stream did we awaken to the dire peril which such action portended. Only within the past few weeks have we begun to appreciate the extent of the want, the suffering, the colossal losses that must have inevitably resulted had the strike materialized.

But now that we are at last awake to the real significance of the situation that confronts us, we should profit by our knowledge. We should see to it at once that no similar peril is ever again permitted to threaten us.

We must recognize the fact that the railroads are an absolute necessity to national life; that it is now a moral and patriotic duty incumbent upon not only the managers, but upon the employes as well, to keep the roads in operation.

Yes, we know all about the rights of labor, and of that proud boast that we are all free born American citizens. But when a small per cent of the people, either as managers or as operators, have reached the point when the life of the nation is absolutely at their mercy, then that small per cent ceases to be free in the full sense of the word. They are bound to a higher duty than self interest. They are in bondage to the great cause of universal humanity. They have made themselves absolutely necessary to their fellows and are not free to follow their own inclinations. They have become a part of the machinery that moves a nation, and must bear the responsibilities that accompany the position.

We must realize that for the railroad man to quit his post unless a competent substitute is at hand to assume his duties, is just as reprehensible as a violation of train orders and fraught with as great peril to the public safety. The railroad must be brought to see that he owes a sacred duty to his country, not even second to that of the soldier. The soldier guards our homes and our honor; the railroader guards our very life. He should not destroy that which he guards.

A united nation should insist that these men who thus bear the burdens of our comfort, prosperity and safety shall be fairly dealt with. The thousands of men who daily and hourly expose their loves to the perils of the rails that we may prosper and live in comfort should have the full weight of our influence and sympathy toward securing a square deal. The roads should be made to feel that an injustice to them is an affront to the nation. And likewise, the employes should be made to realize that to throttle the roads is to crucify the nation which every honest American loves.

Can this be done without government action? Possibly not. But if such action should be necessary then the sooner it comes the better. Another such period of tension and uncertainty will work untold harm to our country.—Ex.

NEWS FROM OWEN COUNTY.

(Owenton News-Herald.)

Miss Mabel Steger left Sunday for Louisville where she will study music.

Miss Allie May Steger will take a business course in Prof. Wilbur R. Smith's school in Lexington.

The tobacco crop is being housed, and, without a doubt, is the best Owen county has produced in years. The good crop we have and the good roads we are going to have, will cause the price to open the good farmers' eyes. Why not? Is not everything higher? Then why should the farmers not be paid for their tobacco?

Mule colts in Owen county are selling from 35 to $70 per head.

Reconstruction work on the Sparta and Gratz turnpikes is progressing nicely. The work started too late to finish the roads this year, but it is encouraging to know that the work is in progress and that "some sweet day" we will have some good roads.

THE TOBACCO CROP.

Reports of houses burn in Woodford county but the damage was slight.

Anderson county tobacco is curing up nicely and growers are expecting a bigger price than ever before.

No complaint of houseburn in Fleming county. The crop is yellowing nicely and promises fine color and good body.

There has been no complaint of houseburn in Fayette county, and the crop in the barn looks very good and has colored up nicely.

Bourbon county's crop is housed. In addition to the crop being heavier than the usual crop it is also of more than average quality.

Ideal weather put the Madison county crop in the barn in excellent condition and it is curing nicely. The crop is the best of many years.

Lyon county farmers are about through housing tobacco. The crop is an unusually large one and the quality is the best in the history of the county.

Tobacco in Central Kentucky is being rapidly housed and the crop promises to be a good one. All barns are being filled and space will soon be at a premium.

Heavy frost caused some damage to tobacco in Montgomery county. The tobacco damaged was that cut in the field and that in the house was not damaged.

In Nicholas county frost did considerable damage to tobacco in the lowlands. As the larger part of the crop was housed at that time the loss is slight.

Tobacco growers in Nicholas county report that much more damage was done the crop than was first reported as a result of the frost. It is said that great damage was in places in low land.

The best crop of tobacco ever grown in Bessamine county has been housed and the only complaint heard is that there is not sufficient barn room, as growers were not prepared for such a heavy crop.

The largest and best crop in years has been practically housed in Nicholas county. The conditions in most parts is reported satisfactory. Offers for the crop still continue but only a few sales are reported.

Throughout the Green River district farmers have been busily engaged in cutting tobacco. It is said to be one of the best crops ever grown in that district and the farmers of that section are anticipating record breaking prices.

Montgomery county's crop is all housed. The crop is showing good color, the weight however is a matter of conjecture. Many think it will not only be one of the best crops ever grown as to color, but will be of good weight.

Many acres of fine tobacco grown on lowlands of Henderson county, have been damaged by frost, and some instances the crops have been ruined. A biting frost turned tobacco black and caused it to wilt as soon as the sun struck it. Hill land tobacco fared better, although some of it was bitten.

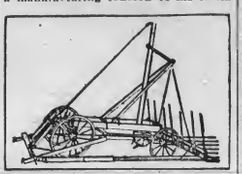
Road Bonds Sold.

Gallatin county road bonds to the amount of $50,000 were sold at the Court House door last Saturday afternoon by Judge W. R. Payne. About six bidders were present from Cincinnati and the bidding was done by them and Hon. R. B. Brown.

The premium by competitive bids was run up to $1,225, this being the final bid, and was made by J. C. Mayer & Co., of Cincinnati, to which firm the bonds were sold. Mr. Brown ran the premium up to $1,215—his final bid. The bonds bear five per cent. interest payable semi-annually and are due as follows: $2,000 in 1921, and $2,000 for each year for a period of ten years, and $3,000 per year after the first fifteen years until paid. The bonds bear the date of Sept. 16, 1916. The premium obtained was not so large as was expected, previous estimates placing the amount at all the way from $1500 to two thousand dollars.—Warsaw Independent.

One needs but to investigate the conditions of our large cities to begin to realize the need of a back to the farm movement. Potatoes are fifty cents per peck and other vegetables are as high. Too many consumers and not enough producers make the high cost of living.

In the city of Louisville it is said, there are 17,000 empty houses and many families that would like to move back to the farm if they could raise enough cash to tide them over. This has been a great year upon the farm for those who tried. Boys the best place is on the farm.—Owen Co. Democrat



The fifth Jockey Day has passed and considerable stock was sold at satisfactory prices. The attendance was not as large as it was at the last sale on account of the frost scare, and this being a time when the farmer is well occupied in the tobacco field, and with other farm work. The sales closed up to $2700 and all seemed happy. Some sales were made at satisfactory prices after the day was over.—Rising Sun Recorder.

Dirigo—A strange malady is raging among the children of this community One side of the neck becomes swollen very bad, the swelling extending from just behind the ear down the side of the neck nearly to the body It is not sore and they say it does not pain them in any way, but it in some way appears to affect the appetite, as they eat but little while afflicted The malady appears to be contagious, and perhaps twenty children in and around here are now afflicted with it

EASILY MOVED HAY STACKER

Considerable Time Saved With Outfit Patented by Missourian and Illustrated Herewith.

Stacking hay causes considerable loss of time when the outfit is moved from field to field, especially if roads must be traveled and telephone wires raised. Oler P. Vroom, a Missourian, has recently patented the wagon stacker shown here, assigning his rights to a manufacturing concern of his town.

Wagon Hay Stacker.

The ease of moving the stacker makes the idea appeal immediately to those who have handled much hay.—Farming Business.

CULTIVATION TO HELP CORN

Shallow as Well as Deep Tillage Will Destroy Weeds—Keep Surface of Soil Mellow.

Deep cultivation of corn is never necessary when the soil has been properly prepared before planting. This is the result shown by investigations at the Minnesota College of Agriculture as well as by investigations of the United States department of agriculture. In most cases cultivation is necessary almost entirely for the elimination of weeds. Shallow cultivation will do this just as well as deep, and it does not injure the roots of the plants.

Experiments have shown, however, that the yield of corn increases with succeeding cultivations up to six. Corn cultivated twice at University Farm, St. Paul, yielded 45 bushels of corn and 3,210 pounds of stover, giving a profit of $5.96. Corn cultivated six times yielded nearly 63 bushels and 3,931 pounds of stover, giving a profit of $10.99.

The frequency of cultivation depends largely on the character of the soil and the conditions of the seedbed at the time of planting. Sufficient cultivations should be made, however, to keep the surface of the soil mellow, free from weeds and loose.

Late cultivations should not be more than two or three inches deep.

USE CARE IN TRANSPLANTING

Roots of Trees Should Not Be Exposed to Sun and Wind—In Dry Weather Cover With Straw.

One of the greatest mistakes when shipping trees is that of allowing the roots to become exposed to sun and wind. It is absolutely necessary to keep the roots wet from the time the trees are received from the nursery until they are planted. All roots that are injured in digging should be cut with a keen knife on the underside so that the roots will grow straight down.

If the trees are not ready to plant, the roots may be perfected by "heeling them in." By this is meant to set the tree in a trench and cover the roots with loose earth. If the weather is very windy and dry throw a little straw over the trees and cover with burlap.

DRAINAGE ADDS TO PROFITS

By Increased Yield and Decreased Cost of Cultivation Value of Land Is Often Doubled.

Lands that are too wet for the most profitable production of crops, should be drained. Even uplands may often be drained with profit, especially hillsides subject to erosion or inclined to be "spouty." Indeed, drainage is profitable wherever it is necessary to the fullest use of the land.

It is not uncommon for lands too wet for cultivation to produce, when drained, 60 or 70 bushels of corn or oats to the acre. On much of the drained land the increase of yield is from 25 to 100 per cent, and by the increased yield and the decreased cost of cultivation the value of the land is often doubled.

LEGUME CROPS AID DEFECTS

Where Soil Lacks Nitrogen Clovers, Cow Peas, Soy Beans, Ecto., Are Recommended.

If sorrel and oxeye daisy seem to be the chief natural product of a field it is perfectly safe to conclude that the soil lacks nitrogen. If the cultivated crops fail to show a dark, healthy green color and are short in stem or vine, the same lack of nitrogen is undoubtedly at fault. Legumes—clovers, cow peas, soy beans, vetches, etc.—will help remedy the defect.

SAVE NUTRIMENT IN ALFALFA

Rake Crop in Windrows Soon as Thoroughly Wilted—When Well Cured Haul to Mow.

Save all the nutriment in the alfalfa by raking it in windrows as soon as it is thoroughly wilted. After curing in this position for a while, the windrows should be turned over with the rake or tedder, and later raked into bunches and when well cured, hauled to stack or mow.

Transplant In the Fall.

In general the fall is the best time to plant trees and shrubs on the home grounds When planted in the fall, the plant is given an opportunity to spend its strength in producing new root growth rather than top growth Those new roots are the "feeling" roots and if well established will give added vigor to the plant the following year The protection and health of the root system is the most important consideration in plant growing.

There are some exceptions to this rule If the summer and fall seasons have been unusually dry and the plant has suffered from drouth, it may be best to wait until early spring to transplant, as plants may recuperate during the winter In some parts of the country late summer planting of evergreens has proved best but for Missouri early spring planting seems more satisfactory.

It is best to transplant all trees and shrubs in the fall It is possible to move plants after they have "leafed out" but there is some danger of over evaporation of moisture from the leaves and bark which will exhaust the strength of the roots The plant will then show wilt and spend its strength on new leaves instead of readjusting its roots To lessen the danger from evaporation it is always well to cut the tops back severely and if in leaf, the trunk of a tree should be wrapped with straw sphagnum moss to keep it moist Trees have been moved as late as June 1st in central Missouri without showing wilt, by using this method It is better to transplant early in the morning or late in the afternoon Rainy or cloudy days are the best ones in which to do planting Transplant after the leaves drop in the autumn or before they open in the spring Remove injured roots, broken branches, and cut back the tops Preserve the fine hair-like roots; they are the feeders, the others only serve as anchors Never allow the roots to dry out in the wind or sun Cover them with earth or wet straw Dig the hole much larger than the spread of the roots, and to not bend or crowd them Tamp the soil firmly and closely about the roots but leave about two inches of loose soil at the surface These planting rules are important A tree lives longer than a man; take time and care in planting it, and in general plant in the fall

Butter Tree of Tropics.

Mr. Yerby, the U S. consul at Sierra Leone, tells of a wonderful tropical tree called the shea, or butter tree, It furnishes the natives not only with nuts, which they highly prize, but with butter, which may become an article of commerce of importance, since it is already exported to Europe, where it is used in making artificial butter. This tree produces a nut covered with a soft pulp which is in turn covered with a smooth skin, easily removable when the nut ripens. This pulp is sweet and wholesome. About 60 per cent of the nut is butter, which is edible. The tree begins to bear when it is fifteen years old, and reaches its full capacity in twenty-five years. Barring jungle fires, a butter plantation is a long time and profitable investment. Chocolate manufacturers could easily absorb the product. Candles and soap can also be made of it. Trees that can produce butter, soap and candles are worth cultivating.

James W. Smith and Frank A. Averbeck, of Covington, were in Burlington last Friday, demonstrating the Delco Lighting Plant that is designed for furnishing light and power for rural homes. It is a very useful equipment and once installed it is doubtful if a house wife would do without it thereafter. It requires very little space, is clean and can be operated without trouble, and constitutes a complete electrical system for the residence and other buildings on the premises. Messrs. Smith and Averbeck will have a plant in operation at the Erlanger Fair this week, and it will be a pleasure to them if you will visit the plant and let them give you a demonstration.

Turn From the Silver Dollar.

The silver dollar has been detected in a westward movement, returning to haunt the communities in Nevada and elsewhere that dug it up and showered it upon the East as the coin of the realm

Comparatively few silver dollars are handled in Kansas City now The banks were the first to notice the waning popularity of the silver piece, and they have substituted for it the $1 bill

"We handle very few silver dollars," William Huttig, president of the National Reserve Bank, said "Practically all money of this denomination this bank handles is the $1 bill It is much easier to handle The habit is firmly fixed on Kansas City."

"The $1 bill habit became fixed on Kansas City through chance,' Henry C Schwitzgebel, secretary of the Commerce Trust Company, said "Several years ago the banks began having $1 bills shipped West because it was much cheaper than the shipment of silver dollars

"There are ten $1 bills in use here to every silver dollar."—Kansas City Star

Funck, of Paris, somewhat of a gardener, this year put in strawberry plants of the "ever-bearing" variety, and is now enjoying strawberries in September He recently gathered a large basket of berries from plants set out on April 9, and from which the first ripe fruit was plucked on May 12 He has gathered berries from those vines every week since May 12

State News.

Henderson, Ky—Tobacco growers who have cut and housed their crops are cultivating tobacco suckers which have grown wonderfully since the plants have been cut Tobacco buyers say they will give $2 per hundred pounds for suckers this season The suckers will be classed with trash tobacco Fearing frost many farmers have cut the suckers and are firing this second crop

R L. Drysdale shipped a carload of hogs that brought him more than $2,000 He has since shipped another car, but hasn't heard from it yet With the first car he tried out an experiment He "hogged" down a field of corn. He weighed the hogs when he turned them in the field and then again when he took them out, and they gained enough to make his corn bring $36 an acre—Crutchfield Cor in Fulton Wireless.

Sam Brown, a Tennessee tobacco grower, residing near Dukedom, has the distinction of bringing the first load of this year's crop of tobacco to town this season. None of the buyers here was expecting tobacco at this early a date and were not on the lookout for it But Johnny Wilson made the best bid on it and took it at 9½c and 4c More tobacco is expected to come in now in dribbles for the next few weeks, when the season will begin to open in full blast—Mayfield Messenger.

Not for many years has the potato crop in this vicinity been so small, Irish potatoes having reached the highest price known to many people here Most of the crops in this vicinity were a complete failure, there being too much rain early in the summer and then the drouth that followed, making them a failure The sweet potato crop is not nearly so good as usual and the drouth has ruined most of the late vegetables there being fewer truck wagons around, than for years before—Mayfield Times

Chief of Police Woodson McCord is in receipt of a letter from E B Hedges, of Paris, who was one of the victims of the pickpockets at the barbecue last Saturday, thanking him for the return of his purse, which was found with a number of others on the fair grounds and turned over to the police Mr. Hedges stated that the purse contained no money, as he carried his "roll" in his front trousers pocket The purse was only used for receipts, by which it was identified at the police headquarters—Winchester Sun.

Walter, the 8-year-old son of Mr and Mrs Sam Hall, who live on the second floor of the Smith property on Zachery Way, fell into an old well in the vacant lot adjoining the Beecher Smith department store building Monday morning The boy was passing thru the lot, which is usually used as a passway, and the earth gave way, letting him down into eighteen feet of water Luckily some one saw him when he went down and the little fellow managed to keep his head above the water till a rope could be lowered to him and he was brought to the surface No doubt had no one seen him when he first fell into the well he would have drowned before anyone would have discovered him The old well has since been filled up—Somerset Journal.

The section of Mercer county bordering on the Kentucky River opposite Brooklyn and known as Shaker Bend because of the proximity to the original Shaker settlement, abounding in snakes of enormous size, comes forward with a "hoot owl" story that for raptorial elucidation and nocturnal migrations puts the snakes crawling to their hiding places in the cliffs along the Kentucky River One night recently William Coghill, of that neighborhood, was aroused from his sleep, by the squawking of chickens in his hen house, and grabbing his trusty gun started for the poultry yard, where he expected to find "foultakers" stripping the chicken roost, when lo and behold a dark object that resembled a balloon noisely emerged from among the chickens and started sailing away, when Mr. Coghill brought the gun to his shoulder and discharged a load of shot at the flying creature On investigating the object of his marksmanship it was found to be a "hoot" owl that measured three and one-half feet from tip to tip of wings For years the people of that community had heard the woebegone "hoot, hoot" that emanated from the owls that made their home in the depth of the cavernous cliffs The oldest inhabitants remember of hearing the doleful "hoot, hoot" since their youthful days, as vouched for by Uncle Davy Goforth, of that section, who is now 82 years old Since the memory of the old residents of that locality owls have been the weather prognosticators for that territory Uncle Sam's weather bureau is not more truthful in forecasting the weather than the feathered and night wandering bird Their hoot signifies a change of weather in all degrees from gentle spring rains to cold and drifting snow.—Jessamine Journal

CULL ALL DEFORMED FOWLS

When They Reach Marketable Size Fatten and Sell Them—Keep Them Free From Vermin.

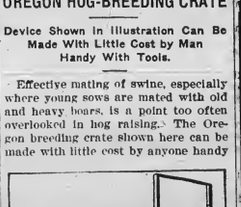
Handle the chicks, and market deformed birds as soon as they are of market size. Crooked backs, hip joints of unequal height, crooked toes, long beaks, combs with side springs, duck feet, off-colored eyes and a pronounced tendency to off-colored feathers cannot readily be detected without handling the birds. It is well to sew a band of red flannel, or mark with colored paint the legs of birds destined for the early market. A dab of paint on the wing bow is also good. Let these birds run with the others till about the size needed, and then pen and fatten. Many a sale can be made at the door if the chicks are cooped and ready. Keep them free from lice and growing every day, but get rid of them quickly.

DESTRUCTIVE TO THE SWINE

Scours In Pigs More Feared Than Outbreak of Cholera by Prominent Nebraska Hog Breeder.

Scours in pigs is declared by one of Nebraska's prominent hog raisers to be more destructive to the swine industry of the state than hog cholera. The causes are overfeeding, change in feed, decayed feed, lack of exercise, or dirty water. Sometimes filth in pens and bedding is an additional cause when it is taken into the pig's system from the sow's udder or from the navel. The college of agriculture says that the correction of these conditions is the first measure to be adopted, and that in case scouring has started, the sow's feed should be cut down to a small amount of oats or bran. When the trouble is corrected, the ration should be increased gradually.

CONTROL OF CABBAGE WORMS



Mixture of Air-Slaked Lime or Wood Ashes and Powdered Arsenate of Lead Is Favored.

Dust a mixture of one or two parts of air-slaked lime or sifted wood ashes and one part dry powdered arsenate of lead through a cheesecloth bag or apply with a blower. Apply while plants are wet with the dew, after each hard rain or once every week or ten days during the season of attack. Paris green can be used with 15 times its bulk of lime or ashes. A week or two before using the cabbage quit applying the poison, as a precaution against getting any appreciable amount of the poison in the portion of the cabbage eaten as human food. Practically all of the poison is removed in stripping the outer leaves. No one need be afraid to use this treatment.

OREGON HOG-BREEDING CRATE

Device Shown in Illustration Can Be Made With Little Cost by Man Handy With Tools.

Effective mating of swine, especially where young sows are mated with old and heavy boars, is a point too often overlooked in hog raising. The Oregon breeding crate shown here can be made with little cost by anyone handy with hammer and saw. The crate should be well made of strong material, however, as it is necessary to restrain the sow, hold her in an accessible position, and take away all danger of injury to the boar through slipping.—Farming Business.

FEEDING OF MOLTING FOWLS

Material Adaptable for Eggs Will Also Make Feathers—Some Oily Food Is Necessary.

The feed of molting hens should not differ greatly from that of laying hens. Both eggs and feathers are rich in nitrogen, so a food adaptable for eggs will also make feathers. However, the latter are richer in oil than eggs are, and some food of oily nature should be added to this ration to supply this want.

It has been conclusively proved that a liberal amount of sunflower, flaxseed or oil meal to the ration makes hens molt faster and leaves them in a stronger condition and with more vitality.

FAULTY SYSTEM OF FARMING

Cows Would Conserve Fertility of Soil and Convert Feed Into Food Products for Market.

One of the faults of our system of farming is that there are too few cows on farms. More cows would mean more wealth. The cows would save the wealth (soil fertility) that we already have and would convert our feed and pasture crops into food products for home use or for sale. Who ever heard of a dairyman or a farmer with several cows forced to mortgage his crops for supplies?

As ONE Sun Heats the Entire Earth—So ONE Register Heats Your Entire House

The Caloric way is Nature's way—most sensible, economical and healthful. No unsightly, expensive pipes and flues to cause fire danger, waste heat and clutter the cellar. The absence of pipes prevents overheating the cellar, hence produce is not spoiled. Its great heat radiation will save you at least 35% of your fuel.

PIPELESS CALORIC FURNACE (TRADE MARK)

The Original Patented Pipeless Furnace

There are three reasons for this big saving. 1st, The warm air reaches your rooms by nature's direct method of circulation and there are no pipes to absorb or resist the heat. 2nd, Our double ribbed firepot and specially patented combustion chamber produce perfect combustion, thus insuring thorough burning of the fuel and a much greater heating surface. 3rd, Our specially patented triple casing, insulated with two air spaces, prevents any heat from radiating into the basement. This is the only successful, patented, one-register furnace and no other furnace can claim these three big features. This means that you get all the heat from your fuel.

Sold Under Guarantee

Put the Caloric Pipeless Furnace in your house and give it a fair trial. Its successful operation is guaranteed and we'll make right any defect in material or workmanship. The Caloric firepot is guaranteed for five years by us and by the manufacturers, The Monitor Stove & Range Co., Cincinnati, O. See this furnace and get FREE book.

MOST POPULAR BREED

Size Is Quality That Recommends the Light Brahma.

Has No Superior Where Large and Slow Maturing Fowls Are Desired—Barred Where Egg Production Is Chief Item.

(By PROF. H L. KEMPSTER, Missouri College of Agriculture.)

The Light Brahma is the oldest and perhaps the best-known and most popular of the feather-legged chickens. Size is the quality that recommends the Light Brahma. Where large and slowly maturing fowls are desired, the Light Brahma has no superior, but the slowness of maturity is very objectionable in the pullets, which, together with the fact that they are not very heavy layers when matured, practically bars this breed where egg production is the chief item.

There is no other breed of fowls that has the stately appearance possessed by the Brahma. These fowls are close feathered like the Langshans, but are larger and not so long-legged. They are not as heavily feathered as the Cochins. They are very graceful in appearance and carry themselves in a stately manner. The back on both male and female is very long and broad. There should be a slight rise of the back with a broad sweep at the base of the tail. The birds should be erect and well placed on their legs. Abundant toe feathers is also a very desirable feature.

Taking the American Standard of Perfection as a guide, the following are the special qualifications and disqualifications of the Light Brahma fowls, when being judged according to the Standard of Perfection.

Special qualifications are: Cocks over three pounds, cockerels over two and a half pounds, hens and pullets over two ponnds less than standard weight. Vulture hocks also disqualify.

Light Brahma Hen, Owned by Missouri College of Agriculture.

Solid black feathers on the back; black spots in the web of feathers in the back, except stripes in the saddle on the males and at the base of the neck; or sinnks other than yellow should disqualify Light Brahmas.

The neck plumage should be white. The hackle should be white, the web of the feathers should have a solid greenish black strip extending down the middle of each feather, running parallel with the edge of the feather and tapering to a point near the end. The under-color should be either white, bluish white or slate. In the wings, the wing bows should be white except near the front. The primaries and secondaries should be black with white on the lqwer side extending to the quill. The remainder of the primaries and secondaries should be black. In the back the surface color should be white except at the base of the neck. The saddle should be white, the under-color can be either white, bluish white or slate.

The tail should be black. The tail coverts should be black; the lesser coverts should be black edged with white. The surface and under-color of the breast should be white. The body and fluff should be white except under the wings, where it may be white, bluish white, or slate, the same as the under color.

DAIRY NOTES

To produce good milk, cows must be comfortable.

Calf raising is an important part of the dairyman's business.

Cleanliness and carefulness are the keystone in successful dairying.

The dairy barn should be roomy, clean, dry, light and well ventilated.

While feed is an important factor in successful dairying it is not the only thing.

Cannot expect calves to be better than their sire—that is why we need the best.

Always handle cows carefully. The cow will more than repay any kindness shown her.

After the calf is six weeks old there is little danger of it getting indigestion or scours.

It may save time to drive the cows to the barn at a trot, but it is a poor and ill-timed economy.

Keeping the calves separate also prevents the calves from sucking each other, a disagreeable habit.

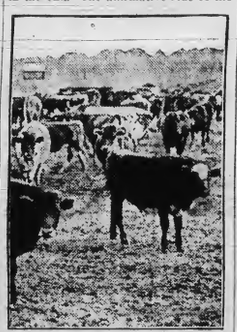
Keep the calves separate for the first two months so that if anything goes wrong with them it will be immediately detected.



HORSES PIGS and CATTLE

RAISING STEERS FOR MARKET

Feeder of Seventeen Years' Experience Says Best Grades Are Always in Good Demand.

Does it pay to raise purebred steers for the market? Some say yes, while others answer in the negative. But an Iowa man says it pays to get a good start if a feeder intends to make a good finish of the feeding experiment.

This feeder, who was recently on the market with stock, went on record in boosting purebred cattle for feeding purposes, as his 17 years of experience that the good grades are always wanted, and are the largest money-makers in the end. The affirmative side of the question has a strong booster in this gentleman, who has been practicing what he preaches for many years past.

Each year he has been in the habit of feeding a bunch of purebred baby beeves for the summer market, and each time has been successful in getting out on the venture. At his farm he maintains a drove of Hereford cattle and aside from the regular breeding business, he raises a drove of steers for the killers each year.

Many feeders think that purebreds are for breeding and most anything will do for the killers, but cases of this sort argue well for cattle of good blood to be finished for the market.

The feeder who recently made these remarks is emphatic in saying that it pays to raise purebreds for feeding purposes, and his advice to young men just getting into the live-stock business is to get a start on a purebred herd as soon as possible. A good start shortens the road to a successful ending in a business of this sort.

FLEECED LAMBS MAKE GAINS

Old Idea Regarding Recuperation Sustained by Test at Nebraska State Experiment Station.

The old idea that a shorn lamb will regain in a week or ten days the weight of the wool removed from it at shearing time was vindicated recently in an experiment at the Nebraska state experiment station. Five lots of 12 lambs each were used in the experiment, each lot fed a little differently. As the lambs were too heavy to hold for the experiment, there was an average loss of five cents per animal, but the fact that the lambs did especially well after the fleece was removed proved the old theory. The daily gain was .51 of a pound.

PROPER SHELTER FOR LAMBS

Animals Fed in Well-Ventilated Barn Make Same Gains as Those Kept in Open Sheds.

In a series of tests in feeding western lambs, the Indiana experiment station found that lambs fed in a well-ventilated barn at the same amount of feed and made the same gain in weight as those fed in an open shed.

The profit per lamb was 94 cents per head in a barn, as compared with $1.09 per head in an open shed.

Although feed was high in price, the margin in value of feeding and fat lambs was sufficient to insure a satisfactory profit on the operation.

FERTILITY LOSS IN PASTURES

Steady Drain of Phosphorus From Land Where Sheep Are Grazed Is Seen by Expert.

(By DR. CHARLES E. THORNE, Ohio Experiment Station.)

Even when permanent pastures are grazed by so perfect a manure producer as the sheep, it is evident that in the bones of the young stock grown upon it and sent to market there must be a steady drain of phosphorus and lime, which must ultimately become manifest in reduced production, and experience has shown that the use of phosphatic fertilizers upon such pastures produces a marked increase in the production of grass.

Until you serve it, you will never know how much pleasure coffee can give

A million other women have learned what good coffee means—they have solved this question in their homes for all time.

They know now that to get good coffee, the coffee itself must be right.

There are hundreds of varieties of coffee grown. The coffee itself must be put up by men who know coffee. Arbuckles' Coffee is. It is put up by Arbuckle Bros., the greatest coffee merchants in the world. There is more of it sold than any other coffee—that is why they can afford to give you the biggest value for your money.

And no matter how good coffee itself is, if it isn't well taken care of, it makes a poor drink. Arbuckles' Coffee is put up in sealed, dust-proof packages, carefully wrapped to protect it from moisture, dirt and store odors. It arrives in your kitchen with all its original strength and flavor.

Have in your home the enjoyment of drinking the coffee which, of all the coffees in America, is the most popular! Solve your coffee problem in the identical way a million other women have. Serve Arbuckles' Coffee tomorrow—know how much pleasure coffee can give.

USELESS ENGLISH SPARROW.

Philadelphia shade trees are infested with caterpillars and though there are millions of English sparrows, the birds do not touch the worms. Sparrows are themselves a nuisance, but every time it is proposed to exterminate them the people who regard everything in the bird line as sacred rise in protest and declare that they should be spared because they kill insects. Now the sparrow haters point to the undisturbed worms and ask why it is not a good time to make war against the useless sparrows, says Indianapolis Star. These birds were brought to this country, it is said, on the theory that they were destroyers of insect pests, but as a matter of fact they are of far less value in this direction than a score of native birds that in many quarters are not protected at all. If sparrows are of any use whatever, they have never demonstrated the fact. If they were driven out of every community and encouragement given to other more desirable birds, the interests of both birds and people would be served.

A Canadian soldier who has been returned to his home, after being kept for some months as a wounded prisoner in a German hospital, was permitted to retain his crutches, which are of great interest to his home people as an example of German ingenuity. They are adjustable so that they can be utilized as conveniently by a giant eight feet tall as by a midget. In addition to their adjustable height, the crutches are exceptionally light in weight and are also strong enough to bear any reasonable strain. It is said that several large factories in Germany are now working full speed turning out these crutches to meet the demand. An interesting fact is that many of the workers in the factory are war cripples of some kind and that the perfection of the crutches is largely due to suggestions made by men who have to use them.

Some 30,000 proposed laws are embodied in the bills introduced at every session of the United States congress, says Houston Post. Not quite 2 per cent of them become laws but they absorb the time of the body to the exclusion of important legislation. They are worse than a waste of energy. They confuse the voters to no purpose. The English parliament, operating under a different system, has to consider only some 500 bills, most of which have real value and are passed in some form. The United States is fast becoming a nation of lawmakers. Law is being substituted for religion, for home training, for business honor. We could well blot 90 per cent of our laws off the statute books. The nation and the state have too much law.

During the six months ending with June 1, 1916, there were 1,432 labor disputes reported to the bureau of labor statistics. In May there were 396 strikes begun. There are as yet no statistics for June but the hot months are keeping up their usual pace and there is little doubt the number for that month will exceed the May record. There is just one way to be safe in hot weather and that is to keep cool. Half of all strikes are caused by hot heads—either of strikers or employees.

MEXICAN PROBLEM AN INHERITANCE.

In the minds of Republican politicians and editors there is considerable confusion with respect to modern American Mexican history. Some of them seem to think that the Mexican problem is the creation of the Democratic administration, that it is a "Wilson problem." The truth is it is Amer ica's problem, and it was as much a Taft problem as it has been a Wilson problem, and in the event of Mr. Hughes' election it would be a Hughes problem. It is very likely that as Mr. Wilson handled the problem much as Mr. Taft did, Mr. Hughes' method of handling it would not differ materially from that of Mr. Wilson.

Let us take a glance at the record. Mr. Taft became president on March 4, 1909. Within 20 months after Mr. Taft's inauguration, trouble in serious form broke out in Mexico, and during all of the balance of his administration, this trouble continued.

On November 8, 1910, there was rioting in Mexico City. The American flag was destroyed, the windows of American residences and business houses were broken. A street car containing American school children was stoned and the son of the United States ambassador was assaulted. These disturbances continued during November 9th.

On November 10 there was rioting in Guadalajra. The American flag was burned and windows of American banks and stores were broken. These disturbances continued two or three days.

On November 10, 1910, there was rioting at various points in Mexico. American consulates were wrecked and the records of the consulates were destroyed.

On November 18, 1910, the Madero revolution broke out and from that date on there was general disorder in Mexico.

On March 7, 1911, twenty thousand United States regulars were mobilized along the Mexican border.

On April 13, 1911, Mexican forces took Agua Prieta, opposite Douglas, Arizona. In Douglas Arizona, three Americans were killed and five were wounded.

On April 4, 1911, Mexicans again attacked Agua Prieta, half the town of Douglas, Arizona, was under fire of Mexican guns. On that occasion seven Americans were wounded, Governor Sloan of Arizona called upon President Taft for the protection of Americans. The president replied declining to take military action.

On October 10 and 11, 1911, Mexican rebels attacked and captured Juarez. One thousand American troops patrolled the American border and in El Paso, Texas, five Americans were killed and seventeen wounded.

On May 12th, 1911, Secretary of State Knox sent to Mexico City a note denying that the U. S. intended to intervene.

On March 29th 1912 rifles were sent to the American legation in Mexico City for the protection of American citizens. American colonists in Northern Mexico flocked across the border, and there was great damage to American property by the Mexican mobs.

On April 14, 1912, the state department warned Madero and Orozco against further outrages to American lives and property.

That all occurred prior to the presidential election of 1912.

On December 4, 1912, President Taft, in a message to congress described his Mexican policy, which was practically the same as Mr. Wilson's has been, and he called it the policy of "patient non-interventionn."

On February 9, 1913, there was an uprising against the Mexican government in Mexico City. Many days of street fighting followed Several hundred Mexican civilians were killed, including two American women.

It was in February, during President Taft's administration, that Madero was killed and Huerta demanded recognition; but there was no recognition of Huerta and no intervention under the Taft administration.

On March 15, 1911, a few days more than two years after President Taft was inaugurated and about two years before his term expired, President Taft addressed a letter to the chief of staff, and in that letter he declined to do the very things Republicans are now denouncing President Wilson for not doing.

Following is an extract from President Taft's letter:

"The assu mption by the press that I contemplate intervention on Mexican soil to protect American lives ro property, is of course gratitous, because I seriously doubt whether I have such authority...Indeed, as you know, I have already declined, without Mexican consent, to order a troop of cavalry to protect the breakwater we are constructing just across the border in Mexico at the mouth of the Colorado river to save the Imperial Valley, although the insurrectos have scattered the Mexican troops and were taking our horses and supplies and frightening our workmen away."

On April 17, 1911, the governor of Arizona sent a telegram to the president, reading in part as follows:

"As a result of today's fighing across the international line, but within gunshot range of the heart of Douglas, five Americans were wounded on this side of the line ....In my judgment radical measures are needed to protect our innocent people...It would be impossible to safeguard the people of Douglas unless the town be vacated."

To this telegram President Taft replied as follows:

"The situation might justify me in ordering our troops across the border...but if I take this step, I must face the possibility of great er resistance and greater bloodshed, and also the danger of having our motives misconstrued and misrepresented and of thus inflaming Mexican popular indignation...It is impossible to forsee or reckon the consequences of such a course; and we must use the greatest self-restraint to avoid it. I cannot therefore order the troops at Douglas to cross the border, but I must ask you and the local authorities in case the same danger occurs, to direct the people of Douglas to place themselves where bullets cannot reach them, and thus avoid casualty."

The same difference between the Wilson policy and the Taft policy was that Mr. Wilson called it "watchful waiting," while Mr. Taft called it "patient non-intervention." (See Message 1912.)

On November 26, 1910, the Outlook, which became famous by reason of the fact that Theodore Roosevelt was its contributing editor, had an editorial calling attention to "the anti-American demonstrations which have lately taken place in Mexico," in which "great student demonstrations were made, mobs broke windows in buildings occupied by Americans, attacked newspaper offices favorable to Americans and attacked street cars containing Americans."

On March 25, 1911, the Outlook said that "events in Mexico are very confusing" and on April 22, it declared that Mexico presented "a serious state of affairs."

It was on April 29, 1911, that Senator Stone, a Democrat, insisted that President Taft be authorized to employ whatever force might be necessary to restore order in Mexico. Senator Root, now one of President Wilson's most bitter critics, said that a threat of force would be "to reverse the policy of the United States and take a step backward in the path of civilization." Senator Lodge, Republican, and another bitter critic of the Wilson administration, said that President Taft would not ask for force until our diplomatic methods had failed.

It was on April 29, 1911, during the Taft administration, that the New York American (Hearst's) said "through a laggard and chicken-hearted president. American threats of intervention have become the laughing stock of the insurgents and regulars alike."

It was in February, 1913, during the Taft administration, that the New York American (Hearst's) referring to the Mexican situation, said, "One or more of the American citizens have been slain" and it asked "Does anyone think that Germany would have endured this outrage for a day? Does any man believe that English patriotism would not already be bombarding Vera Cruz for a similar outrage upon English citizens?"

The Mexican situation under the Taft administration was so serious that in its issue of September 13, 1912, the Baton Rouge, La., Times said: "The American flag is only a rag in Mexico." El Paso, Texas, and other border papers expressed similar sentiments.

All of which goes to show that the Mexican problem is an American problem rather than a Democratic problem and that it was as much a problem under Taft as it is under Wilson, and would be as much a problem under Hughes as under Wilson or Taft.

REASONS FOR BUILDING SILO

Professor Skinner of Purdue Tells Why Every Farmer Should Have Huge Receptacle.

Ten reasons why every farmer who keeps live stock should have a silo, written by Professor J. H. Skinner, of Purdue University, should afford some selling argument for dealers. They are as follows:

1. The silo preserves the palatability and succulence of the green corn plant for winter feeding.

2. It helps to make use of the entire corn plant.

3. The silo increases the live stock capacity of the farm.

4. Silage is a good summer feed when pastures are short.

5. Because of the small amount of ground space required by the silo it is an economical means of storing forage.

6. The silo prevents waste of corn stalks, leaves and husks, which contain about two-fifths of the feeding value of the corn plant.

7. The silo located near the feed manger is an assurance of having feed near at hand in stormy as well as fair weather.

8. The silo assists in reducing the cost of grains in fattening cattle and sheep.

9. Silage greatly increases the milk flow during the winter season and decreases the cost of production.

10. There are no stalks to bother in the manure when corn is put into the silo.

Predicts a Hard Winter.

W. C. Rouse, Kidville weather prognosticator, says the approaching winter will be a very hard one.

KEEP COWS WELL FED.

Milk Flow Won't Come Back If Cut Down by Grass Shortage.

During the hot weather of July and August the milk flow of the average herd drops down nearly half. The heat and the condition of the pastures common at that time of the year are the main causes of this drop. The flies generally blamed are of much less importance than other conditions. The real cause is the failure of the animals to eat sufficient feed. Poor pastures, heat, and flies may all contribute to this result. It will be observed that during the hot weather the cows will graze but little and come to the barn at night evidently hungry. To produce three gallons of milk a day a cow has to gather at least 100 or 125 pounds of grass. If the pastures are short and the weather hot, generally this much grass will not be gathered and soon the milk flow goes down.

The influence of these summer conditions cannot be removed but may be improved. The main thing is to see that the cows do not lack food. They should be in the pasture at night and during the earliest, coolest part of the day. If the pasture is short feed silage or green crops. It is well known to all experienced with dairy cattle that when the milk flow goes down once for lack of feed it is impossible to bring it back to where it was before by better feeding later. To get a high production of milk during the year the cow must be kept at a high level of production all the time. For this reason do not neglect the cows during the hot weather and expect them to come back strong again when conditions become better in the fall. Keep them going all the time.—C. H. Eckles, Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station.

SAVE $2,500.000 EGG LOSS

Should Be Given as Good and Careful Marketing as Butter—Remedy Is Low Temperature.

From a quarter to a half of the eggs laid in the Middle West during the summer time are a total loss amounting to $2,500,000 for the State of Missouri alone. This may easily be saved under ordinary farm conditions, according to the test recently made at the Missouri agricultural experiment station. Eggs should be given practically as good care and careful marketing as butter, although they do not show the effects of poor handling quite as plainly. Any temperature of more than 70 degrees is almost sure to cause the development of germs, molds or young chicks inside the shell.

The principal remedy, then, is a reasonably low temperature and marketing the eggs at least once a week. They should be gathered every day and put in a cool, clean, sweet cellar, or some similar cool place, as quickly as possible. They must be kept away from flies and out of musty basements and, if no other cool place is available, they should be placed in a spring or springhouse, or lowered in a bucket into a well, just as butter often is.

When Eggs are Highest.

How to get eggs in late fall and early winter when they are highest is a serious problem with most poultrymen.

Taking it for granted that the pullets were hatched early and have made good growth during the summer season, we would get the entire flock of spring pullets, yearlings and all into winter quarters in September. That is we would have the poultry house and yards put in order for winter, then, so there will be no rearrangement to disturb the flock or in any way disarrange its daily routine or habits during late October, November and December, when we most desire the eggs.

One of the principal factors for securing a high egg production in the poultry flock is exercise. A hen kept closely cooped will not lay as many eggs during a season; she will take on fat instead and become unhealthy. Give the hens plenty of range—and then get a larger basket in which to carry the eggs to market.

A Large Moccasin.

Georgetown, Sept. 28.—Lewis Finley, Jr., aged four years, son of Circuit Court Clerk Lewis Finley, had a narrow escape. While playing in the yard of Master Commissioner Frank M. Thomason he called to Mrs. Thomason to see what he had found, and to her surprise it was a large moccasin that measured five feet and four inches long. The snake had made its escape from a street fair carnival that exhibited here in August. Mr. Milliran Fleming had a few weeks ago killed a rattlesnake that had made its escape from the same carnival, and he also killed the moccasin which threatened the life of young Finley.

Good Roads a Personal Responsibility.

Perhaps no other feature of civic reform or improvement of recent years has attracted so much attention as has that of road building. All over our broad land, from ocean to ocean, from the lakes to the gulf, the wave of enthusiasm is rolling. The people are realizing that they must have better roads, and the machinery of government in its taxing capacity is being ever more and more strained to meet this demand.

But while there is a certain responsibility resting upon the State in the maintenance of our highways, we are in danger of forgetting that an even greater responsibility rests upon us, individually, as citizens. The reason why we sometimes lose sight of this responsibility is that we Americans have gotten into the habit of working out all such matters through the medium of taxation. If we want a new road opened, we levy a tax. If we want an old road macadamized, we tax some more. Is a bridge to be built? We impose another tax. We tax and we keep on taxing, and this regardless of the fact that we all know that the hardest money to give up is that which is paid in taxes. Many a man will come to town and spend in a day enough to pay his yearly taxes and think nothing of it. But he will sweat drops of blood, as it were, when the taxgatherer rounds him up.

We depend too much upon taxes. We should depend more upon individual and personal effort. A lively neighborhood interest in good roads is worth all of the taxes you can wring from unwilling pocketbooks. A determination by a united citizenship of a county that their roads shall excel is worth more than all of the road commissioners in existence. Road commissioners work thru devious ways to reach their object. The united sentiment of a people works direct to the object. It determines what is wanted and then takes the most direct route to accomplish its ends.

Do you favor better roads in this community? Then go to work and arouse a healthy community sentiment that will demand them. When that is accomplished good roads will be the result.

And just a few words more. Realize your OWN responsibility. Say to yourself, "the roads of this community belong partly to ME, and I owe a duty to them." Don't depend upon a benevolent government, national, State or county, but shoulder your own responsibility. Then you will be in a fair way to get your neighbor to do likewise.

THE THRIFTY FARMER.

Financial journals have recently taken up the cudgels for the farmer, dissipating the growing suspicion that the tillers of the soil have been succumbing to the temptation of sudden prosperity and burning up much gasoline in joy-riding.

The evidence that has been gathered shows the farmer has lost none of his thrift. While it is true that the purchases of automobiles for the rural districts are enormous, it has been found that many of the farmers are using the motors for farming purposes.

The rural demand for merchandise and material is about normal, considering the buying power of the farmer, but his standard of living has advanced in pace with the improved standards of farming.

A banker dealing in farm mortgages points out that the supply of mortgages is about as usual, but that more persons want to purchase them. The only alleged extravagance that has been uncovered against the farmer is to be found in the sudden increase in the automobile trade in the farming sections, and the financiers have definitely concluded that the tillers of the soil are saving more in time than the cost of upkeep and gasoline. The farmer is as thrifty as ever. He is turning the luxuries of the city into the necessities of the agricultural section.

—Washington Post.

Hog Pastures.

Pigs make the cheapest gains on pastures. Trials at the North Dakota experiment station indicate that brood sows running on good pasture and nursing litters will do as well when receiving one to one and a half pounds of grain per each 100 pounds of live weight of sow, as sows in a dry lot receiving two and a half pounds per grain per day each 100 pounds of live weight. The pasture just about cuts the feed cost in two. The pasture alone does not furnish enough feed for either the brood sow with litter or for the weaned pigs. They should be fed some grain, so as to make a rapid growth. In this way, the spring pigs can be ready for market before real cold weather sets in.

Alfalfa, clover, bromus and winter rye make the earliest pastures. When these have not been provided, early spring seeding of such grains as oats and barley or rape are the next best thing.—North Dakota Experiment Station.

MAKE THE HOME BRIGHT

Dark Colors For Walls and Woodwork Have a Depressing Effect.

The interior decorations of a man's home may have much to do with his domestic happiness or unhappiness, as the case may be, according to the secretary of the International Association of Master House Painters and Decorators. The depressing effect of dark colors in wood finish and wall paper has wrecked homes which would have been happy had the colors been bright, is the opinion of this expert.

"Dark colors in home decorations are like dark, gloomy days in their effect on people, he said. "It is well known that gloomy days are commonly known to the police as 'suicide days.' There are many more suicides, murders and other crimes on rainy days. A man owes it to his family to surround it with bright rooms which will catch all the sunlight there is and turn it into domestic happiness.

"A room done in dark colors has the same effect on persons entering it as utter darkness. One's senses cannot be so active as in bright surroundings, and there is a loss of buoyancy that breeds grouches, with all their disastrous results. Bright, clean, open minds are the sure result of bright surroundings."—Kansas City Star.

Discipline in School.

The schools of the State are in worse condition today than they were twenty years ago, when we consider their discipline and efficiency. Today the schools of the small towns and of the rural districts are taught by girls and boys and boys, very few of whom are graduates or who expect to make teaching a profession. Twenty years ago in the rural schools most grown, seriously determined to get an education; today the attendance is small and consists only of young pupils who have but little of the spirit of education in them, and, as a rule, but little is taught them of the great problems of life and lessons are assigned and recited as a matter of routine work with but little life and purpose in them. Each lesson should be assigned as a builder and carefully prepared, recited and reviewed, bringing out the salient points. If students fail to thoroughly prepare lessons then a system of lectures and chastisement should be put in force that will arouse the entire class to a realization of the purpose of lessons and school work and its relation to their future as well as presents success. Teachers and students should be given to understand that school work is a business proposition from which is expected to come trained citizens, and successful ones, that it is no social gathering out of which children get fun and teachers pin money.

Boys and girls as teachers fail to get the work out of the pupils that is necessary for advancement. Pupils should be required to do a certain amount of work at night and to bring up lessons thoroughly prepared for recitation. Unless this is done teachers have not done their duty and the work of the average child in school will be a failure. No work will amount to much unless done thoroughly and in a businesslike way with an end in view.

Out of the fifty cent State levy, over one-half goes for school purposes and millions of dollars of it are being thrown away on account of inefficient work done in the school room.—Owen County Democrat.

Mexican Situation.

Nicholasville—Dr. G. B. Wenton, of Nashville, Tenn., who has spent the greater part of the last fifteen years in Mexico and knows Carranza well, made an interesting address to the M. E. Conference on the Mexican situation, putting it in an entirely new light. At the end of his address he invited questions and was asked about President's policy in Mexico. He said he was sorry that question was asked, as it savored of politics, but he would say that Wilson's policy was perfect in Mexico. Carranza did not want war with the United States. Villa he knew could have got more than 500 followers, but Villa would never be captured. He regretted the garbled reports sent out by newspapers from the border.

Scientific Proof of Maxwell Fuel Economy

In a test made by David L. Gallup, M. E., Professor of Gas Engineering, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, a stock Maxwell Touring Car made from 23 to 33.7 miles per gallon of gasoline at speeds ranging from 10 to 35 miles per hour. We reproduce a letter from Professor Gallup concerning this test.

DAVID L. GALLUP, M. E.
Consulting Engineer

Sept. 1st, 1916

Maxwell Motor Co. Inc.,
Detroit, Michigan.

Gentlemen:-

I beg leave to submit the enclosed blue print giving the results of an economy test made on a 1917 Stock Maxwell Touring Car, furnished by your Boston representatives.

The curve is self explanatory and needs no discussion other than the statement that the carburetor, which was stock, was adjusted to give the best combination of power, flexibility, speed and economy, for such conditions of touring as would ordinarily be encountered.

In tabular form the results (taken from the curve sheet) are as follows:

SPEED (Miles per hour)	ECONOMY (Miles per gallon)
35	23.0

Respectfully submitted,

DLG/K

Deferred Payments If Desired

NOTE that no unusual means were employed to get these results. The car used was taken from stock; the test was made with a full load and with top and windshield up; the regular Maxwell carburetor was used.

Any Maxwell car is capable of giving this same economy in gasoline consumption.

Maxwell operating economy matches its economy in first cost, making it The World's Greatest Motor Car Value.

State News.

Some late tobacco in Woodford county was injured by frosts.

Practically every stick of tobacco raised in Bourbon county this season, is in the barns, although a few scattering crops have not yet been cut on account of shortage of labor.

Last week was one of the worst on tobacco in Montgomery county since it was set out in the spring. Several frosts with a slight freeze on one morning, caused considerable damage to the crop in many places, and a good portion of the crop in low lands was blackened badly and seriously hurt.

Reports from various sections of Fayette county indicate that the majority of the farmers who raise tobacco have it safely housed. The recent frosts, three of which came in succession, of course, did some damage to the unhoused weed, especially in the low places, but the loss suffered was not as great as at first expected.

Mrs. Nellie Lindsay Hume, of Ringland, Okla., has secured leases on about four thousand acres of land in the White's Run vicinity and is giving citizens of Carroll county an opportunity to invest in a company she is organizing. Having spent much time in the oil fields of Oklahoma she is enthusiastic with the indications of gushers.—Carrollton News.

Winchester.—Corn cutting is well under way and the corn crop is one of the best ever raised. Frost damaged some of the late corn. Wheat sowing will begin about the first of October. Judging from present indications there will be about an average crop sown to wheat this year and much attention will be given the preparation of the soil before sowing.

Frankfort, Sept. 29.—Delay until the prisoner indicted passes the age of seventeen does not give the circuit court jurisdiction of the offense, said the Court of Appeals, reversing the Nelson circuit court in the case of John Mattingly, convicted of burning a hay stack. He was under seventeen when indicted, and the court said the Juvenile court had jurisdiction.

Cynthiana, Ky., Sept. 29.—County Game Warden D. J. Hughes this week destroyed five dams and fish traps in the main Licking river between Claysville and the mouth of Cedar creek. Mr. Hughes was informed that some of the traps had been in operation for many years, and one of them for 75 years. A number of charges of dynamite were used to blow up sections of the dams.

Reports vary as to the damage done to tobacco by the recent frosts in Kentucky some places reporting it as very severe and others as being light. Some counties report that the ripe tobacco was unharmed, but that some which had not matured was hardly worth cutting. Last year the first frosts occurred about October 8th, and this year the first frost was noted on September 16.

Hickman, Sept. 29.—Altho it is very early in the season and the crops are only beginning to move, the scarcity of cars is being felt in this section already, and for the last few days it has been very hard to secure cars, the demand not being nearly filled. This is being felt by all trades, manufacturers, local shippers and cotton dealers. Much cotton has been shipped to Memphis and Dyersburg on flat cars.

Paris, Sept. 29.—The champion specimens of tobacco in Bourbon county, according to the tests applied by tobacco men, are on the farm of "Dock" Hill, who resides on the Ruddles Mill pike, near Paris. Mr. Hill has three plants not yet budded out, which stand over eight feet in height and has from fifty-six to sixty-four leaves to the plant. Mr. Hill is extremely proud of his plants and intends to send them to the tobacco show at Lexington.

The Madison county tobacco crop has been practically all cut and housed. As was forecasted, the yield as a whole has been unusually good and the weight and quality of the leaf very good. A great many growers had trouble in securing sufficient barn room their yield producing more than was expected and the leaf so large. In some instances, sixteen hundred sticks to the acre were cut and the stalk was as high as a mans head, making it very hard to cut and handle.

Tobacco cutting in Anderson co., is about over, corn cutting commenced in some parts but as the larger portion of the crop is not ripe enough, cutting will not commence in earnest until next week. It is looking extremely well, except where there has not been very seasonable weather, but altogether the crop is good and will yield as much as the crop of 1912. The growth of broom corn has been very successful to the few farmers who undertook to grow it this year.

Paris.—Cutting of hemp has been completed and, altho the quality is not quite as good as the record crop of last year, the acreage is a good deal larger, and Bourbon county farmers will probably receive more for their crop than at the big price of last year. Prospects for a good corn crop are better than at any time since mid-summer, when it was feared that the crop would be cut in half by the drouth. It is now thought that the quantity per bushel will be almost as large as the average, and it is certain that the acreage will be larger than the usual average for this grain. Plowing for winter wheat is going on steadily, altho a good rain would be a great help in putting the ground in better condition for breaking and harrowing.

When Buying Seed

Look for the best not the "Cheapest." "Cheap" seed is dear at any price. You can get all the weed seed you want for nothing.

The farmers in this county have been afforded a splendid opportunity to prepare for the winter which will soon be upon them. It is true the corn crop in the county is short and some tobacco was damaged by hail and frost, but the producers will come across as usual with plenty for all. The people of Boone county have never experienced actual want, and when they do other localities will be in bad.

County Road Engineer Goodridge and Engineer Arnold were down on Riddell's Run, one day last week, making a survey of a proposed change in a public road along and through the lands of W. L. Presser and H. O. Adams. The condition of the road from where it is desired to take it has been very unsatisfactory to the public for a long time, but until recently no agreement could be to the location of the change. Rural mail route No. 2 from Burlington goes over that road.

Last Saturday our peaceful town was invaded by a band of gypsies. These sons and daughters of Romany flocked into the stores and shops taking everybody and everything by storm. They professed to be fortune tellers, but proved themselves fakirs by using this as a blind to cover their petty pilfering. They were closely followed by the town marshall to see that no depredations of consequence were committed. They left town before night and we were glad to pass them on.—Butler Reformer.

The patrol system of maintaining highways has been adopted in some parts of the country with good results. Under the patrol system when a highway is constructed or improved loads of crushed stone or gravel are hauled and placed in piles at short intervals along the roadway then some one is given employment in keeping up a certain amount of road. When a spot in the road begins to show signs of wear the man employed to look after it repairs it with the sand or gravel which is always on hand. The best time for doing this is immediately following heavy showers, as all low places and holes are easily located then.

Carlisle, Ky., Sept. 28.—Harrison Lowe, of Nicholas county, was today indicted by the grand jury in the Nicholas circuit court on a charge of murder. The charge is the result of 11-year-old Edgar Williams being shot and killed near here about July 1. Lowe was charged with the shooting and arrested and has since been in jail here. His trial has been assigned for Friday, October 8th. This makes the third indictment, in which the charge is murder, to be assigned for trial at this term of circuit court.

Self Defense.

"I was in the office when I saw Coon coming toward me from the locker room. He said something to me and put his hand over his hip pocket. I thought he was going to draw a revolver, so I immediately drew mine and commenced firing."

This is the statement of a man who says he had purchased a revolver with the intention of defending himself against a fellow-employe.

The man who buys a pistol with the intention of defending himself nearly always sees the victim make some movement which indicates, to a man who has had his finger on the trigger, that a weapon is to be drawn.

Jurors sympathize profoundly with the nervous alertness, the watchful foresight of the man who bought a pistol as a weapon of defense. The Criminal court records are clogged with verdicts of acquittal in cases in which the man who was killed did not intend to draw a weapon, and had no weapon in his pocket, but, nevertheless, made a movement which convinced the man who did have a pistol that the time had come for using it.

A man has from a half dozen to a dozen pockets in which a weapon might be carried. He carries in them many things not menacing to life, such as handkerchiefs, keys, change, cigars, papers. But if he undertakes to get any of these things out of his pocket in the presence of the man who is ready to defend himself he does so at peril of his life. He need not expect that the jury of his peers who sit in the murder case growing out of his death by violence will sympathize with his indiscretion. Jurors sympathize with the man who is adequately prepared and ready at the drop of the hat, or when somebody seems about to drop a hat, to cut loose a stream of lead in self-defense. Jurors are inclined to allow a man great latitude in self-defense. He may defend himself against something which nobody without a pistol in his pocket and his mind made up in self-defense could have imagined as being about to occur.

"I do not know what the shooting was about. It must have been a mistake," said the victim when he was dying.

But jurors make allowance for the mistake of the man who has intende to defend himself; who has bought a pistol, and whose snakp judgment is no quicker than his "gun."—Courier Journal.

While returning home with an auto party Sunday evening, when near Bronson, Will Bradley discovered a large copperhead snake crossing the road in front of his machine. Stearing the machine accordingly he ran over the reptile, which somewhat impeded its progress. He then alighted and killed the snake, which proved to be one of the prettiest specimens of the copperhead family ever seen in this section. Being a female, its head was as bright as burnished copper, while the underneath portion of its body was almost equally as bright. Its back and sides were covered with the most beautiful spots, and its fangs with which it delivered its deadly bite, were extraordinarily long.—Morehead Mountaineer.

Owensboro, Sept. 28.—G. C. Speer Banking Commissioner, has filed suit in the circuit court at Hartford against all the stockholders of the McHenry Deposit Bank, to recover from each a sum equal to the stock held, for the purpose of paying the depositors. He alleges that the assets in the hands of the special deputy will not be sufficient to pay them.

Maysville, Sept. 28.—Barry Renaker, a prominent citizen of Cynthiana, was given from two to three years in the penitentiary by a jury in the circuit court. Renaker was charged with employing Eneas Williams, a negro, to burn Renaker's turkey pens and refrigerating plant to get the insurance. Williams was brought here from the penitentiary, where he was serving time for burning the building, and testified that Renaker employed him to do the job.

Owensboro, Sept. 28.—A very heavy wind from the southeast prevailed in Owensboro all day yesterday, much damage being done, especially in the country, both to tobacco in the field and up the house as the wind had a tendency to dry out the weed very fast, and while in a green condition its market value is seriously affected. Reports from all over the county say that acres of corn have been damaged. The wind also played havoc with telephone and telegraph wires. Trouble was reported from all parts of Daviess county.

Sherman Burton, of Mill Springs, near Nancy, knowing our fondness for anything pertaining to early times in our good old state, has very kindly taken the trouble to bring to the office of the News an interesting relic of the "olden times." It is a cast anvil, formerly the property of "Uncle Abe" Burton, and the ownership can be traced back about 200 years. It is in an excellent state of preservation, and if the modern blacksmith were skillful enough he could still use the molds in its sides for making spoons, bowls and dippers, as well as the grooves for making different sizes of rods. When one considers the methods of transportation in those days in the hills of "Old Kaintuc" the wonder arises that it ever got here, and the many uses to which it was intended to be put shows the disadvantages under which our hardy forefathers labored. Mr. Burton has consented to leave it on exhibition at the News office for a few days and we will be glad to have our readers drop in and see it. He also brought some fossils from the creek bed near his house which made our geological editor declare he was going to Nancy to stay a month of Sundays.—Somerset News.

DOWN IN SWEET OWEN.

Owen News-Herald.

Over one hundred automobiles in Owenton Monday. The court house square resembled a city garage in a country town.

Postmaster Doty bought 25 head of choice mule colts Monday. He bought them early in the day and got the choice ones on the market. They averaged him $50.

Thursday evening at sundown a covy of quails struck town, running through the court house yard and flying around on the hotel porch. It is supposed they were scared by a hawk.

Most of the tobacco crop has been housed. It is decidedly the best crop that has been produced within the history of Owen county. It is curing right, it has the sigk finish and the color could not be better.

A large number of mules on the market court day. They brought from $35 to sixty dollars. Stone & Noel got 25 head and a number of other buyers brought car loads. Good mules brought from $300 to $350 per pair and aged mules from $10 to eighty dollars. The demand for horses was not so great. Good horses brought from $80 to one hundred and twenty-five dollars.

Mr. Willie Perkins, the man-on-the-horse, is now taking the list of tax-payers of Owen county. While Owen county can equal any county for diamonds, no county is Owen county's superior when it comes to the number of fine watches. For the correctness of this statement the News-Herald is willing to place the Assessor's report of Owen county against the report of any Assessor of any county in the Commonwealth of our dear old Kentucky home.

Rabbits are said to be more numerous than they have been in years. In most places a rabbit sells for a dime, or three for a quarter, but in Owenton they bring 15 cents a piece or two for a quarter—possibly, because of the high cost of ammunition. While the rabbits are reported to be fat and plentiful, it is said that some have been found dead in the fields caused from epizootic. If this be true, the Game Warden should appoint a specialist and have every shipment of rabbits to be shipped out of the State examined, and all shipments of rabbits not inspected by reason of the shipper not giving due notice to the Warden a penality should be fixed on the shipper, a fine imposed on the buyer and making if both the penality and fine on the company for hauling them.

Will Show Old Engine.

An interesting relic in connection with the Aurora farmers' fair Oct. 7th will be the old B. and O. engine Atlantic, the oldest American built engine in the world. This engine was built in 1832 and was in active service more than sixty years. The first passenger train run into Washington was drawn by the Atlantic, and it also pulled the train which carried President Lincoln to that city for inauguration.

REMEMBERING THE PAST.

All of the past good should be remembered; if there is small good, then the least worst. One great poet has held the failings and defects of value, as things on which to climb, and a greater poet did not hesitate to seize the sentiment and expand the theme. Those who remember birthdays are affectionate by nature, says Cincinnati Enquirer. Others are strong on weddings, recalling all when even the chief participants have nearly forgotten. And those who never speak of their dead are either very deep or very shallow—usually the latter. No past need confound. The hurtful leaven of much Christian teaching is the emphasis placed on the deeds that have gone before. The gist of the parable of the Prodigal Son lies in the revelation of the love of the father. To him the far country and the swine's husks were lost in forgetfulness, while music and dancing awaited only the donning of the robe and shoes by one not to be received as a servant. In this spirit the fervent Paul pressed forward, "forgetting that which is behind." Yet it was the reproach of the rapt seer of the Apocalypse to the church of Ephesus that it had forgotten its first love.

As an argument in favor of the suggested scheme for a great comprehensive exploration of the Pacific ocean made by Prof. W. M. Thomas, the statement is made that there is an area in the great body of water twice as great as the United States which has only once been traversed by a single line of sounding and at intervals of 250 miles, and there are many instances of the existence of areas as great as that of this country which remain entirely unfathomed. The biology, geology and meteorology of this district are in an equally neglected state, while the anthropology of the Pacific Islands bristles with a number of unsolved problems. The project is a very costly one, so plans for the exploration are still in an indefinite shape and its realization probably very remote.

Austria is reviving the friendliness she once felt for citizens of the United States. She has begun to think seriously of things. She remembers that before the war her people in this country shipped back home every year about $150,000,000 of good American money. Austria is going to need this money when peace comes again and she wants to be on the very best footing possible with us. That amount will go quite a way toward setting her people up in business again.

The subject of stocking the Adirondacks with elk is under consideration by federal experts and New York state authorities. It would make hunting more exciting to the sportsmen of the Empire state. At present this species of big game is found only in regions which are generally inaccessible to those who cannot spare much time for the sport.

Nobody knows, of course, whether the discoverer of a cheap substitute for gasoline is now carrying water in the harvest field, selling papers on the street or diving off the dock. Wherever he is he's an active boy, with no time at present to give to the big thought.

Political campaigns are never postponed because of a lack of public interest. A brass band and a few spellbinders can convince the people that they are excited, then the agony begins.

Icebergs in the north Atlantic lanes are scarcer than hens' teeth this summer. Probably they all went up in steam soon after they struck the hot, shark infested ocean.

ADJUST THE HARNESS RIGHT

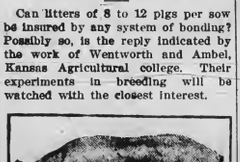
Collar Bolls Often Caused by Improper Fastening of the Trace Chain on the Hame.

Collar bolls are often caused by improper adjustment of the fastenings of the trace chain on the hame. Every hame should have several places for adjustment and the regulation should be made to conform to the slope of the shoulders of the individual horse. Horses with straight shoulders should have traces about midway of the hame, while horses with sloping shoulders should have the adjustment about two-fifths of the way up from the bottom.

Adjustment of the backband will in a measure correct any weakness in the formation of the shoulder. The backband can be made not only to carry a part of the weight, thereby adjusting the dept of the plow, but it can be made to adjust the draft to fit the horse's shoulder. The adjustment can be made either by shortening the backband or moving it farther back on the horse. The length of the trace should be such as to prevent the horse's legs knocking against the singletree and still have no surplus length.

HORSES KNOWN AS 'ROARERS'

Uncomplimentary Terms Used to Indicate Unsoundness in Animals —Trouble May Be Cured.



(By O. N. KENNEDY, Oregon Experiment Station.)

Whistlers, wheezers, blowers or roarers. These uncomplimentary terms were not applied in anger, but merely used to indicate the character of the unsoundness in horses, known as roaring. Their use may be avoided by saying that the horse it afflicted with laryngeal hemiplegia. Horses affected with this disease appear normal while at rest, but when severely exercised the breathing efforts become much greater and the characteristic noises are heard. Ninety per cent of the cases are caused by partial paralysis of the muscles of the left side of the neck. It may be cured in a great majority of cases by an operation on the larynx. The operation is not dangerous if performed by a skillful veterinarian. Most cases are ready to be put back to work in course of eight weeks.

INHERIT FERTILITY IN SWINE

Experiments of Kansas Experts Watched With Closest Interest—Tamworth Most Fecund Breed.

Can litters of 8 to 12 pigs per sow be insured by any system of bonding? Possibly so, is the reply indicated by the work of Wentworth and Ambel, Kansas Agricultural college. Their experiments in breeding will be watched with the closest interest.

Highly Developed Tamworth.

Fecundity appears to be inheritable, at least to a slight degree. This fact is borne out by herdbook records, allowing for their errors. It is questionable whether the size of the litter really represents the hereditary factors transmitted. The wild hog usually averages four pigs per litter, very fertile sows of improved breeds often average eight pigs, but the Tamworth, with an average of 12 pigs per sow, is the most fecund breed.

LANDS SUITABLE FOR SHEEP

Animals Do Best Where Grasses Are Produced Naturally or Introduced by Cultivation.

Sheep do best on high, dry land—that is, on hard-soiled land, where the grasses adapted to sheep are produced naturally, or are easily introduced by cultivation. The short grasses, or such as usually are termed pasture grasses, are essential to the well-being of the sheep. Cattle and horses will thrive and do well on hay grasses, on wet land grasses, tall grasses, but with the sheep it is different; they depend on the short-growth, dry-soil-pasture grasses. It is important that they be not confined to wet, soft, boggy pastures. The sheep inclines to foot scald, sore feet and finally foot rot where the hoof is constantly under the influence of moisture in the soil.

DRY FOOD QUITE INJURIOUS

Cows and Sheep Grow Feverish and Stomachs Show Effects of Unnatural Food—Give Green Roots.

Cows and sheep fed on dry food in summer grow feverish and their stomachs show the effects of the unnatural food. Green roots, when mixed with the grain diet, will prevent this. If it is not desired to feed the roots whole they can be massed by passing them through a pulper.

SECOND GARDEN IS FAVORED Vegetables Throughout Summer and Fall Are Most Desirable—Keep Ground From Baking.

Plant a second vegetable garden, is the advice of Albert Dickens, professor of horticulture in the Kansas State Agricultural college. A second planting of lettuce is desirable in the home garden, because the early planted lettuce will become tough and bitter within a few weeks. After the spring rains the radishes grow pithy and bitter. If at first only a small bed of radishes is planted and later plantings are made at intervals of two weeks, fresh, sweet radishes may be had until late in the season. Again in the fall this plan may be repeated with radishes or lettuce with satisfactory results.

A second planting of peas and also one of string beans is desirable. Beets planted in June are a good size by August and excellent for fall canning. Turnips and carrots are much better if they are not too large and therefore a second planting will make better vegetables for fall use.

One must be careful not to allow the ground to bake over the seeds in hot weather. It is desirable to put a mulch on the garden to help the moisture and keep the sun from baking the ground.

GREAT WASTE DUE TO WEEDS

In Certain States Where Diversification Is Exception Annual Loss Placed at $40,000,000.

(By J. D. MARSHALL, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

According to the United States department of agriculture, the annual waste due to the weeds is estimated at $300,000,000 for the whole United States. In certain states where diversified farming is the exception and not the rule, the waste is said to approximate $40,000,000 per year. What the waste is in Colorado cannot be accurately estimated, but it is undoubtedly true that considerable waste occurs. In the intensively cultivated sections the waste is not very large because of the clean culture needed for certain crops. In sections where grain crops are very popular, the waste is quite large.

The principal ways in which weeds affect farming are through direct damage to the crop, cutting down the yield, cheapening the product, and lowering the value of land.

CAFETERIA FOR THE CHICKS

Any Old Cardboard Box Will Prove Satisfactory for Feeding Mash to the Young Fowls.

A shoe, candy, or any cardboard box is all one needs to make a chick mash box that is handy and sanitary, and when dirty can easily be replaced, writes L. E. Fetter in Popular Science Monthly. Cut U-shaped openings in the sides and ends of the box, fill with dry mash and replace the cover. The chicks get at the mash through openings, but cannot get into it. A more durable box can be made of wood.

TRAP ARMY WORM IN DITCHES

Also May Be Destroyed With Poison Bran Mash Sowed Broadcast Late in the Evening.

The army worm which eats the leaves of field and garden crops may be trapped in dusty ditches or killed with poison bran mash sowed broadcast late in the evening. Badly infested meadows should be cut at once to save as much of the hay as possible.

GOOD WINDMILL A NECESSITY

Time and Money Spent in Hauling Feed to Town and Back Is Saved —Does Other Things.

Every farmer should have a good windmill. The time spent in hauling feed to town and back and the money paid for grinding will soon pay for a good mill. Besides it will do a number of other things for you.

ORCHARD TOPICS

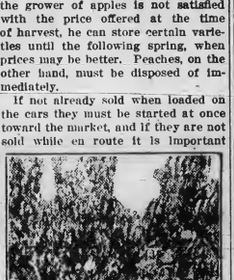
THINNING FRUIT IS FAVORED

Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station Finds Operation Is Quite Profitable.

(By F. W. FAUROT, Missouri Agricultural College.)

Thinning is an operation that has been practiced to only a very limited extent in Missouri. An occasional man has thinned a few trees, more as a matter of curious inquiry than as a definite orchard practice. Where the operation has to any degree been carefully performed the results have been outstanding, and the Missouri agricultural experiment station finds that it pays well.

Those varieties which tend usually to overbear and produce undersized fruit may be thinned to a profitable advantage. The size and quality of such varieties as Winesap, Missouri Pippin, Ralls and Ingram can almost always be improved by careful thinning, and it will often pay to thin such varieties as Jonathan, Grimes or York.



The quality of well-grown fruit is always superior to that which is small and poorly developed. If the crop is evenly distributed throughout the tree, perhaps four to eight inches, according to size of variety, is a good distance between fruits. Leave only one fruit on a spur. If two are left, both will be wormy. On trees with a heavy set of fruit, thinning all the fruit from part of the spurs tends to cause such spurs to develop fruit buds for the next year's crop, thereby encouraging regular bearing. The earlier the work is done the less drain there is on the vigor of the tree. Surplus fruit can be handled at less expense by thinning than by running it over a sorting table at packing time.

MARKETING THE PEACH CROP

On Account of Its Very Perishable Nature Fruit Must Be Disposed of as Soon as Possible.

The peach, on account of its very perishable nature, must be marketed as soon as possible after reaching maturity, therefore, the proper dispatch and distribution present many difficulties. Peaches will not stand delay, even when graded, packed and handled in the best possible manner. If the grower of apples is not satisfied with the price offered at the time of harvest, he can store certain varieties until the following spring, when prices may be better. Peaches, on the other hand, must be disposed of immediately.

If not already sold when loaded on the cars they must be started at once toward the market, and if they are not sold while en route it is important that they go to a market not already overstocked. An oversupply may occur in one market meaning heavy losses to certain growers, while at the same time consumers may be paying high prices in other localities. It is probable that many smaller towns could serve as carload distributing points if local dealers in these towns would co-operate in buying peaches by the carload and in pushing their sale.

The problem of peach marketing is one of irregular production and of unsatisfactory preparation and distribution rather than of overproduction. The increased consumption of California oranges made possible by effective distribution is an example of results accruing from care in the marketing of a crop of which there is a comparatively uniform supply.

WHITE HELLEBORE IS USEFUL

Employed to Control Currant and Cabbage Worms—Used Either in Powder or Liquid Form.

White hellebore is a useful poison to control currant and cabbage worms. An ounce of the powder to three gallons of water is the formula in general use. Just as good a way is to use it dry, mixing an ounce of hellebore with five times as much flour or air-slaked lime or plaster paris.

THE CARRIAGE MAN

ERLANGER, - KENTUCKY.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catroe, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good. I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of wonderful success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

SELF-INFLICTED UNHAPPINESS.

It is not easy to believe that much of our unhappiness in life is self-inflicted, yet a careful study of conditions as they exist today forces us to such a conclusion, says Charleston News and Courier. It may be our present manner of living, or it may be some phase of dissatisfaction innate in the human heart and which has developed gradually from generation to generation, or it may be even pure contrariness of spirit, which accounts for our discontent, but whatever the cause we cannot help knowing that as a whole the human race is not as happy nor as light-hearted as it might be. So many persons go through life with a chip on their shoulders, so many have a grouch of their own creation either against a fellow being or a condition which does not please them, and rather than take the trouble, or be fair and impartial enough to prove their contentions groundless they prefer to fan their smoldering discontent into a blaze which sometimes consumes their reason and makes them incapable of acting with common sense. Fortunately such cases are more the exception than the rule, yet, at the same time, there are many other persons who, while not going to such extremes in the blindness of their personal antipathies, are still unfair enough to nurse their grouches at the expense of others as well as themselves.

A new process for the manufacture of high-speed steel, in which no tungsten, molybdenum, cobalt or vanadium is used, is described in a commerce report by Consul J. M. Savage, Sheffield, England. In former processes tungsten was an indispensable alloy, its use in normal times running as high as 14 to 24 per cent. It is said that the ingredients of the new steel are freely obtainable wherever steel is manufactured. It is also said to be suitable only for turning, planing and slotting tools, all of which can be made by casting. It is not suitable for twist drills or milling cutters. The tools in which it can be used, however, take up about 75 per cent of the entire consumption of steel for machine tools. Patents in other countries are being applied for, and it is proposed soon to place the process before steel makers in this country.

Philatelists must be on the alert to keep track of the new stamp issues brought about by the war. Turkey has issued a set of five stamps to mark what purports to be a Turkish occupation of "somewhere in Egypt." Word comes also that the Germans have suppressed the Warsaw Citizens' post, and a curious position arises in connection with the stamps of the temporary institution. It is illegal to deal in these Warsaw labels in Germany, and they are regarded as stamps of enemy origin in England, France, Russia and Italy, and consequently it is illegal to import them.

The June fire loss, according to the tally kept by the New York Commercial Bulletin, amounted to $12,247,500, which was not very good nor very bad. This year started with three months of conspicuously heavy losses, which have been followed by three months of average losses. The total for the first half of the year is $125,776,420, compared with $92,891,000 for the corresponding period of last year and $133,018,250 for the first half of 1914.

A man and his wife have been sent to jail in Munich for painting and selling over 200 "old masters." At any rate, they can claim in defense that they were artistic frauds. And if they have any sense of humor, their conviction may have a measure of revenge in the feelings of their victims, many of whom probably posed to their friends as connoisseurs.

Wooden shoes may be the next thing here, in consequence of the shortage of imported leather. This will put the country on quite a novel war footing.

Except for a shortage in cold weather this summer is living up to the predictions of the man who said it would be chilly straight through.

FISCAL COURT ORDERS.

Chas. Goodridge was reelected county road engineer for a period of two years.

The sheep claims of Fred Morris and Perry Barlow were allowed and ordered certified for payment.

The road engineer was ordered to make survey and estimate of the Adams-Cotton road in Verona precinct.

Benj. Riley was appointed commissioner to make settlement with the sheriff on account of the taxes collected in 1916.

Hon. J. G. Tomlin made a short talk in favor of the district tuberculosis sanitorium, he being president of a temporary organization perfected a short time since in Covington.

W. L. Presser, of Rathaway, appeared before the court and entered his protest against the route surveyed of his land for the proposed change in the Riddell's Run road.

The county road engineer recommended the purchase of the following additional road machinery: Three wheel scrapers, probable cost $45 each; one sprinkler, probable cost, $350.

The county road engineer is authorized to permit the towns in Boone county to use the county road roller when the same is not in use by the county, the towns to pay the expense of operating the roller and all breakage and the expense of taking the roller to and from the town.

The court having authorized R. O. Hughes to construct the first mile of the Hudson grade road, beginning at the Richwood church, the said Hughes is to hire the necessary labor and purchase the necessary material under the direction of the county road engineer and according to plans and specifications now on file with said engineer. The said road is to be built at the expense of the county and subscribers, 75 per cent of the cost thereof to be paid by the county and 25 per cent by subscribers. The said Hughes and the county road engineer are to pay out of the county road fund 75 per cent of the cost of said road and the subscribers the remainder. Before the said Hughes shall act the subscribers shall execute a bond before the county judge conditioned that they will pay one-fourth of the cost of construction.

METHOD FOR CLEARING LAND

Combination of Blasting and Stump Pulling Is Favored at University of Wisconsin.

As a result of experiments with stump pullers and dynamite working together on the university's demonstration tour, the University of Wisconsin has discovered that the best method of clearing land is a combination of blasting and stump pulling. The stump puller people admitted that time, labor and money could be saved by first loosening the stumps by blasting before pulling them, and the powder men admitted that a similar saving could be effected by having a stump puller complete the job after a comparatively light charge of powder had done its preliminary, preparatory work on the stump.

KEEP WHEEL FROM RATTLING

New Process Provides an Expander Bolt for Purpose Which Is Fitted Into Wheel Rim.

A new method has been devised to stop a buggy or wagon wheel from rattling. Instead of having the blacksmith remove a tire and shrink it on again to compress loose parts, the new process provides an expander bolt for the purpose. A section of the felly is cut out in order to give necessary room for this expansion. With a tire already in place, the bolt is turned, forcing the wooden rim tight against the outer steel hoop. As a result all looseness in the rim is taken up.—Popular Mechanics.

OVERFEEDING ON GREEN FOOD

Proper Cure for Bloat Is Incision With Trocar to Permit Accumulated Gas to Escape.

Hoven or bloat is a drumlike swelling of front hip, left side, the result of overfeeding on green food or wet clover. The proper cure is an incision with a cattle trocar, relieving the accumulated gas. If the disease is not properly and promptly attended to your cow will die.

KEEP WATCH ON THE CHICKS

Don't Let Them Crowd in Brood Coop —Few Minutes Time May Save an Entire Brood.

If your chicks are still in the small brood coop, you must watch them when the hens begin to leave, as they are apt to crowd into one coop and lose an entire brood. A few minutes each evening may mean many dollars profit or loss, according to the value of your chicks.

1907 1916.

This is not the first time extraordinary conditions have necessitated a resort to extraordinary measures, and that it has been necessary for the Government to serve private interest in order to protect the public interest.

In the year 1907 the United States experienced one of the most disastrous panics of its history. Years were required to liquidate it.

In the midst of this panic President Roosevelt placed the recources of the United States Treasury at the disposition of J. Pierpont Morgan and a coterie of New York bankers.

Some of these men were immediately responsible for the panic, in the sense that it began in their determination to crush Morse. They did not intend to have a panic, but they loosed forces that they were unable to control.

When the panic became a fact, however, there was no time to waste in fixing responsibility. The quickest way to stop it was to turn the Treasury over to Mr. Morgan and his associates and let them reestablish the market. This was done.

In theory there could no act of government more reprehensible morally, legally and politically than to put a group of Wall Street bankers into physical possession of the U. S. Treasury. No sane man would think of defending it as an established policy of government. Nevertheless, there was no other method immediately available of meeting the crisis. The United States had an antiquated Banking and Currency Law which encouraged panics, and the situation had to be met without an hour's delay.

The panic was stopped. Mr. Morgan and his associates are said to have made fortunes out of their operations, and probably they did. It could not have been otherwise, but their gains were small in comparison with the losses of the country would have sustained if the panic had continued a week.

Out of this situation, however, came the public sentiment that finally enabled President Wilson to obtain the enactment of the Banking and Currency Law which has made the United States panic proof.

The country confronted a similar situation of disaster in the threat ened railroad strike. The President and Congress took the swift and sure way to avert it.

The President and Congress saved the country from a civil war and gave it time for calm, dispassionate action to prevent a similar crisis in the future. What would be the state of affairs in the United States today if less prompt and effective measures had been adopted by the Government? That is the complete reply to all this irresponsible criticism. —New York World.

HARD WORKING TEAMS

"Hard Feed" During Busy Season Is Recommended.

Horse Will Thrive, Work Better, and Remain Healthier and More Enduring—Soft Grass Makes Animal too Mushy and Flabby.

(By T. E. SAWYER.)

When a farm horse is working hard it does not pay to let him eat grass when it is green. The horse deserves and should have a good roll on grass or plowed land each time the harness is removed, as that is a luxury and helpful to the animal.

But he will thrive, work better and remain healthier and more enduring if fed "hard feed" during the busy season.

The soft, washy, green grass is palatable of course, but it makes the horse soft and flabby, keeps the bowels too loose and is apt to induce colic.

If the horse has no work to do he may go on pasture right along and have little grain, and when his work is done in late summer he may enjoy the fall pasture made green again by rains. The pasture also is a good place for the brood mare, as it promotes flow of milk.

Severe attacks of colic often are caused by allowing the hot, tired horse to eat grass at the roadside when he has made a long trip to town.

The trouble, too, is prone to come on when horses are suddenly fed new hay or new oats. Both new hay and new oats should be fed in small quantities gradually at first, and along with old hay and oats until the horses become accustomed to the change.

Either the new feed is so palatable that the horse eats too much of it, or it contains some ferment that sets up indigestion and formation of gas.

Water very seldom causes colic. Nature intends horses to have all of it they want, at any and all times, and so provided it does no harm; we may cause trouble by withholding drinking-water for long periods of time and then forcing the hot, tired horse to drink too much of it at noon and especially just after eating grain.

Allow the work horse adequate supplies of cool, pure water often when he is at work and he never will take too much of it or suffer ill effects from drinking. Indeed the water so given will be likely to prevent sickness and always is appreciated and beneficial.

In addition to making changes of food gradually it also is well to very gradually increase the amount of food. Allow free access to rock salt.

If an attack of colic comes on, the following mixture, given as one dose, usually will be found effectual:

Turpentine, one ounce; fluid extract of Cannabis Indica, one-half ounce; raw linseed oil, one pint. Repeat in half an hour if found necessary.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Allow no ground in the garden to lie idle.

Farm scales have a profitable effect on the town scales.

The cinch bug wheat pest sometimes costs us $20,000,000 a year.

Not what we know but what we do makes a success of the farm.

The manure spreader, rightly used, will pay for itself in a short time.

Agriculture is what colleges teach; farming is what men do for a living.

Bees are like sheep and many other things. They do better in small groups.

To get the rows in the garden straight use a strong string and two stakes.

The enterprising farmer has no trouble in finding something to do these days.

The only good weed is a dead weed, and if it goes to seed before it dies it isn't much good even then.

Train the tomatoes to stakes in the home garden. Do not allow more bunches to grow than can be matured.

Build or dig a silo and if you have not sufficient corn to fill it, use rye, cutting it when it is in the soft dough.

Have you any bird neighbors? A few trees and shrubs about the yard will bring them. They seem to like to live near buildings.

The Girl Without a Country.

By Luella Riley Spencer.

Because you were born in America and the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States and the name of George Washington are words as familiar to you as your own name, you perhaps do not realize all they mean.

If you had always lived in a Russian pale of settlement where the Czar commanded you to stay if you had suffered persecutions until you feared and hated the cross, and your life was governed by the laws and ceremonies of the Old Testament without the light and liberty of the New Testament, and then suddenly you were transplanted to free America, you might more clearly understand what our country meant to its makers and what it is really worth today.

This was the experience of a Russian Jewish girl, Mary Antin, who at twelve years of age was enabled by a Jewish benevolent society to emigrate to America with her family, and her record furnishes a fresh comprehension of the possibilities of our country that stirs us to a deeper patriotism. Until they became citizens of the United States the Antins had been a people without a country, being exiled Jews and without a flag to love. All the flag they had ever known had symbolized bondage and to them the uniform of a soldier was the emblem of shame. So it was that they did not know what "my country" could mean.

In the public schools of Boston Mary Antin read about George Washington and the American Revolution. With bated breath she listened while her teacher read of the great hero, and gripping the seat, she leaned forward to catch the sounds of "the star-spangled banner" being sung by pupils in an adjoining room. It was a memorable day when first she comprehended the fact that although the process of naturalization her father had become a citizen of the United States and that she, by virtue of her relation to him, was also a citizen and a fellow citizen with George Washington. So greatly was she affected that she obtained permission to go home and model to all her family the greatness that had taken upon them. "As I read how patriots planned the Revolution," she says, "and women gave their sons to die in battle, and the heroes led to victory, and the rejoicing people set up the republic, it dawned on me gradually what was meant by 'my country.' The people all desiring noble things and striving for them together, defying their oppressors, giving their lives for each other—all this it was which made my country. It was not a thing I understood, but I knew one could say 'my country' and feel it as one felt 'God' or 'myself.'

"George Washington himself could not mean more than I when he said, 'My country,' after I had once felt it, for the country was for all the citizens, and I was a citizen."

Mary accepted America, where "opportunity waits on ambition," at its face value and began to appropriate to herself the inheritance it bequeathed her. She entered every open door that was free to the public. One of these was the public library. When she read an inscription in front of the building that the library was for all the people, she entered in and took possession with a joy possible only to the true lover of books.

Mary Antin's home was in one of the worst slum districts of Boston. In the midst of squalor and poverty indescrible she set out to attain the heights made possible by a new and glorious citizenship. Her remarkable success seems to have been primarily the result of a true vision, or comprehension of the relative value of things, coupled with a rare knack of laying hold in a practical way of the truth that environment even crushing poverty, is superficial and may be made a temporary matter and not allowed to touch the spirit within.

This is the way Mary Antin herself expresses it: "From my little room in Dover Street I reached out for the world, and the world came to me. I entered into every noble chamber of the palace of life. The doors opened to me because I had a right to be within. My patent of nobility was the longing for the abundance of life."

Statesmen, scientists, editors and teachers became Mary Antin's associates because she lived the quality of life that admitted her to their friendship. By keeping her eyes on the goal and working with ceaseless endeavor she made a triumphal march thru school and college, afterwards becoming a successful journalist. The time came when she lifted her family from poverty and paid with interest the accumulated grocery and rent bills, as she had determined to do in the hours when she stood by her mother's side to offer dumb sympathy when the land lady became abusive on her weekly fruitless visits. And her prince came, too, when she had made herself ready, an instructor in a great university. And then before she was thirty years old she wrote a book, one of the really great books of the century, that is destined to become a permanent contribution to literature. "The Promised Land" is the personal record of Mary Antin's own life story. It quickens the pulses and stimulates to worthy endeavor and is as fascinatingly interesting as a novel. But above these its chief merit is that it is the record of a race. It is the romance of the present-day immigrants coming to our land, and portrays the burning faith and beauty of their loyalty. We are made to see that for the material things we lavishly give to them they are making a deeper spiritual offering to America.

Mary Antin has not only opened our understanding and helped us to a deeper appreciation of the immigrant, but by her life and work she is helping to make a greater America.—"The Visitor."

Many varieties of each and all high-grade fruit. Mr. Jett has cultivated his orchard frequently during the summer and it is said to be the finest young orchard in this part of the State. Maysville, Sept. 28.—The Mason county grand jury scored the turn pike system of this county in its report to Circuit Judge Newell. It said: "We looked into the management of the turnpikes of Mason county and find that it can be no worse. There has been no effort made to turn the water off the pikes and no ditching of any kind has been done. All the work done on the pikes has been done by the day, which is very expensive. We find the whole system impracticable and recommend a commission form of government."

TIME FOR SELF-ACQUAINTANCE.

When we catch a brief respite from the onerous duties that "making a living" forces upon us and assume the pleasurable excitement of a vacation from our several jobs, we may, if we are wise, get acquainted with ourselves. Primarily-taking a vacation means either a whirl of new adventures in new places or else a stolid, businesslike rest, in which the mind goes on strike and the body is satisfied to become practically inert, says Ohio State Journal. In either case opportunity is offered to detach ourselves from the consuming pursuit of one specialized thing and take a look around. Unless one be abnormally stupid this change of mental habit is going to bring about a meeting between the self that is real and the self that is only a working machine. Modern demands upon the average man who is holding down a job are so strenuous and the pace is so swift that he has little chance to get acquainted with himself, or to take his bearings in those directions and relationships that have to do with the why and the wherefore of his existence on this planet. If he have a big job at big pay he is kept too busy fulfilling its duties, for despite misapprehensions on the subject, the man in the business world today who is drawing down a large wage is expected to earn it, whether he works for himself and is a "captain of industry," or is only an important cog in the wheel of some other man's big machine.

Of all the many controversies regarding Shakespeare, perhaps the most futile is that which has been carried on concerning the spelling of the great poet's name. Shakespeare himself was apparently uncertain, and evidently quite indifferent on the matter, says Christian Science Monitor. In his will he spells his name both "Shakespere" and "Shakespeare," while in the council book of Stratford-on-Avon, where his father's name occurs 66 times, it is spelled in no fewer than 16 different ways, the commonest being one which has never been generally adopted, namely, "Shaxpeare." The commonly accepted spelling today is "Shakespeare," though Professor Dowden always maintained that it should be "Shakspere," and so spells it in his famous book, "Shakespere, His Mind and Art."

General cleaning up of cities is the public contribution to immunity from contagious diseases like infantile paralysis, but the menace of this and other diseases imposes upon parents the duty of teaching habits of personal cleanliness to their children. A Boston physician gives these rules: The hands must be kept clean; especially see that the hands are washed before the child eats anything, whether it be fruit, candy or a meal; make the child keep its fingers out of its mouth and nose; keep the child away from crowded areas, streets and public gatherings.

A weekly submarine service is promised in the future, and now come reports of a mysterious cure for infantile paralysis being rushed to this country on board an undersea boat, says Baltimore American. In the first flush of success, the merchant submarine is being looked to to work miracles, but its present feat ought to be sufficient, without its being required to bring the maritime commercial millennium.

If you were to tie a man's hands behind him, strap his neck to the wall and his feet to the floor, spread 17 drops of molasses on his nose and neck and then let the flies to him, the chances are he would be opposed thereafter to the docking of a horse's tail.

Bitter regrets of monarchs that they cannot fight side by side with the men of their regiments in the trenches point one of the inevitable penalties of their high position, to which they must submit with what good grace they can muster.

Anything of a material sort that any European nation can get or could have got in this war is not worth what it has already cost; and its spiritual blessings are far away and doubtful.

The reason an old man knows a young man is making a fool of himself is because the old man remembers when he did the same thing.

Or maybe the insurance rates are going up because the insurance men are afraid such hot weather will spontaneously combust something.

KETCHUP TIME

Excellent Ways to Season Your Winter Meals—A Good Mushroom Recipe.

Ketchup time is here, and it behooves the good housewife to "put up" some of this appetizer. For tomato kethup take half a pack of sound, ripe tomatoes and wipe them well, quarter them, place on dishes and scatter with a half pound of salt. Leave for twenty-four hours, drain the juice through a half sieve into a pan. Add two dozen small capsicums and ten shallots, or, if not at hand, two ounces of whole pepper and four tablespoonfuls of onion juice. Simmer for half an hour and then add the tomato, which has been pulped through a fine hair sieve.

Cook for thirty minutes more. Bottle, cork and seal.

Take half a large sieveful of green walnut shells and place them in a wooden tub with a half pound of coarse salt. Beat and mash them from time to time for six days. Tie up and drain the juice into a pan and continue to mash the shells until all juice is extracted. Strain the liquid into a preserving pan and simmer and skim thoroughly; then add two ounces of bruised ginger, 2 ounces of allspice, a half ounce of whole pepper, a half ounce of cloves and simmer all gently together for about one hour. Measure out about an equal quantity of spice into each bottle, then fill with the liquid, cork, seal thoroughly and keep until the following year.

To one peck of good, sound, fresh mushrooms allow a half pound of coarse salt. Break up and let them stand three hours and then mash them once or twice a day for two days. Pour the mash into a stone jar and add for each quart one ounce of whole pepper. Place a weighted plate on the jar and stand the jar in a pan of hot water. Bring it to a boil and boil for quite two hours. Strain off the juice and simmer it for thirty minutes. Let it stand, and next day add a tablespoonful of brandy to each pint and again let it stand in a cool place for twenty-four hours. Strain it into small bottles, and be careful not to disturb the dregs. Then cork and seal.

SEE SILVER LINING OF DARK DIVORCE CLOUD.

Eleven Out of Every Twelve Legal Separations Are Unnecessary, It Is Asserted.

"In the United States one marriage in every twelve ends in divorce, and eleven of every twelve divorces are unnecessary."

So John J. Freschi, Justice of the Court of Special Sessions of New York, extracts an optimistic moral from our perrennial floomy divorce statistics.

Before his advancement Judge Freschi presided over the court of domestic relations and came to be known there as "the judge who understands" because of his unusual success in mediating between warring husbands and wives.

"Married men and women hesitate to discuss each other with their friends or relatives, and they are quite right. Yet often the one word of an intelligent mediator would restore peace," Judge Freschi told me. "I believe that almost any marriage has the elements of success in it. Yet there is no marriage without its storms, because there is no such thing as perfect compatibility between a man and a woman. Very often men and women of the most opposite characters and dispositions are drawn together by a basic physical attraction. Contrary to the usual view, I believe that marriages founded upon such a strong attraction are most likely to last, and that differences of mentality and temperament are not very important where common sense is applied.

"In the flamor of their first love for each other men and women conceal their real natures. The bookworm who has fallen in love with the butterfly assumes a temporary gayety. The butterfly tempers her natural frivolity to what she knows to be the bookworm's mood. After marriage they resume their real selves, and unless those first aids to wounded romance—tolerance and compromise—are called in, the game is up."

News From Pendleton County.

(Pendleton County Outlook.)

Newt Edwards sold his crop of tobacco, between 5000 and 6000 pounds, last week to Jesse Hackett at 14 cents from the ground up. This is the highest price paid for the weed for this year's crop.

Fred Trost, the progressive farmer, beeman, fruit grower and all-around outdoor sportsman, was in town Monday shaking hands with friends. He says that the Ringneck Pheasants that he liberated on his farm, have a large bunch of young ones and they are doing fine. The Silver and Golden pheasants came too late to raise any young this season.

HOW TO INDUCE SLEEP.

Try to Think of Something and Create a Mental Vacuum.

When insomnia is caused by some trifling or temporary disorder of mind or body it can usually be overcome by ceasing to divagate, says a contributor to the New York Sun. So long as the mind chases itself from one subject to another, as a wakeful mind is apt to do in the dark and in silence, so long is it kept active by the very succession of different thoughts, and sleep refuses to come.

The thing to do is to concentrate the mind on the corner of the room or on anything else. A flock of sheep, the multiplication table or anything else will do. So will counting if the thought can be confined to the succession of numbers without straying away to other subjects while the counting goes on, as a rumble mind is likely to do.

The best of all things I ever found to concentrate on, however, is nothing. Let the sufferer try to form a mental concept of nothing as a start, with the purpose of fixing his mind on it. He will be surprised at first, if he has never tried it before, to find that he cannot do it. Positively one cannot think of nothing as actually existing. Perhaps that is because it doesn't, if a bull is allowable.

But let him not be discouraged. Let him continue to try, and presently he will be so fascinated by the effort that he will still continue till he becomes fatigued and forgets that and everything else in a peaceful slumber.

BIC TOBACCO CROP

Reported From Southern Ohio Counties, and of Fine Quality.

Ripley, Ohio, Oct. 3.—A trip thru the tobacco growing section of Brown, Adams and Clermont counties reveals that every barn and outbuilding is filled. None of the crop is outstanding in the fields.

The acreage of 1916 was the largest ever known. The quality of this year's output will be fine. There will be a preponderating amount of long, leafy very bright tobacco, thin in texture, light and very little trash. However, the increased acreage will make up for weight and show about a record yield.

While barns have been packed with the uncured product the weather has been wonderful for curing. There is no houseburn, and many barns will be ready for stripping when the fall rains come. The only defect is that there will be some green-tinged parts, which were cut a fortnight ago when the east winds blew.

INTEREST IN THE COUNTY AGENT.

The record of inquiries for farm lands kept at the Kansas Agricultural College show that "almost invariably the prospective purchaser desires to know if there is a county agricultural agent in the county concerning which he inquires. Again, some farmers declare outright that they are searching for land in a country which has the benefit of an adviser.

None of us is too old to learn. The farmer who knows it all doubt less can be found in ample numbers, but the percentage is not greater than in other vocations. As a matter of fact, it takes a bigger man to know it all in farming than in any other occupation, and probably the number of "smarties" is smaller among tillers of the soil. Even a lot of those grizzled old chaps, taught in the school of experience have come to understand that younger men, who have been real students, may have learned something which has escaped them in the costly experience route to knowledge.

The county agent who fills his job is a much valued member of the community. It is easy enough to understand why the thinking farmer manifests a disposition to locate in a section where such aid is available.—Breeders' Gazette.

AVOID WASTE ON ROADS

Federal Government Will Take All Precautions to Keep Aid In Proper Condition.

Washington.—Elaborate plans to prevent the diversion into improper channels of any part of the $75,000,000 which the federal government is to spend in co-operation with States on good roads within the next five years have been made by Logan Waller Page, Director of the office of Public Roads and Rural Engineering, which will supervise the work.

The government is determined, officials say, that there shall be no repetition of the lax methods and waste which have characterized the building of roads in many sections, and that a dollar's worth of road bed shall be constructed for every dollar spent. Further, the Public Roads office is preparing to see to it that the roads for which the government money is spent are places where the traffic demand is the heaviest and not where politicians or others desire them.

The plans designed to prevent abuses are covered largely in rules and regulations promulgated by Secretary Houston of the Department of Agriculture, under authority conferred by the Federal Aid Road act. The rules which outline the methods by which the federal government shall aid the States in the construction of highways, provide that detailed information in reference to the proposed construction and maintenance shall be furnished to the Secretary of Agriculture before any agreements are made.

Where Money is Useless.

The island of Ascension, in the Atlantic, belonging to Great Britian, is of a volcanic formation, eight miles by six in size, and has a population of about 450. It was uninhabitated until the confinement of Napoleon at St. Helena, when it was occupied by a small British force. It is 250 miles north ward of St. Helena. Vast numbers of turtles are found on the shores and it serves as a depot and watering place for ships.

Ascension is governed by a captain appointed by the British admiralty. There is no private property in land, no rents, no taxes and no use for money. The flocks and herds are public property and the meat is issued as rations. So are the vegetables grown on the farms. When an island fisherman makes a catch he brings it to the guardroom, where it is issued by the sergeant major. Practically the entire population are sailors, and they work at most of the common trades. The muleteer is a jack tar, so is the gardener, so are the shepherds, the stockmen, the grooms, masons, carpenters and plumbers. Even the island trapper who gets rewards for the trails of rats is a sailor.

The climate is almost perfect and almost anything can be grown.—Ex.

New Corn and Hog Cholera.

Hogs often take cholera soon after being put on a ration of new corn and its use is often condemned on this account. New corn alone is not the cause of hog cholera, but it may be a factor, along with other conditions, that helps weaken the vitality and renders the animal less resistant to disease. In order that new corn may be fed with safety, the animals should be put in a healthy, vigorous condition before time to begin feeding.

When the animals are in a thrifty condition, there should be much less danger but the hero should be gotten on full feed gradually. It is well to give them a stalk of corn per hog the first day, gradually increasing it by one stalk a head every other day so that it is getting two stalks the third day, three stalks the fifth day, and so on until they are on full feed.

This gives the stomach time to adjust itself to the new ration and is a specially good thing to do before turning old hogs into the field to hog down corn. It is less necessary in case of the shoats which are not so likely to overfeed because they do not have the weight and experience which enable them to break down the stalks very rapidly.

Showing 'em How to Farm.

Making His Last Round.

LETTER FROM INDIANA.

The State of Indiana, and Madison county in particular, is in trouble galore just now, and all comes of the early frost that bit everything but the Wison Presidential boom, which is alright.

Frost did a lot of damage all over the State, destroying the remnant of late potatoes, killing late tomatoes, beans, corn etc.

As much as $100 an acre was cleared on tomatoes after losing 25 per cent by frost. This certainly shows that raising tomatoes is profitable in Indiana.

The prices of cattle and hogs continue flying higher and the farmers keep flying faster in their automobiles. There is only one thing that can fly faster and further than a farmer now, and it is one of Tom Burkett's white chickens. They have a German air-plane beaten a mile.

They tell us that it is indeed an ill wind that don't blow somebody over the fence and out, so the wind that blew the frost upon us nipped all the peanut politicians in the bud, killed the crop of five cent grafters deader than a door nail.

The melodious voice of the snare drum and the squeaking voice of the campaign orator can be heard on all sides. The Democrats are not making much noise but keep on sawing wood early and late. If Mr. Wilson carries the State by 20,000 and Mr. Adair and Tom Taggart are beaten by 10,000 there will be wailing and gnashing of teeth, but who will be to blame? Pray, tell me.

The engineer puts old Kentucky in the Democratic column by a safe majority, so if we should have a safe majority so if we should have a seventh day killing frost in November one for old Kentucky to stay until spring with its etherial mildness and over-shadowing roses shall come and then Hoosier air is more pleasant.

The unexpected sometimes happens but I think there will be nothing doing for G. O. P. this year in Indiana. A Republican is the most peculiar combine of politics that ever came down the pike this year. He is a Democrat when the Alexander Hambletonian Rooseveltian Progressive and disgruntled Democratic Jeffersonian. Such a mixture will try anything one time.

They will try to carry the State for Hughes, Goodrich and Watson and will have about as much luck at it as the fellow who tries to stay on the R. R. track and pass a 50 car fast freight train, as a poor fellow did a few nights since one mile west of here.

PHILIP.

The Pot Versus the Kettle

One of the compensations of being compelled to hear the pot called black by the kettle lies in the fact that one is warned against both, and can keep clean fingers if he desires. This observation leads to consideration of the recent denunciation by the Republican party press of Henry Ford, of Detroit, because he has announced his support of President Wilson. Having said that he was a lifelong Republican, the angered leaders of that party invite inspection of his record as a citizen, which shows that he has voted but four times in thirty years. From this the deduction is made by them that Mr. Ford is a poor guide to follow in public affairs. On the other side of the controversial line it is gathered that Charles Evans Hughes is also a thing reprehensible. It is charged that during the five years he sat upon the Supreme Court bench he took no part whatever in political affairs, neither at the primary nor at the general election. This was especially true in 1912, when the party that has nominated him for President was in a mighty convulsions. More recently he was a hotly contested primary in New York, in which the state party organization supported Congressman Calder, of Brooklyn, for United States Senator as against Robert Bacon, the candidate of Roosevelt and the financial group. Mr. Hughes did not attend the primary, and it with some asperity that the criticizing Democratic press sarcastically draws attention to the fact that he had time enough to congratulate the winners and give them his blessing. From this array of facts, using the logic of the professional politician, the rest of us in the United States are forced to conclude that neither Hughes nor Ford is to be trusted as a leader or teacher.—Enquirer.

TIPS FROM TEXAS.

(Dallas News.)

As a rule, the man who doesn't know how to be polite didn't know how to choose his parents.

Our observations is that after a woman gets married she has fewer ideals and more opinions.

Maybe you also have noticed that after a girl gets married she doesn't care so much about being taught astronomy under the stars.

As a general thing, when a girl's gait indicates that the ground isn't good enough for her to walk on it is a sign that her shoes are hurting her feet.

Another reason why a man is a hypocrite is because when he strains his credit to buy an automobile he tells his wife it is for Her sake.

Silos Popular in Kenton County.

A drive through a considerable portion of Kenton county last Sunday demonstrated to the writer that the silo is very popular with Kenton county people, there being numerous old silos while many new ones are being built, indicating that the silo has come to stay a considerable period in Kenton. In Boone county, though the silo appears to be on the wane and several who heretofore filled silos every fall have abandoned their use as a receptacle for provender. One objection is the labor it requires to fill them while another is it is hard to get the silage out for use, especially where the owner is not so nimble a climber as of yore.

A Big Street Fair.

The Aurora street fair was attended last Saturday by seven or eight thousand people, the streets as well as the sidewalks being a mass of human beings. Excellent order prevailed, everybody apparently being on pleasure bent, while they spent their money freely with the business men. The show was fairly good, and Gov. Ralston's speech entertaining and instructive, it being along lines entirely nonpolitical, Kentuckians composed a considerable per cent of the attendance and were glad they were there.

Campaign Committee Met.

The Democratic county campaign committee met in Burlington, last Saturday, the following members being present:

G. W. Tolin, Burlington.
Chas. Wilson, Rabbit Hash.
Wm. Wilson, Beaver.
Dr. Rankin, Walton.
W. F. Bradford, Florence.
Frank Klaesner, Constance.

Matters pertaining to the campaign and the best way to get out the Democratic vote were discussed, and the situation thoroughly gone over.

Basket Ball at Petersburg.

The Burlington school basket ball teams went to Petersburg, last Friday afternoon and defeated the school teams at that place in very one sided games. This is the first year the school at that place has had a team, and a little later in the season the Petersburg teams will put up a much better game than those of last Friday afternoon.

G. D. Doud of Kenton-co., representing Adams Lodge, and S. W. Bevarly, representing the Walton Lodge, attended the annual session of the Odd-Fellows Grand Lodge at Louisville this week.

Rev. W. B. Garriott, the new pastor of Walton Methodist church, recently assigned from the church at Jackson, held his initial service at the Walton church last Sunday preaching morning and evening to good sized congregations, making a most favorable impression.

Hon. John J. Howe, the popular Commonwealth's Attorney in this judicial District, spent Monday evening here on his way to Williams town to resume his duties in the Grant Circuit Court in session there. He is one of the best officers the district ever had.

Mrs. G. F. Holloway and little son George left Saturday for a three weeks visit to her father W. M. Tichernor in Hardin county, near Sonora, and next Sunday Dr. Holloway and little daughter Grace Efta will leave for Cave City Barren county, for a ten days' visit to his father, where he will be joined by his wife and son.

The protracted meeting being held at the Walton Christian church by the pastor Rev. E. C. Lacy is presenting some of the gospel truths in a very impressive manner, and the music is very entertaining. Thirteen additions have been made to the church so far, and a further increase is expected.

At the State Fair Edward F. Neumeister won first premium on the best display of apples, Thos. Powers won the first premiums on the Poland China hogs. The success of these two enterprising, progressive farmers is a source of gratification to our people, for it is somewhat of an achievement to win first premiums at the State Fair where only the best is exhibited for prizes.

Dr. W. W. Evans left last week for Carlisle, Nichols county, to make his home with his nephew. Dr. Evans in one of the most polished and affable gentlemen who ever made Walton his home, and everybody regrets his departure. He had been a resident of Walton about ten years and during that time he had endeared himself to everybody by his kind and courteous manner and gentlemanly qualities. Dr. Evans was an ordained minister for the Presbyterian church but of late years had no particular charge, preaching only by special request.

Hon. R. B. Brown of Warsaw, spent Friday here attending a meeting of the directors of the Equitable Bank and Trust Co., of which he is a member. He has a wonderful lot of friends among every class and it is chiefly because he does so much to help them and he is as true as steel in every emergency. He has started more men on the road to success and prosperity in Gallatin county and at Warsaw than any other half dozen citizens in that county, and he is as modest about his achievements as a maiden about her first love. Mr. Brown represented this district twice in the State Senate and he was regarded as a very able man, and if he were ambitious he could obtain almost any office in the state.

The Double Three is the name of a young lady's club organized last week at Walton with the following members: Misses Zulu Mayhugh, Mary Hance, Mary Jane Houston, Sybil Hurt, Glenna Rose Gaines, Marie Menefee. A club room has been rented in the John Fink building where weekly meetings are to be held in pursuit of pleasure and social enjoyment.

At the sale of the administrator of the estate of Mrs. Louisa J. Stephenson at her late home last Saturday, the bid of $75 per acre for the 45 acre tract, and $25 for the 35 acre tract were both rejected. The old clock, 102 years old, was sold to Mrs. Ella Haggard, of Cincinnati, one of the heirs, at one hundred dollars; the spinning wheel to Geo. B. Powers at $1.25; the reel to J. P. Cleek for 80 cents; the old walnut and cherry furniture was sold to various parties chiefly as keepsakes.

Hon. E. P. Morrow of Somerset, late Republican candidate for Governor of Kentucky, drew a great crowd to the opera house last Monday night to hear the best speech of a political nature ever made in Walton and it was listened to with rapt attention by everybody for it was an oratorical gem of unusual excellence and was so free from ill nature that the many Democrats present enjoyed it as well as the Republicans. The house was filled to its capacity and many were unable to gain admittance. Mr. Morrow arrived from Shelbyville at about eight o'clock and was met at the train by a special committee who escorted him to the opera house. The meeting was called to order by Judge J. G. Tomlin who was selected to preside over the meeting and in a well timed speech he introduced the speakers, paying a special tribute to Hon. John E. Shepard, of Covington, Republican candidate for congress in this district who made a short and impressive speech, cutting it short so as to give the time to Mr. Morrow who followed in an address of about two hours during which time he was given the most respectful attention. He made a great speech, free from vituperation and abuse, and one that not only enlightens but gives the voter food for reflection.

TOBACCO NOTES.

Tobacco in Bourbon county is curing up in good style.

o o o

Tobacco was curing too fast in Woodford county, when the rains came opportunely and greatly profited the crop.

o o o

Early cut tobacco in Montgomery county cured up nicely and some of it would do to strip. No reports of house burn as yet.

o o o

Slight damage by frost in Massachussetts has not caused any worry to growers.

o o o

The Clark county crop of tobacco is in the barn, and many of the fields sown to small grain, some of the finest yields of wheat are grown after tobacco. The early part of the crop is fine and colory but there will be much dark tobacco in the late part of the crop, while a few barns are ready to strip out, but few crops will be stripped before there is a freeze or two.

A heavy frost and slight freezing in Mason county, badly damaged a large amount of uncut tobacco, there being about one-tenth of the crop in the fields because of scarcity of labor.

Madisonville.—At a regular meeting of Hopkins county fiscal court Judge Will T. Mills named J. M. Flannigan as County Road Engineer to succeed I. B. Earle, whose time has expired. The Magistrates refused to accept the appointment and nominated Mr. Earle to succeed himself, and all but one Magistrate voted for Mr. Earle. According to the Kentucky Statutes the county judge has the power to name the road engineer. The Magistrates stated Mr. Earle knew the roads of the county and had been satisfactory, and they did not want a change in the Road Engineer. Mr. Earle has served for two years, the length of one term. A special term will be called October 30 to right the affair.

Carrollton, Oct. 9.—Three prisoners in the county jail piled bedding with chairs on top, and set fire to the mass, later sending in an alarm of fire. The interior of the building was damaged and the furniture was destroyed, but the men did not escape.

The progress of some members of the "pig clubs" started by the Department of Agriculture is cited in the case of three young brothers in Georgia who after having joined the club bought, a blooded pig each, and breaking away from the methods of hog raising practiced in their neighborhood and adopting the plans of the departm ent's experts secured gains in weight at just half the coost per pound at which increases were secured by neighboring adult farmers of many years' experience.

Low cost in weight gains was secured by the boys by making cooked kitchen waste a large item in the hog's rations and by planting a special tract in cowpeas and corn into which the animals were turned in the fall. The boys carried the project through to completion, doing their own slaughtering. They then ground the appropriate portions of the carcasses into sausage, manufactured lard and souse and sold portions in fresh cuts. Their average profits were approximately $27 on each pig—profits that are often not secured in the neighborhood on an acre of cultivated crops. The youthful hog raisers, following their intensive experience are planning to raise blooded pigs on a large scale.

A noted war correspondent just returned from the battle fields in Europeand who has seen at short range all the horrors of war urges that the people of this country keep Wilson on guard that he may continue to keep the U. S. in peace with honor. He has seen the many attempts of the allies to have this country engage in war with the Germans and of the Germans to have us declare war on the allies and the various attempts of Germany to provoke us to war and has gloried in the masterly and courageous manner in which the president has met every crisis, without involving us in the conflict raging nearly all over the world and knows that while most of the nations now at war hate us they are compelled to respect and do respect the man who has carried every point and kept the country in peace.

The president's reception all along the route to Omaha where he went to deliver a speech at the semi-centennial of the state's admission into the union was a continuous ovation and although he was beseiged to speak he steadfastly refused to break his determination not to make the trip a political one. The efforts to see him and the good natured attempts to have him speak were met with pleasant repartee which was greatly enjoyed. The entire trip proved how close Mr. Wilson is to the people, who regard him as the Moses that has led them out of the wilderness and placed them firmly on the rock of peace, prosperity and happiness. Nothing ever exceeded the reception given him in Omaha and the leaders are more than pleased.

The grip that William Jennings Bryan holds on Kentucky is most remarkable and the desire to hear him comes from every section. In response to this desire the Chairman of the Speakers Bureau, A. B. Rouse, laid claim to his time, but it was so completely filled that the great commoner could be secured only for one day, October 19, when he will speak from Franklin all along the line to Elizabethtown where the last and principal speech of the day will be made and where great preparations to receive are being arranged.

The Court of Appeals divided equally in the contest suit between A. J. Kirk, of Paintsville, and F. D. Sampson, of Barbourville, over the Republican nomination for Appellate Judge in the Seventh district, and judgment of the Knox circuit court in Sampson's favor is affirmed, and his name will go on the ballot.

WILBUR KELLY DEAD.

Wilbur Kelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Kelly, who reside about two miles west of Burlington, died at the home of his parents, at 7 p. m., Monday, after about two weeks illness of infantile paralysis, contracted at Latonia, Kenton county, where he had been residing for some time. The burial took place at Hebron, Wednesday at 11 a. m.

He was the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. James Kelly, being one of a family of three children, two boys and one girl, the latter dying in March 1890, consequently only one of the three children, Howard Kelly is living.

Wilbur Kelly was born Sept., 12, 1891, united with Burlington Baptist church in 1908, and was married to Miss Ella Chowning December 20, 1913. He is survived by his wife and a little girl aged nine months.

For some time previous to being taken ill the deceased had been a faithful employe of the Citizens Motor Co., in Cincinnati, and had resided in Latonia for some time. A few days after he was stricken he was brought to the home of his parents and Dr. Yelton, the family physician at once pronounced the disease infantile paralysis. He continued to grow worse and passed away as above stated.

One very sad feature in the case was the fear of the disease on the part of the neighbors, which confined the nursing of the patient entirely to the members of the immediate family.

Wilbur Kelly was a young man, ambitious to make a success of life and to that end he was bending his efforts in a conscientious manner, and his kind and manly disposition made for him friends of all with whom he came in contact. The tenderest of sympathy goes out from all to the bereaved family whose grief cannot be fathomed.

JOHN H. MASON DEAD.

John H. Mason, 81, died at his home in Big Bone church neighborhood on the 7th inst., of infirmatives incident to old age. He was a son of Johnson and Coney Mason, and was born December 3, 1835. His first wife was Mary L. Smith, who died many years ago. To them was born one son, Chas. B. Mason, who survives his father.

January 11, 1877, Mr. Mason and Miss Adaline Riley were married. She survived several years. In 1890 Mr. Mason was married the third time, Miss Emily Grimsley becoming his wife. She died last February.

Mr. Mason united with Big Bone Baptist church in 1883, and has been a consistent member and a christian for over 30 years, and was liked by all who knew him.

Undertaker John Allison, of Covington, had charge of the funeral, and after the services at Big Bone church conducted by pastor Albert Maddox, the remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery in the presence of a large concourse of friends.

Thinks Well of the Tobacco Crop

J. C. Hughes, of Richwood, who, for many years, has been one of the county's largest tobacco buyers and has kept a close tab on crop conditions, thinks Boone co., has in the house a good crop of tobacco, the per cent of damage resulting from the frost being too small to be taken into consideration. Mr. Hughes is a large stock holder in the loose leaf house that will be in business at Walton this season.

A Long Auto Trip Completed.

A letter received at this office from Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Daugherty announces their safe arrival at their home in Kansas after having visited relatives in Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky. They had a delightful trip in their automobile. They say they will be glad to see at their western home at any time any of their friends and relatives.

Basil Duke a Native of this County

W. C. Piatt, of Chicago, writes the RECORDER that the late General Basil W. Duke was born on the Ransom farm in Richwood neighborhood, this county, and that he accompanied Gen. Duke on one of his visits to his birth place. It will be remembered that in the account of General Duke's death it was stated that he was born in Scott county, this State.

Has a Second Crop of Apples.

County Judge P. E. Cason has in his yard an apple tree that goes one better than J. S. Asbury's tree mentioned last week. Judge Cason's tree did not stop at putting forth a second crop of bloom, but developed the bloom into a second crop of good sized apples that are well on their way to maturity.

Produced Fine Corn.

Wallace Green, of the Belleview neighborhood, says he has very fine yellow corn which he raised from the seed distributed last spring by the Boone County Deposit Bank. So far he is the only one to report his luck with the seed distributed by the bank.

State News.

Shirley Mastin and Ben Boone, employes of the Dixie Highway Garage, Georgetown, were motoring on the Frankfort pike near White Sulphur, this county, when an aged mule ran in front of their car, doing considerable damage to the auto and killing the mule.—Georgetown Times.

Arthur Bowles, a well-known citizen of Beckton, and who was found a few days ago with his throat cut and claimed he did not know who did it, is dead, aged 35 years. He confessed to having tried to kill himself a few days before he died, having grown despondent over ill health.

Marion has one of the few schools in the State that is giving special attention to the science of agriculture. There is being taught in the Marion High School a course in animal husbandry, agronomy and horticulture. James H. Moore, of this city, who is a "Bachelor of Science in Agriculture," is the instructor in these courses.

The farmers of Crittenden county are about thru housing one of the largest crops in acres and the best in quality that has ever been grown in the county. Most of the tobacco has been well fired and is in fine condition for the market. The new corn crop is being gathered and hauled into town and sold for feeding purpcses. It is selling at 50 cents per bushel.

Mrs. Robert Beck brought us some watermelon molasses last week, the first we ever saw and tasted. The syrup is about the color of amber and tastes very much like the ordinary molasses. The molasses is made from the red meat of the melon and is made in very much the same way as sorghum is made and is also eaten pretty much the same way. —Glasgow Times.

At the beginning of winter Kentucky is facing a critical coal famine on account of the shortage in freight cars and the inability of the mine owners to secure miners. The Stearn Coal Company has been seeking hands in Boyle county, but succeeded in getting only a few. So far dealers in Danville have not materially advanced the prices, although their stocks are running low. — Danville Advocate.

Fred Stucey of Ghent, the well known tobacco dealer, sold to T. H. Kirk, representing the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., of Winston-Salem, N. C., 120 hogsheads of tobacco, comprising the entire lot which remained on his hands out of his 1915 purchase. This lot of tobacco represents the better grades out of the lot, the lower grades having already been disposed of. The 120 hogsheads weighed 139,215 pounds. The price paid was a round price for the lot and was not made public.

A novel question will come before the Court of Appeals for decision when the case of H. L. Boggs, of Jackson county, indicted for selling liquor without a license, and fined $60, reaches the court. Irvine Jayne, a farmer of Johnson county, took his apples to Bogg's distillery and had them made into brandy, the men sharing equally in the brandy. The question for the court to decide is whether Boggs is guilty of selling liquor without a license by reason of making brandy out of Jayne's apples and giving him half of the liquor.

Gallatin seems to have the best tobacco crop for several years, the crop this year, both in quality and pounds looking to be a vastly superior article over that of a year ago. Practically all of the crop is in the barn and it is virtually clear of frost bitten tobacco. With good curing weather and fair handling, the crop should go to market in the best condition it has for years. The utmost care should be used in the handling of the crop from this on, as many a crop that came to cutting in fine condition has been ruined by care less handling later on.—Warsaw Independent.

Much excitement was created when Mrs Hobdy's buggy horse fell in the cellar at the Hobdy home on State, near Twelfth street The horse is blind and someone left him in the yard to graze, and he fell in the cellar and being blind could not even try to get out. A block and tackle had to be resorted to and that with a dozen or more men, after more than an hour's work, rescued the animal from the predicament. Aside from a few skinned and bruised places places on the horse's hips and legs he seemed to have been as good as ever after his rescue. — Bowling Green News.

A reader of the Gazette who at all times alive to the interest of the working man has made an estimate of the driving done by a mail carrier for the benefit of the man who thinks the carrier has a sinecure job. He has figured it out that Henry Weatherford, one of our most popular men, and who has the longest route in the county, twenty-four miles, has ridden 115,600 miles, or nearly as far as five times around the globe, since he began carrying the mail. The rural route in Hickman county will have been in existence fourteen years next March, al of which time Henry has been on the job.—Clinton Gazette.

Couldn't Get Across.

The work of repairing the Burlington and Petersburg pike was discontinued Tuesday at the second covered bridge west of Burlington, as the bridge would not hold up the steam roller and it could not be taken around. The repairing outfit was taken to the Burlington and Belleview pike and put to work.

The local banks will be closed today, Thursday, it being Columbus Day, which is a legal holiday.

Spent the Day at Big Bone.

Sheriff Cropper, Master Commissioner Maurer, Judge Tolin and Newton Sullivan, Sr., spent last Monday at Big Bone Springs, it being Mr. Sullivan's first visit to that historic locality. The day was enjoyed and especially the trip home, which was noted for the vocal music rendered by Messrs. Tolin and Sullivan.

The work of putting down concrete sidewalks in Burlington is progressing nicely.

Hurried Home.

Col. John R. Whitson, who had been recreating among his kindred in Waterloo and Gunpowder neighborhoods, made a bee line for his home in Florence, last Monday evening in a very short time after the arrival of the cooling zephyr that swept the country that afternoon. He has good judgment.

Alex Sandford, of Latonia, is engaged doing carpenter's work for Fred Morris.

Local Happenings.

Farmers of Kenton county will hold a chautauqua at Independence on the 26th inst.

Monday was a very big day politically at Williamstown and side track'd circuit court for the day.

The rain Sunday night took down many leaves which the frosts had prepared for the descent.

Last month J. O. Huey, manager of Clover Leaf Creamery, Burlington, received 7,663.2 pounds of butter fat.

Sheriff Crupper reports the payment of taxes as very slow this fall, but looks for a big rush a little later on.

More rye is being sowed than usual this fall. Only a few years ago the rye crop had about played out in this county.

The rain last Sunday night was a great help to the pastures, which, in some neighborhoods, were short and drying out badly.

Clinton Gaines' sale last Saturday afternoon was fairly attended and the property that was put under the hammer brought fairly good prices.

Read all the new advertisements in this issue before going to make purchases of non advertisers. The merchants who use the columns of the Recorder are reliable.

The first number of the Boone High News, for this session of the Boone County High School, appeared last week, and was as bright and spicy as of yore.

If you want to be one of the list of those who have their farms posted, send your name and 25 cents to this office. The list will be carried through the hunting season.

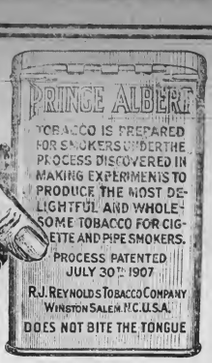
Judge Sidney Gaines came home from Williamstown, last Saturday afternoon and remained until Monday afternoon, giving politics full away that day, which was also county court day.

A large tobacco barn belonging to L. D. Leet, star route mail carrier, was blown down Wednesday afternoon of last week during a windstorm. The barn contained 4,500 sticks of tobacco.—Oldham Era.

Edson Riddell drove an auto party over to Falmouth, last Sunday afternoon, returning by the way of Williamstown, the distance traveled being 96.1 miles. The roads traveled were generally, in fair condition.

As Stanley Stephens was coming down the hill on the East Bend road near A. L. Nichols', Sunday night, the young mare attached to his buggy became unruly and began kicking. The buggy was badly wrecked, but Mr. Stephens escaped without injury. He hauled the vehicle home Monday.

The Recorder received one day the past week, an envelope, which when opened, delivered a nice photograph on the table, and upon inspection it was found to be a splendid picture of Ben Zimmer, one of the best catchers in this part of base balldom. He was in full uniform and ready for action when the photo was taken.



Esq. Charles Wilson, of Rabbit Hash, was in Burlington last Saturday, and exhibited to the Recorder a printed copy of the Democratic ticket which was voted for at the August election, 1865. For Governor, J. H. Garrard, Franklin county. For Congress, A. H. Ward, Harrison county. for Representative, Jas. M. Corbin, of Union.

A considerable delegation of Taylorsport people came to Burlington, one day last week, to lay before County Judge Cason the facts in a controversy between some of them that culminated in a fistic performance in which, fortunately, no one was seriously injured. Judge Cason gave a patient ear to each side and found the statements made by each party so elaborate and tangled that he could not adjust the trouble right off the real, consequently the court took time and told the people from Taylorsport to depart.

Voting for a majority of the party's candidates will not qualify a voter for participating in that party's primary, said the Court of Appeals last week, affirming the Lincoln circuit court, which had held insufficient the indictment of Everett Carson and Thomas Bell, Democratic primary officers at Houstonville precinct, charged with not permitting Livingston Cooper to vote. The court said under the law, if a man votes against any candidate of a party at the preceding general election he is not affiliated with that party and cannot vote in its primary.

Mrs. Gillum, wife of Mr. John Gillum, died at Ashland at the home of her son, Tom Gillum, after an illness of eight weeks. She was 85 years old and was born in Magoffin county. She belonged to what is known as "Foot-Washing Baptists." She always requested that, when death came her daughters should dress and prepare her for burial, and that her son, Isaac, a preacher, should make her coffin, as she wanted no undertaker about. Mrs. Gillum also asked to be sent to her grave in the old wagon that she and her husband had used for so many years in going to meetings. Her requests were carried out.—Mt. Sterling Advocate.

One day last week R. G. Upton, of near High Bridge, passed thru Nicholasville with two wagonloads of pumpkins destined for the Lexington market. G. H. Jarvis is not only a fruit grower, but ranks high as a farmer. He brought to this office a sample of his corn, it was from the eleventh successive crop of corn grown on the land and he never used any fertilizer. A natural curiosity in the shape of a petrified shoe is on display in the show window of A. J. Winters & Co. The petrification is in the exact shape of a cast-off shoe minus a portion of the upper. The nail heads in the heel can be faintly seen, while the curled up toe is suggestive of the days when the wearer was probably "on his toes." The stone was found in a field near Ruckerville, in Clark county, by Mr. Varden Shipp, of Clintonville, and brought to Paris.—Paris Bourbon News.

Something rare and unusual in the tobacco trade is the demand this season in all parts of the tobacco growing sections of the State for "suckers" dealers offering two and three cents a pound. Here in Robertson farmers have been offered three cents, but it is probable that not much effort will be made to save very many "sucker" crops. Counting the cost of the extra work of housing, stripping, etc., three cents does not leave a very fair profit. Besides many farmers are seeding their tobacco lands. — Olivet Tribune.

A big crop of tobacco has been grown on the Mrs. L. D. Richards farm near town this year, and the yield is conservatively estimated at 50,000 pounds. This tobacco has done much better both in pounds and quality than the crop on the same ground did last year and has been cut and the greatest part housed without the slightest damage from the frost. Among the tenants who grew the largest part of this was Mart Furnish, who grew a big part of the crop. Wheeler Jones also handled several acres.—Warsaw Independent.

Col. John W. Anderson, the capitalist and financier, has at his home near Pulaski quite a "curiosity shop." Among the wonderful and unique things in his collection is a curiously marked corn cob. Nature, with the skill of the finest artist, has wrought the almost perfect hand of a child. There is so much of the touch of the human about it that in handling this almost marvelous production of nature, one can hardly keep from feeling that somewhat it must be more than a mere corn cob. All the fingers are delicately traced and in correct and almost startling proportion. Even the thumb is arranged in perfect position, and the lines of the hand back to the wrist are finely drawn. As we examined this "Frankenstein Wonder" we almost instinctively found ourselves asking the question: "Is there a kinship between all nature?" Col. Anderson prizes the relic very highly, and rarely lets it go beyond his strong locker.—Somerset News.

KILLING MILK BACTERIA

No Objection to Pasteurization When Properly Done.

Seems Probable That Within Few Years Supply for Large Cities Will Be Thus Treated—Three Processes Now in Use.

There is no valid objection to pasteurization when properly performed, and the process makes safer even the most carefully handled and inspected milk. It seems probable that within the next two years a large proportion of the milk supply in the large cities will be pasteurized. There is already a marked tendency in this direction.

Before the value of pasteurization as a hygienic measure was as well recognized as it is today, it was practiced in secret by a number of milk dealers as a means of preserving milk and preventing it from souring. Its commercial value in this respect is undoubtedly great, but its chief function is the destruction of disease-producing organisms. Proper pasteurization should destroy about 99 per cent of all the bacteria in the milk, although when the bacterial count of the raw milk is low the reduction may be somewhat smaller. The efficiency of the process, it is pointed out, cannot be based on the per cent, but rather on the character of the bacteria destroyed.

The kinds of bacteria that remain alive after pasteurization depend on the temperature to which the milk is heated and the species of bacteria which are in the raw milk. Three processes of pasteurization, known respectively as the flash process, the holder process and pasteurization in the bottle, are now practiced in this country. In the flash process the milk is raised quickly to a temperature of about 160 degrees F. or more, held there for from 30 seconds to a minute, and then cooled quickly. In the holder process the milk is heated to a temperature of from 140 degrees to 150 degrees F. and held there for half an hour. When pasteurization in bottles is practiced, the raw milk is put into bottles with water-tight seal caps, which are immersed in hot water and held for from 20 to 30 minutes at a temperature of 145 degrees F. In this way the pasteurized milk is not subjected to any danger of reinfection. On the other hand, the seal caps must be absolutely tight and this involves increased cost. In general, it may be said that the holder process is coming into greater favor than either of the others. This process permits of the use of lower temperatures which, for various reasons, is highly desirable.

RATE OF SEEDING FLAX CROP

Where Rainfall Is Not More Than Twenty Inches Twenty Pounds to Acre Is Recommended.

Where the annual rainfall is not more than 20 inches, flax need not be sown at a greater rate than 20 pounds to the acre. This should be reduced to 15 pounds under drier conditions. Where the rainfall is more than 20 inches, a slightly higher yield may be obtained if 25 pounds are sown to the acre. The sowing of more than 25 pounds to the acre on nonirrigated land does not pay.

SHALLOW PLOWING IN FAVOR

Loose Soil Conserves Moisture—Kills Weeds and Puts Land in Much Better Condition.

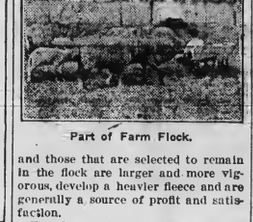
Water moves slowly through a loose soil and a loose soil will, therefore, serve as a mulch and conserve moisture. This is one of the reasons for shallow cultivation. Killing weeds, putting the land in better physical condition and furnishing modes of entrance for oxygen and nitrogen are other reasons. Failure to cultivate properly is one way of farming at a loss.

PAINT IS GOOD INVESTMENT

It Is Necessity If Life of Building Is to Be Considered—Apply Often as Required.

Paint is not a luxury to be added to the building some time in the future—perhaps not until decay has taken place—it is a necessity if the life of the building is to be considered, and is a profitable investment that should be made as often as the farm buildings require it.

FARM ANIMALS



GOOD START FOR THE LAMBS

Provide Creep to Protect Trough for Exclusive Use of Youngsters—Give Mixture of Grain.

(By H. L. GARRIGUS, Connecticut Experiment Station.)

A creep or hurdle should be arranged to protect a trough in which is kept for the exclusive use of the lambs, a supply of mixed grain. This should consist of corn, five parts; oats, two parts; bran, two parts, and oil meal, one part. Some fine clover or alfalfa hay should also be accessible. The ewes should be encouraged to keep up a good flow of milk, as this, too, is an important factor in the development of a good lamb.

Lambs reared in this way are less apt to suffer from stomach worms; command a higher price per pound, and those that are selected to remain in the flock are larger and more vigorous, develop a heavier fleece and are generally a source of profit and satisfaction.

Too frequently the flock master is tempted to butcher the largest and fattest lambs for the extra value represented in the immediate sale. This is a grave mistake, and should never be practiced if a good breeding flock is to be maintained. The same careful attention should be paid to selection as is used in the selection of dairy cattle and laying hens. Wool at 35 cents and lambs touching $13.10 per hundred on foot and wholesale should result in more interest in sheep husbandry, particularly where the labor problem is a serious one and the need of some kind of live stock is felt.

MARKING SYSTEM FOR SHEEP

Convenient Method of Apprehending Ewes Which Have Neglected or Abandoned Lambs.

The farmer who has had trouble on account of ewes failing to give proper attention to lambs, thus losing track of them altogether, will find that a system of marks with paint will enable the ewes and lambs to be got together again at any subsequent day in case the lamb be abandoned. Simply give both ewe and lambs a touch of paint on the same part of the body, each ewe and her lamb being marked at a different point, says a writer in an exchange. We have marked as many as a hundred in this way and have often had occasion to use the system afterwards in apprehending careless ewes.

COSTS $100 TO KEEP HORSE

Estimate Given by Farm Management Department of the Nebraska College of Agriculture.

The cost of keeping a horse on the farm for a year in eastern Nebraska is upward of $100, according to the farm management department of the college of agriculture. It cost $60 for feed, $7.50 for interest at 5 per cent on a valuation of $150 for the horse, $15 for 10 per cent depreciation on the horse, $12 for 75 hours care at 16 cents an hour, $7.50 for shelter and enough more for expenses to make it total over $100. In western Nebraska, on account of the lower cost of feed, the cost of keeping a horse is estimated to be somewhat less.

DEMANDS OF CATTLE MARKET

Knowledge Is Source of Both Profit and Satisfaction—Select Animals for Rapid Gains.

The man who understands market demands and who has the ability to select animals for the feed lot that will make consistent, rapid and economical gains throughout the feeding period and meet the market requirements, will find this knowledge a source of both profit and satisfaction.

FAVOR MOVABLE HOG HOUSES

Possible to Distribute Animals Over Farm in Clean Quarters—Less Danger of Disease.

Movable hog houses make it possible to distribute the hogs over the farm in clean, fresh quarters, thereby utilizing grass and forage crops to the highest degree and at the same time reducing the danger of disease to a minimum.

BEEF CATTLE IN CORN-BELT STATES

HERD OF HEREFORDS ON WESTERN PASTURE.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That cattle in most cases add to the farm income in the corn belt is indicated by the results of a recent investigation conducted by the United States department of agriculture as part of a comprehensive study of the meat situation in which its specialists have been engaged for some time. The direct profit from the raising of calves in this section, the averages seem to establish, is usually small, but the investigators point out that there are other factors which make the practice more advantageous than would appear at first sight.

Among these advantages are the fact that live stock on the farm provides a home market and a means of utilization of farm roughage, some of which might be wasted if not fed, and the use of pastures which could not be employed profitably in any other way. Live stock also affords a ready home market for certain other crops, which at times would have to be hauled considerable distances to be sold. Finally, the presence of live stock on the farm gives productive employment throughout the year to labor which at certain seasons might otherwise be idle. Live stock also gives some interest on capital invested on equipment which would produce nothing if not utilized at all seasons. The fertilizing value of manure also must be considered. When these factors are taken into consideration, even though there appears to be little or no profit as shown by cost figures, it is believed that in most instances the farm income is greater because of cattle having been kept on the farm. The keeping of live stock, therefore, is to be recommended on farms having large quantities of cheap roughage available or having land which can be best utilized as pasture.

Summary of Results.

The figures of costs cited by the investigators are purely averages based on actual farms and herds investigated. The investigators obtained in 1914 and 1915, 5,966 records from farms in Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas. These records dealt with 14,634 cows, 621 bulls and 12,591 calves produced from them, of which 2,023 were classed as baby beef.

Classification of Records.

These were arranged in six groups based on six distinct practices followed by the farmers of this region. These are:

(1) Beef.—Farms where all the cows are kept strictly for beef (except baby beef), in which there is no sale of milk and butter.

(2) Baby beef.—Farms devoted to the production of high-grade calves fattened and sold at from 12 to 18 months of age.

(3) Dual purpose.—Farms on which all the cows are milked and the calves weaned at birth and raised on skim milk.

(4) Mixed.—Farms where the best cows are milked, their calves being weaned at birth, while calves from other cows run with their dams. This is a combination of beef and dual purpose.

(5) Partially milked.—Farms on which calves are not weaned but on which a part of the milk is drawn from the cow, the calf taking the remainder.

(6) Double nursing.—Farms where some of the cows are milked and their calves given to other cows.

Summary of Results.

The following summaries are based on these six classifications and are given as averages from the records of the farms and live stock actually reported. The conclusions are averages for the entire section studied and the reader must bear in mind that there are wide divergences in cost in the several states. For this reason the report, after considering the general problem, deals in great detail with the range of costs in the several states and the averages for the several sections. The following are the more important facts cited in the summary:

Net cost	53.54	70.52	36.89	45.86	41.42	30.25

(a) The statement for the baby-beef group gives figures on the calves until they are marketed at approximately 15 months of age.

(b) The change in the number of farms on which the tabulation of cost of producing yearlings is based caused the figure on cost of calf at weaning time to change in this part of the table.

(c) The figures underscored call attention to the fact that the baby-beef animal is carried somewhat beyond the yearling stage.

In discussing the different costs the investigators point out that the difference between the net cost and the gross cost for the different groups is partly due to credit for manure and largely to credit for milk products from the cows that were milked. The high cost of maintenance of bulls where baby beef calves are produced is largely due to the fact that breeding bulls of high quality are necessary. The bull charge is determined largely by the number of calves produced per bull. While the cow charge for raising a calf was lowest in the dual-purpose group, the addition of the cost of feed and labor for the skim milk calves makes the cost of the calf somewhat greater than in the double-nursing group. Winter feeding costs indicate that there is comparatively little difference in the cost of keeping calves in the five groups other than the baby beef after weaning time. The "credits" for baby beef calves, amounting to $7.53, include an allowance for manure and pork. Beef calves, though the most valuable as yearlings, cost so much more than the others that, according to averages, they were the least profitable. The cost of production exceeded inventory value by $15. All calves, except those of the baby beef group, were inventoried just before being turned on pasture at a time when the cost of the calf is greatest as compared with its value. It is believed that if the records had included data on the calves until the following November that the difference between the cost and value would have been much less. The calves in the dual-purpose group, although the poorest in quality, seem to rank second in point of profit.

The cost of production was lowest for calves in the double-nursing group, and as these animals are relatively of good quality they showed the greatest profit. Although there were but 22 farms in this group, the results seem, to the investigators, significant.

USING WHEAT FOR HOG FEED

Information of Much Value Obtained in Experimental Work Carried On at Missouri College.

(By L. A. WEAVER, Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station.)

The Missouri agricultural experiment station has obtained information of value to pork producers, especially in seasons when the corn crop is short, by carrying on experimental work with other crops grown on the farm. By conducting feeding trials with wheat it has been shown that under some conditions wheat may well be used for hog feeding instead of corn. Results obtained show that when corn is worth 70 cents or more a bushel, wheat may be profitably substituted for corn, if the wheat is worth 90 cents or less. Likewise if corn is worth 80 cents per bushel, wheat is worth $1.03 a bushel as hog feed.

It has been further shown that pork may be produced more cheaply by adding a small amount of tankage to a mixture of corn and wheat than by feeding these feeds without such a supplement.

For example, the cost of producing 100 pounds of pork with corn and tankage was 60 cents less than when corn alone was used. This would mean an additional profit to the producer of $100 or more on each carload of hogs fed.

The results of these tests are reported in full in Bulletin 136 entitled Feeding Wheat to Fattening Hogs, published by the Missouri agricultural experiment station.

WHITEWASH ABOUT THE FARM

Recipe Given by Nebraska College of Agriculture—Great Help in Destroying Insects.

For general use about the farm buildings to assist in destroying insects, the following recipe for whitewash is offered by the Nebraska College of Agriculture: Slake five quarts of lime with hot water to about the consistency of cream. To this add one pint of zenoleum or some other coal-tar product, and one quart of kerosene. Dilute with about its volume of water; apply with a brush or a pump. This solution when properly applied accomplishes three things: (1) Zenoleum acts as a disinfectant by killing disease germs; (2) the kerosene aids in destroying mites; and (3) the lime whitens the house.

The wreck was the result of the driver passing another machine, and swinging back into the road too suddenly. It is claimed that the radius rod breaking was the cause of the accident. One colored woman and a small child were hurt considerably.

A 500 Pound Pumpkin.

(New York Herald.)

The largest pumpkin that ever obstructed a field, foundered a wagon or produced neighborhood gasps is now at Sayville, L. I., where it was grown by Eugene Cocheu. It weighs 500 pounds, is a Titan blonde, three feet tall and nine feet around the waist.

Mr. Cocheu in laying this important vegetable matter before the world, offered $100 to any farmer at any point on the face of the earth who could produce one as large. He declared it the greatest pumpkin in the history of the world, and a search of all records under the captions pumpkin, pump, ump, mpk, kin and nikpmup indicates that he is not no ticeably mistaken. Unquestionably he has some pumpkin.

No Bank Failures in China

Nine hundred years ago China had a bank failure. Hi Hung, ruler of the Celestial Empire at the time, investigated and discovered shady conduct on the part of the bank officials. He immediately issued an edict that the next time a bank went to the wall the heads of its President and Directors should be forfeited.

Since then there have been no bank failures in China. This method of dealing with frenzied finance may not be appealingly poetic, but it appears to have been indisputably effective.—Sioux City Tribune.

KENTUCKY BROTHERS

Give Battle To Posse—Four Men and a Woman Wounded.

Greensburg, October 9.—Besieging the home of Dee Haynes, near Camp Knox, eight miles from here, 25 men engaged in a battle with Luther and Mont Sneed, who had taken possession of the house. Luther Sneed was probably fatally wounded and four other men and one woman shot.

The Sneed brothers, it is charged, came from their home near Gradyville, Adair county, drove Haynes out of his house and took possession. Hayne's wife and a 16 year-old girl named Rogers, who made her home there, were ordered to stay.

Haynes summoned help, and with Will Rogers, the girl's father, and Al Rogers, her uncle, gathered a posse of 25 men, who attacked the Haynes home. In the fusillade Hayne's wife was badly wounded. Both the Rogers brothers and Haynes were shot.

Mont Sneed, who fled, is also believed wounded, as blood was found along his trail.

Dr. Alex Shively, of Greensburg, went to the Haynes home and attended the wounded. Luther Sneed is so badly wounded that he has been unable to make a statement.

Blowing Hay Into Box Cars.

Blowing hay into box cars instead of bailing it is one of the newest time saving schemes employed on the Umatilla Project, near Harmosilo, Oregon. In this region alfalfa grows so abundantly that bailing was found to be a slow and cumbersome process. To eliminate this work, ordinary blowers such as used in planing mills to handle shavings were fitted up with gasoline engines or efectric motors and put to work blowing the chopped hay into the box cars.

When these cars reached their destination, this blowing process was reversed, with the result that the hay was soon blown bodily from the cars and shot into the big warehouse or stockyards bins. There is a decided saving of time and labor with this new method and besides it is possible to load more hay in a car than with baled hay.—Ex.

HEART TO HEART TALK

Why Go Away for Recreation.

Whether you're out with old Dobbin or driving your auto, it's handy to do your shopping in a concentrated sort of way.

You don't get your brogands in one shoe store, your fancy-foots in another and your gum shoes in a third. You have a regular store that carries all of 'em at your range of price. You get all that you want in drugs at drug stores while you're there. Likewise at the hardware store. And so the same with the "CLOAK and SUITS"—as long as the wherewithal stays above zero.

And when you buy, isn't it fine to be able to concentrate your purchase of Gloves, Hosiery, Underwear, Cloaks, Suits, Waists, Millinery, etc. and novelties with one house; Pardon, but we speak with particular reference to ourselves.

And to have the range of price and quality sufficiently large so that you can make a clean sweep of it and then to be sure that you are going to get the nice stuff. Really we don't see why people go away for recreation when they can have so much fun buying from our house.

Gloves

We have secured an importation of Kid Gloves which in price and quality surpasses anything on the market at the present time.

THE PHENOMENON EXPLAINED

Perhaps the readers of the RECORDER will remember mention made in these columns of a strange path of light across the sky one night not long since. People of middle age said they had never seen anything like it and both in Burlington and Petersburg the path was observed by a large number of persons.

The following article taken from "The Visitor" explains fully what this phenomenon was:

What a strange sight would have been presented to an astronomer in a near-by region of space had he seen the moon in its earlier days, according to the theory of some scientists! Its relation to another theory recently formulated concerning the earth makes an explanation necessary.

Imagine the semi-plastic ball of the moon rapidly rotating and revolving at a comparatively close position around the earth. Into its partially molten surface large and small meteors impinged themselves with a velocity swifter than that of bullets. They splashed and cut its cooling surface and left its face scarred and seared as we see it with the telescope today, according to this strange theory. But all astronomers do not accept this as the truth, and others claim that the moon's craters were formed by volcanic action—violent explosions within the lunar surface.

If the most recent explanation of the zodiacal light is correct, there is reason be believe that perhaps the earth was surrounded at one time by a vast assemblage of meteoric bodies. With a telescope it would have been seen by astronomers on Jupiter's moons as a ball surrounded by a ring just as Saturn is seen today, tho inferior to that splendid planet in size.

For centuries men have observed a pale light before dawn. It has also been seen reaching upward into the sky like a pyramid of luminous haze built upon the place of the departed sun after nightfall. In the spring and in the autumn the phenomenon known as the zodiacal light is best displayed to the observers remote from the equator. At that time of the year the, ecliptic, or center of the zodiac, forms the greatest angle with the horizon.

The zodiacal light is so called because it always extends along the ecliptic. As the plane of the ecliptic is projected higher at the time of the equinoxes, the faint light which lies along its path is better distinguished from the low masses of haze near the horizon. Systematic observations of the phenomena have shown several interesting things. Besides extending upward above the horizon it apparently passes entirely across the sky. When conditions are perfect for detecting so subtle an object, a faint patch of luminosity is found directly opposite the sun and is known as the Gegenschein, or the light opposite. Before moonrise a curious pillar of extremely faintly illuminated matter corresponds with the position of the zodiacal light. At first an explanation which seemed to be satisfactory was offered.

It was suggested that a band of meteors surrounded the earth and the sunlight reflected from them was responsible for the phenomenon. An objection was raised on the grounds that the position of the brightest part of the light did not correspond with its theoretical position. If a band of meteors stretched across our night sky, they would emulate the phases of the moon. Those nearest the horizon at sunset would be the smallest crescents, while those remote from the position of the sun or more nearly opposite would be seen entirely illuminated, like full moons. Therefore the brightest part of the zodiacal light would have to be in the east at sunset instead of in the west. Another idea accounted for what seemed so perplexing by the assumption that the ring of meteors did not surround the earth, but went entirely around the sun at a distance greater than the orbit of the earth, those nearer the sun being brighter because seen more in mass and less scattered than the ones in the position of the Gegenschein.

Quite recently considerable evidence has been offered to support the possibility of an earth ring of meteors. As in the case of Saturn, a swarm of miniature moons is supposed to surround the earth at a comparatively inconsiderable distance from the surface. It is probably thinner than the Saturnian rings, and its moons are more scattered. The comparison is more appropriate when applied to the innermost ring of Saturn, known as the Gauze Ring because of its shadowlike, semi-transparent appearance. An important difference is that if the earth has a ring it does not correspond with the position of the Saturnian rings. They are in the exact plane of the planet's equator while ours is in the plane of the ecliptic. The brightness near the horizon, where there is less area illuminated as the meteors are seen from the earth, is explained by the supposition that the earth's shadow falls athwart the meteoric ring. We can see the black shadow of Saturn cast upon its girding bands of light, and perhaps at closer range the dimming effect of the penumbra could be detected.

If we assume that such a frail appendage circles around our planet, we would see it only as far as the sunlight fell upon it between the horizon and where the earth's shadow fell across the band of little satellites. The full moon rising would cast a glow upon them in the part of the sky opposite, and this might explain the lunar zodiacal light. Sunlight refrected in the earth's atmosphere might be sufficient to cause the Gegenschein. It is noticeable at the distance of the moon during a total eclipse of the moon.

In any event it is interesting that the earth-ring theory has been revived. If observers could view our sphere from the distance of the moon, perhaps a filmy band of light would be seen—like a feeble imitation of Saturn.—"The Visitor."

The Real Reason.

Newspapers in the adjoining counties and in Indiana, in commenting on the recent tragedy at Sanders in which two men, one of them the sheriff of Carroll county, were killed, attach undue significance, we believe, to the fact that Lucien Rice, who was the man killed while resisting arrest, and who also killed the man arressing him, escaped the penalty of the law for many past misdeeds on account of his being of a prominent family.

We believe, furthermore, that undue severity has been used in the terms in which Rice has been spoken of. Surely whatever his career may have been, the charity of the grave should cover all, should end all. While it is true that the deeds of the dead live after them, it is equally true that they so live, not to give occasion for bolding and reproachful thought or word, but rather as a warning to those who come along the pathway of life further along the road. It matters not what was the life of Lucien Rice, he is, after all, the chiefest sufferer, and he alone must make atonement. It is not ours to inquire too closely into the adjustment of those differences between a man and his God. Our province ends this side of the grave—God's logline where our dwarfed and limited ken has ended, and is presages an eternity of judgment and adjustment in the years to come.

So, with the dead, we bury the reproach that would fall from living lips. We realize, too, that the responsibility for the misdeeds of those who have passed do not rest on them alone. The obligation incumbent on every man to lend his aid to law enforcement, rest, after all, too lightly, upon us all. Lucien Rice did not escape possibly merited punishment in the past simply because he was of a prominent family. No, that was not the cause. The real and underlying cause of it all was a derelict jury system that exists not alone in Kentucky, but elsewhere, as well. The elements of friendship, of social ties, of business interest, unfortunately enter too largely into the general view of the average juror as he tries a case. They enter so largely that the one dominant idea that should rule his entire line of thought the enforcement of the law—is oft lost to view, and is but lightly considered, after all. The supremacy of the law should be kept to the foreground—it should give place to no other consideration—but it does. And the juror of today or tomorrow must learn better in the future It is no exaggerated view to state that the juror who by his mistaken leniency turns loose on the public a malefactor, is partly responsible for every crime that this man commits against society after freedom has been accorded him.—Warsaw Independent.

Shipment of horses and mules for the European war, which for a time had decreased materially in the last few months, again has taken on greater activity, and it is said that in the last 24 hours more than 150 cars carrying approximately 33,000 horses, have been shipped thru Covington to Newport News, over the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, it was said more trains may be expected.—Covington item in Monday's Enquirer.

SALT AS A HEALER.

The preservative, the cleansing and the soothing effects of salt have been known for ages. To this extent, and with some recognition of existing practices, the use of saline solutions in British military hospitals is not new. The interesting points are in the evolution of salt to the position of a sole healing agent, and in the method of application by a constant stream which, in a continuous flow, washes the wound, guards it from infection and contributes healing power. An ancient and common household article thus supplants, after initial disinfecting, the highly scientific, antiseptic appliance of the day. This elaboration of an old remedy recalls to mind the medical stir which followed in 1901 the publication from the University of Chicago, by Dr. Jacques Loeb and Prof. D. J. Lingle of the theory that a solution of common salt in the blood, neutralized by calcium and possibly potassium salt solution, was the cause of the rhythmic beating of the heart, says New York World. All doctors had known of saline injections to stimulate the heart. Those who hesitated over the new proposition admitted the physiological importance of salt and its ability after a hemorrhage, to supply the deficiency in circulation until new blood is made. Inland people of old esteemed saline springs as gifts of the gods. Chips of salt were anciently used as money, and the mineral stood, as many passages in the Bible testify, for high religious symbolism. The sharing of salt represented in other days a sacred pledge of friendship. A precious and essential quantity in our daily living, though but casually regarded on the grocer's bill for supplies, salt may yet be revealed in a more intimate relation to life itself than daring scientists have guessed.

Imports of agricultural products into the United States are increasing more rapidly than exports of agricultural products; thus, in the five-year period 1897-1901 imports equaled 44 per cent of the exports of agricultural products; in the five-year period 1907-1911 the percentage was increased to 64 per cent; and in the years 1912-1914 (the latest available) the percentage had further increased to 75 per cent. The total exports of agricultural products from the United States in 1914 were valued at $1,114,000,000, and imports at $907,000,000—imports in that year thus equaling 81 per cent of exports.

Losses from preventable animal diseases in the United States amount to $312,000,000 annually. These losses are being slowly decreased through the work of the national and state governments. The federal government is gradually increasing its appropriations for the investigation and prevention of animal disease and the work is now very thorough. Had there been no epidemic of the hoof-and-mouth disease last year, which was an unexpected development, the loss of stock would have shown a marked decrease, in the opinion of the department of agriculture officials.

Another pathetic little feature of everyday life is the way our prominent amateur literati will send an editor original poems and try to get him to put them in the paper by inclosing personal notes saying that these lines have never been published before, this apparently being the only possible argument in favor of publishing them now.

Now a Gotham theorist comes forward to suggest that the cutting out of children's tonsils, which has been among the popular operations of the day, has helped to bring about the epidemic of infantile paralysis. So does one age repudiate the medical fashions of its predecessor.

The prediction of the shoe men that we'll soon be wearing wooden shoes puts it up to inventive genius good and plenty. Both high wooden heels and high wooden tops will have to be devised.

A man likes to hear himself mentioned as the possessor of a great mind, but he rarely possesses the comprehension to understand how he can fool people that way.

WOMEN GO TO JAIL

Rather Than Have Their Children to Attend School.

Having failed to pay the fines of $5.00 and costs assessed against each of them in the county court several weeks ago for violation of the state's compulsory education law, Mrs. Mary Tyree and Mrs. J. E. Johnson, of the Waynesburg section of the county, were brought to jail here Monday by Deputy Sheriff Monroe Thompson. Each will be required to serve seven days in jail on the present fines but as each declares she will not obey the law and send her children to school, they will in all probability, have other convictions and sentences ahead of them. Both women declare they will not send their children to school, as they are taught "nothing but lies" in school.

Mrs. Johnson, who is a stepdaughter of Mrs. Tyree, is a daughter of Samuel Tyree, of the Waynesburg section, where they have lived for about three years, having moved there from Whitley City. Mrs. Johnson calls herself an evangelist of the Church of God and denies the report that she is a holy roller. When interviewed this morning by an I. J. representative, Mrs. Johnson, who is the evangelist of this church, called the Church of God, said that they had no creed, except Christ. She said, "The law can compel us to go to jail, but cannot compel us to send our children to school, where they are taught nothing but lies by teachers who are not christians, and the books that they study are full of lies. It is against our belief to send our children to school, as they are given to us to train them the way we think best and it is our duty to keep our children at home and teach them the Word of God and not send them to school to be taught by man, claiming that God is able to make wise the simple." Mrs. Johnson quoted, "Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind," Romans 14-5, saying that she had a right to her belief as to how to train her children.

Mrs. Johnson is the mother of five children from the ages of one to thirteen years old. Her husband is working in the machine shops at New Castle, Ind., and came here last week and wanted to pay his wife's fine and move his family to New Castle, but Mrs. Johnson refused to go, saying that she would not go until after she had served her time in jail as it was her cross and that she must bear it, as her Savior had suffered the cross for her.

Mrs. Johnson has been going to Rockcastle and Pulaski counties for several years as an evangelist of the Church of God, and holding meetings. She says that she has a call to come to Laurel county, but has not had time to go. Both Mrs. Tyree and Mrs. Johnson seem perfectly contented in jail, as they claim that is their cross to bear with it trusting their Master.

Jailer George Debord did not incarcerate the two women in the jail proper. For one reason, it is already full with men of both colors, and then, too he is able to keep them amply safe and secure in the jail office room and to afford them little more privacy than they would have in the main cell room. Mr. Debord's action in this regard is being generally commended, for it is felt that these women are, probably the victims of some sort of religious belief of hallucination, and not in the same category with the usual run of malefactors. Mrs. Johnson was not feeling well Tuesday morning, so Mr. DeBorde suggested that if she thought it necessary he would secure a physician at once. The woman indignantly repulsed his kindly offer, however, declaring: "You know we do not believe in having doctors." The accomodating jailer, says, however, that she will certainly have one this time, if she gets really sick while in his charge.—Stanford Interior Journal.

Sugar Supply Running Low.

"There is no serious danger of a sugar famine," said Jas. H. Duncan, wholsale dealer, 19 E. Second street, Thursday, discussing reports of a shortage in a number of towns around Cincinnati. Fremont, Ohio, Lebanon, Ky., and Columbia, Ky., are among places said to be facing a sugar famine.

"About a month ago sugar was selling for 7 cents a pound, the canning season practically was over, the market was weak and dealers did not want to buy when there was a chance of the price dropping," explained Duncan.

"Most of them tried to get along on what they had and wait for the new Louisiana and beet sugar crops to arrive. When they found they did not have enough they had to buy from eastern refineries, but because of the price going up again, due to increased demand they did not buy more than they thought necessary.

"The first carload of Louisiana sugar will arrive in Cincinnati before the end of next week, and beet sugar will be coming shortly. There will then be enough for all dealers."—Post.

Early Cancer Curable.

There could hardly be a more comforting message to a large portion of mankind than that which it receives from the latest cancer research showing that, taken early, cancer is a curable disease. But there cannot be too much emphasis on the "taken early." At ages ove forty one death in eight among women and one in every fourteen among men is due to cancer. There should not be one death in one hundred from cancer. Surgery is successful in the following percentage of cases: Cancer of the breast, where there is early operation, 80 per cent; where operation is delayed, 25 per cent. Cancer of the lip, where there is early operation, 95 per cent, where operation is delayed, 60 per cent. Cancer of the tongue, where there is early operation, 80 per cent; where operation is delayed, 15 per cent.

Thus cancer is not a hopeless, incurable disease, as so many of us think. Very many deaths are unnecessary and preventable, as the foregoing shows. Cancer is at first a local disease, beginning in a tiny spot, at that time it can be removed with great care and little discomfort by the surgeon and a cure is almost certain; certain in over 80 per cent of the cases, anyway. If neglected, it grows and is carried to other parts of the body, rapidly getting control. Don't let sores and lumps grow. Don't keep them a secret to yourself. Don't let fear of pain or false modesty take your precious life. Go to the surgeon without delay and obtain relief.

ALL TOBACCO HOUSED

In Kentucky on October 1, Commissioner Cohen Reports.

That practically all of the tobacco in Kentucky is housed is the statement of Commissioner of Agriculture Cohen in his crop report for October. It is curing well and is good in color, texture and quality. It is estimated that burley tobacco will yield 919 pounds per acre, and dark tobacco will yield 851 pounds per acre as a state average. This is a high estimate and runs about 78 and 77 pounds per acre, respectively, heavier than last year's report.

The Irish and sweet potato crops are reported poor generally thruout the state. The average yield of Irish potatoes is estimated at 73 bushels per acre, and of sweet potatoes 79 bushels. Late garden conditions are poor.

The condition of live stock is good.

The reports of grasses in different sections vary and as a whole are only in fairly good condition, blue grass being given at 87 per cent, clover 87 per cent, while orchard grass shows 91 per cent and alfalfa at 88 per cent. The third cutting of alfalfa is estimated at one ton per acre. The third crop was dwarfed by the dry weather. In some localities it is reported the fourth cutting will be ready in a few days. Much of the crimson clover was killed out by the late drouth.

The preliminary estimate of wheat sown is 84 per cent, rye is 87 per cent, and while but little barley is raised in Kentucky, the estimate on that is given at 88 per cent. The estimated yield of corn per acre is given as a state average of 29.8 bushels. Hemp is estimated at 996 pounds per acre.

Divorces in Switzerland.

In one important respect the Swiss surpass other nations in the management of their divorce cases says an English correspondent.

In every town there is a kind of official paper known as the Feuille d'Avis, in which one may read daily the following announcement:

"M. and Mme X., who are in instance of divorce, are requested to appear privately before the judge or with their lawyers in order to come to a reconciliation if possible.

Before the beginning of every divorce case in Switzerland this notice is published and sent out to the interested parties, leaving the couple, of course, free to attend before the judge or not, as they wish. Often the couple meet.

Although there are no statistics published on the subject, I am told by a leading lawyer in Geneva whose specialty is divorce cases, that at least 30 per cent of divorce cases—much to my loss, unfortunately," the lawyer added, with a smile—are settled by the paternal advice of the judge at these meetings out of court.

In fact, Swiss lawyers will not definitely take up a divorce case until it has passed through the reconciliation process.

If one of the couple does not attend the rendezvous this means that the affair is to be fought out—but in any case Swiss divorces are not expensive.—San Francisco Chronicle.

FORTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Four converts will be baptized into the Baptist church next Saturday.

Geo. Sleet, Sheriff-elect, was here last Saturday. He will shortly become a citizen of the town.

Mr. W. T. Smith presented us with two small apples the other day, the smallest of which was 14½ inches in circumference and weighed one pound and 4 ounces.

The hickory nut mast was never larger than this fall.

Saturday night the ground was frozen and ice a quarter of an inch thick was made.

Every few days emigrant wagons pass through town westward bound.

Next Tuesday the theological discussion between Rev. S. P. Carlton, Universalist, and Rev. Miller, Methodist, will begin here.

The New York Sun of the 14th inst., says: A bevy of lively girls in Grant county, Ky., amused themselves at night by stealing the hand-cars on the railroad and working a furious passage up and down the railroad.

CHEW YOUR MILK.

If You Don't Eat It, Curds Form in the Stomach.

Milk fresh from the bovine font, with its rich store of vitamines and enzymes, with the finest quality of protein for brain and muscle building suits to stiffen the body framework and to brighten the vital fires of the body, is a natural product. Not only is it not improved by the art of cookery, but it is actually damaged by it and rendered incapable of supplying in the highest degree those subtle elements which are essential to good nutrition.

A word should be said about how to take milk. It should be eaten, not swallowed as a beverage.

All foods need to be masticated. The calf and the nursing infant chew milk. The movements of the jaws and the sucking movements executed by an infant in nursing induce an abundant flow of saliva which, mixing with the milk, properly dilutes it, and to a high degree promotes its digestion.

Milk when swallowed rapidly as a beverage is likely to form in the stomach large and hard curds, which are very slowly digested. Many persons who suffer from taking milk in this way imagine themselves unable to take milk, and so abandon its use.

Milk should be sipped slowly and with a sucking movement of the throat so as to secure a liberal admixture of saliva. By this means the formation of hard, indigestible curds may be prevented.

Milk also must be taken in right quantities and in right combinations. It cannot be denied that milk digests better when taken by itself or in very simple combinations than when mixed with a large variety of other foodstuffs.

Beware of Skunks.

There are various reasons why one should beware of skunks, but the idea now is to warn our readers against allowing skunks to eat their bees. The skunks come into the beeyard after night, and if the weather is a little cool and all the bees safe in the hive they will scratch at the entrance and so annoy and anger the bees that they will come out to defend their home, and are eaten up for their pains. If some colonies are suddenly found much weakened, it is a good plan to look around the entrance for signs of scratching. The best remedy is a good watch dog. In out apiaries where there is no danger to domestic animals some use poisoned meat to dispose of the pests, or they may be trapped. The writer does not look with much favor on slaying our innocent furry cousins to make ornaments for our bodies, but a skunk skin looks better to him in a muff than on a skunk in a beeyard.—Farm and Family.

Increase for Widows.

The following is a summary of a widows pension law, recently passed by Congress:

All widows of Civil war soldiers who are now on the pension rolls and have reached the age of 70 years, can have a pension of $20 per month. An application must be filed with Commissioner of Pensions. This application must state the number of widow's pension certificate, the name of the soldier or sailor as the name appears on the pension rolls, the company and regiment of the deceased husband. The application must also show whether the beneficiary was the wife of the soldier or sailor during any part of his service in the Civil war. She must give her age date and place of birth.

Getting Busy.

The Big Bone Springs Water Co. is planning hotel improvements to be put in at Big Bone early next year. This news will be very pleasing to the people of the Springs and in that vicinity, and is of interest to the entire county.

A VISION OF THE FUTURE.

Benjamin Briscoe, an automobile manufacturer, has written a book, "Looking Forward In the Automobile Industry," in which he says that 2,400,000 automobiles are in use in America at present, and that by July, 1919, 5,000,000 will be in use. During the next decade the number will grow to 8,000,000. Mr. Briscoe believes that half of the cars now being bought are bought by farmers, and that within a few years half of the farmers in the entire country will be using automobiles.

An agricultural journal, the Breeders' Gazette, says that a farm survey in Minnesota, a progressive State, showed that in a strip of good farm land 20 miles long and three miles wide the average labor income of the land owner was but $296, meaning that the average farmer got but area turned $296 more than the legal rate of interest upon his investment in land, implements, stock and improvements.

When farming is spoken of in terms of "labor income" the casual reader gets the impression that farming is the worst-paid calling on earth. Such a reader will wonder how a farmer buys one of every two automobiles that are sold. The investment income does not explain it. If a farmer has an investment of $20,000 and a labor income of $300, he has but thirteen hundred or $1,500 total income. How then, does he buy an automobile, and maintain it, and support a family? The city man with a labor income of $1,300 or $1,500 would find it impossible, or extremely difficult, to buy and maintain an automobile.

But the farmer's figuring of labor and investment income does not take into account what he produces for tableconsumption. It does not take into account the item of house rent. The town man with the $1,500 income must pay for everything he eats. He muts pay rent. If he wants an automobile he must pay additional rent, to provide quarters for it, or pay a monthly bill at a garage As a rule the town man is not a mechanic. He goes often to the repair shop. The farmer must be a fair meahanic, or must have someone on the farm who is. In one way or another he avoids repair bills to a certain extent, although not altogether, of course. He can keep the machine in a shed. There is no bill for storage. He uses it for business as often as for pleasure, saving man and team labor, or "time" in the sense that the team is used by an employer of labor when he goes or sends for repairs for other machinery. He hauls a good deal of small freight in his automobile. He goes to town in it and saves car fare It enables him to do without the buggy horse and reduce the number of "head of stock" fed constantly in his stable.

When these things are taken into consideration Mr. Briscoe's vision of the future does not seem as fanciful as it might to persons accustomed to hear of labor incomes of less than $300 a year. The prosperous farmer can afford to own, and is beginning to feel that he cannot afford not to own a car. Incidentally, he is beginning to feel that his county can afford good roads, and cannot afford bad ones. This feeling brings good roads. Good roads increase farm values, so the farmer's automobile actually increases his capital. The man in town whose income seems larger than that of the farmer gets nothing but expense and pleasure out of the ownership of a car unless he is in business in which he needs a vehicle.

Frauds upon Farmers Revealed

Seeking to head off what they believe is developing into one of the greatest financial frauds the United States has known, the federal farm loan board asks aid of the department of justice.

Across the continent in a strip of states from Virginia to California, the board reported organizations, either deliberately fraudulent or, at best illegal, have sprung up to defraud farmers thru the farmer's ignorance of the new rural credit act.

In one single instance it is said, the farmers have been victimized to an aggregate of $350,000.

Governors and congressmen have been made unwitting parties to some of those illegal operations it is said.

Some time ago the board announced a ruling that no proposed joint stock land bank will be chartered if it spent money for promotion.

This was designed to hold the expense of operation down to a minimum so the interest rates to farmers may be the lowest possible.

In the facing of this ruling it is said promoters continued to sell stock in proposed land banks and to take proceeds for their own services.

One of these concerns failed before it even could have applied for a charter, but it had sold several hundred thousand dollars in stock to farmers.

In many cases stock has been sold with the understanding that the company is to apply for a charter under the federal law, when there has been no such intention on the part of the promoters.

In another column under the head line "Extraordinary Situation" will be found an address issued to the people of this State by the Kentucky Press Association. The address is not hot air, but is based on conditions that actually exist in the print paper market and which, there is every reason to believe, will grow worse making the outlook very discouraging for a large number of country papers, many of which have increased their subscription price in order that they may stay in business, while many will have to do likewise or put up the blinds. If the Recorder's subscribers pay up promptly it will be able to stay in the swim without increasing its price on subscription, and with this end in view it requests those who are not paid up into the year 1916 to please do so before the beginning of 1917.

Some people seem to forget that President Wilson has not only kept us out of war, but that he has done it with honor to the country. His critics blind themselves to the big things he has done and merely carp at the trivial. In avoiding war he has saved the lives of hundreds of thousands of American boys and brought unprecedented prosperity to the country. When this war is over our country will not be in mourning. The bones of its young men will not be rotting in unmarked graves on the battlefields of Europe. It will not be filled with maimed men, wailing widows and moaning orphans. Its commerce will not be loaded with gigantic war debts. Its industries will not be taxed with millions for war pensions. Its unborn sons will be free from the blight of devastating war.

Large sums of money are being spent in Boone, Grant and Kenton counties reconstructing and building pikes. The work in Grant and Kenton is confined to reconstruction, while in Boone building and reconstruction is each receiving attention. Grant county will soon have the entire length of the Covington and Lexington pike within its boundary in first-class order, while Kenton is making a capital road of her part of that thoroughfare. Boone will do nothing on that road this year.

Through the Efforts of Senator James and Congressman Rouse, the city of Newport will receive $10,000 from the U. S. Government. Seven years ago the Newport pumping plant on the Ohio River burned. An oil lamp placed on the building as a signal Government light exploded, causing the fire, it was claimed. The loss entailed was $10,000, and Newport filed a claim for that amount against the Government.

The indications are that a special session of the legislature will be called by the fifteenth of November, which time seems to suit the convenience of everyone best. The tax committee will have a skeleton bill prepared, but it is the impression of all that a new set of tax laws will be hard to make that will meet with the approval of all, hence the session will not last less than sixty days.

At the State election held in Indiana, forty years ago this month, the Democrats elected Blue Jeans Williams Governor by 6,000, and the same day the Republicans carried Ohio by 6,000.

The Court of Appeals, in a case from McLean county, decided that unlawful forcible entrance of a building, no matter how slight the physical exertion, constituted housebreaking.

Politics is warming up all over the country, each party claiming that a victory for it is assured.

Mr. Hughes, candidate for president, swept across Kentucky from east to west last week.

Monday is Rising Sun Jockey Day

Next Monday will be observed in Rising Sun as Jockey Day. Jockey Day was introduced by Rising Sun business men to boom the town's business and at the same time give the citizens of adjacent territory an opportunity to profit thereby from competitive bidding at a sale of livestock, farm produce, etc., that they might put under the hammer on these occasions. The success attained on past occasions of this kind has been very gratifying to those in charge, and that of next Monday, being the last for this year, it is expected to be larger than any of the past as regards the quantity of stock, etc., sold and the aggregate amount realized therefor. The sales do not cost the seller anything.

A Gloomy Day.

Sunday was the most gloomy because of following a considerable period of such beautiful weather. The rain that fell was needed to replenish cisterns and water courses.

The protracted meeting at Walton Christian church closed on Sunday, after a two weeks session, during which time much interest was manifested and tenty-four additions obtained to the church. The pastor, Rev. C. Lacy, who conducted the meeting, preached some very interesting sermons and the church going people enjoyed the feast of chistian teaching he gave them. The fourteen converts to the church were immersed by Rev. Lacy in the mill pond Sunday afternoon, and together with the ten received by letter were welcomed into the church as members.

Walton has stood in need of a nice lunch room for some time, as there is no eating house in the town outside of the hotels who serve meals at regular hours, and John Fink has been encouraged to open a lunch room in the annex to his wall paper store, and is now fitting it up in a neat tasteful manner with a view to being open for business by Saturday, Oct. 21. Mr. Fink will endeavor to cater to the public in a modest way, serving light lunches, fruit, etc., to meet the requirements of the public, and especially the tourist passing thru in automobiles, who stop here frequently in quest of lunches and appear to be greatly disappointed in not being able to supply their wants. Mr. Bramlage was a brother of Benj. Bramlage, cashier of the First National Bank, Covington, and was a most clever, genial, honorable gentleman of the highest type. He leaves a widow and one son and four daughters to mourn the loss of a most affectionate husband and father. The funeral took Ransler who contracted the carpenter work. The building will be first class for a loose leaf market and all of the accessories will be put into afford convenience and rapidity of work. Automatic scales for weighing and a fine prizing room will be features that will be very helpful to the handling of the tobacco in a quick manner. The warehouse will be ready for business by Nov. 20th, though the market in most of the warehouses will hardly open before Dec. 1, as very little tobacco will be ready for the market before that time. The Walton warehouse has been promised ample buyers of the best class to take all of the tobacco that can be marketed here, and the management is looking for about two and a half million pounds of tobacco to be sold here this season.

The case of Carl Neumeister against the National Millers Insurance Company, of Chicago, tried last spring in the U. S. Court at Covington, before Judge A. M. Cochran, was ordered for a new trial by Judge Cochran, and the case will be again tried at Covington in a short time. Mr. Neumeister lost his flouring mill by fire at Walton, July 5th, 1914, and and it was insured in the National Millers' Insurance Co., for $4,500. One of the conditions of the policy was the mill should be operated and not lay idle for a period of sixty days. The insurance company resisted the payment of the policy on the ground that these terms of the policy had not been complied with, and Mr. Neumeister brought suit for the amount of the policy through his attorneys J. G. Tomlin and Jno. L Vest, and the insurance company employed Chas. Strother as its local attorney to represent them. Mr. Neumeister introduced proof showing that the mill had been operated sufficient to cover the requirements of the policy and a jury gave a verdict in favor of Mr. Neumeister for $2,600, and the insurance company prayed for a new trial setting forth that the instructions and judgment were in error. Judge Cochran has had the appeal under advisement since the judgment rendered by the jury and last Friday made an order for a new trial.

What would he give for the coffee you serve?

Like a million other women, you can serve coffee that he would give most anything to have—coffee which starts the day "right" for all.

Everyone loves the rich flavor of Arbuckles' Coffee. Of all the coffees in America today, it is by far the most popular!

One woman says: "My husband used to swallow his coffee and hurry off. Now we have Arbuckles' and you'd think it was Sunday the way he lingers over his breakfast."

Until you try Arbuckles' you will never know what a difference good coffee can make in your home.

Today there are whole towns where Arbuckles is practically the only coffee used. In one State, alone, in a year, four pounds of Arbuckles' Coffee was used for every man, woman and child in the State—four times as many pounds of coffee as the population of the State! Arbuckle Bros., New York.

TWO NEGROES LYNCHED

Bodies Are Cut Down, Thrown Onto Heap of Burning Brush and Cremated.

Paducah, Ky., Oct. 16.—An infuriated mob of five hundred persons stormed the county jail here shortly after noon today and lynched two negroes within two miles of the city. After the bodies were cut down they were thrown on a burning brush heap and cremated.

The lynchings followed a forenoon of terror, during which the mob was practically in control of the city.

One of the negroes, Frank Kinley, was accused of having attacked Mrs. Ella Rose last Friday night. The mob took him to the Rose home, two miles from the city, and she identified him as her assailant. The other negro, Jesse Thornhill, was hanged because he boldly declared that he would have committed the same crime.

Birthday Celebration.

Sunday the last occurrence of a series of pleasant occasions took place at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Tanner, in Gunpowder neighborhood, when about fifty friends and relatives arrived to assist in Mr. Tanner's birthday celebration. It was a complete surprise to Mr. Tanner, but he soon discovered the reason prompting the occurrence, when about twenty had arrived with well filled baskets. The day was rainy and gloomy outside but in doors it was pleasant and enjoyable, and the kind remembrances of friends were appreciated more by Mr. Tanner than he could express. Mr. Tanner is a brother of Mrs. Susan Utz, 85, Mrs. David Houston, 78, and Mrs. Ellen Smith, 78, who have been remembered on like occasions the past summer. Such occasions are always enjoyed and the relatives and friends are brought closer together.

At the noon hour all were invited to the spacious dining room, where Mr. Tanner returned thanks for the bountiful spread of food, which was enjoyed by all. The following were present: David Houston and wife, Mr. Susan Utz and granddaughter, Miss Jessie, Ruben Houston, wife, son and daughter, Walter Wolfe, wife and son, Elden, George Barlow and wife, Ezra Blankenbeker and wife, Claude Stephenson and wife, J. T. Stephenson, wife and two daughters, Misses Helen and Marie, Mrs. Alice Tanner, S. L. Craven and wife, Bro. Royer, wife and two daughters, Misses Lee Nora and Mabel, Eli Conrad and wife, J. W. Stephenson and two sons, Messrs. Acy and Robert, Harry Tanner, wife and three children, Miss Pearl Stephenson, C. L. Craven and family, Mr. Stanly Conrad, Miss Luella Tanner and sister, Mr. L. S. Beemon.

The day was enjoyed by all. In the afternoon Rev. Royer sang several beautiful songs. The day will long be remembered by all present.

At a late hour, being dismissed by prayer by Bro. Royer, the usual good-byes were said, and wishing Mr. Tanner other like occasions, all departed, feeling that a day had been profitably spent.

Washington, Oct. 17—Simultaneously with promises by Ambassador, designate Arredondo to the American Mexican commissioners at Atlantic City that Carranza is about to launch an extensive campaign against General Francisco Villa, comes a report that Villa has inflicted another crushing defeat on Carranza forces. This time Villa chastised his enemies at San Andres, not far from Chihuahua, the scene of his defeat of the Carranzitas on Independence Day last month.

Villa's latest victory serves further to convince officials here that he and not Carranza is the master of northern Mexico. It was declared that this latest show of strength by Villa makes the Atlantic City negotiations appear little less than futile.

Home.

There is nothing so filled with content as the home where happiness prevails. It may be a simple one, but a kiss will sometimes make an humble meal satisfying and sustaining; it will make a meager repast a banquet.

When man and woman live contentedly together the old theory of bread and cheese kisses is no longer a myth.

When God breathed life into the lungs of Adam, and he awoke in Eden, to find Eve by his side, even in that farliest day of the world's history, to Adam, paradise was home.

To the good among his descendants home is a paradise. The first sure symptoms of a mind in health is rest of heart and the pleasures that can be found only at home.

When once we awaken to the real benefits that home affords we become convinced that our home joys are the most comforting that the earth extends. The joy of parents is in their children. The holiest joy of humanity. It makes the lives of men and women pure and good, it lifts the parents, in the eyes of their children, up to heaven.

When home is ruled according to God's Word, declares Spurgeon, angels might be asked to stay with us and they would not find themselves out of their element.

To the young man and woman who are beginning the better part of their life as husband and wife, home becomes, and should always remain a resort of joy, of peace and plenty, where supporting and supported friends and relatives can mingle as nature intended.

The strength of a nation is to be found in intelligent, well ordered homes.

Yes, home is the one spot in all the world supremely blest, a dearer, sweeter spot than any other that may be found, and it rests with us to preserve and keep it such.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Community Loyalty.

Have you ever stopped to consider the fact that loyalty to community interests is the highest type of patriotism? Show us the man who is loyal and true to every interest of his own community and we will show you in that same individual a man in whom his country can repose absolute confidence in any emergency that calls for his allegiance.

On the other hand, the man who is careless and unconcerned for the interests of his community is more apt to display the same spirit of indifference toward his government or his State should any serious danger threaten either.

One of the most commendable traits of the old Scotch highlanders were their loyalty to their own clan. Good or bad, right or wrong, the clan had their first allegiance. The life and services of each member were always cheerfully placed at the disposal of the clan.

Try to imagine an entire State composed of innumerable communities wielded and cemented into a symmetrical whole, each striving to excel the others, but each, from its own loyal loyalty, developing a broader and deeper loyalty that embraces the whole.

Utopia, you say? By no means. Merely what could and would be the result if we could only be brought to see that we owe allegiance to our own people, but that the prosperity of others is in no wise a detriment to us but rather a help; that if each community would only develop itself to the utmost—physically, mentally and morally—none would need be envious of others, neither would any need do aught to detract from another's interest.

Let us develop community loyalty to the full—the highest possible form of patriotism.

Supplement the School Fund.

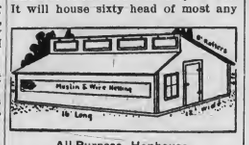
Do you live in a Rural School district? Have you children who are finishing the common school course? Having answered these questions in the affirmative, we would like to ask what you are going to do with these children? If you send them off to school you will pay board buy extra clothes and pay for their transportation besides you will not have them home to do chores and they will learn many things not in the book that they might profitably have out for a few years.

All this extra expense will amount to from one to two hundred dollars a pupil each year, to say nothing of the disadvantages of sending them off to school.

Better qualified teachers and more of them may be employed more cheaply for the Rural School if you will get up a club of ten of your most progressive patrons who will donate from fifty to one hundred dollars each to supplement the public school fund. This extra school fund will put your district on the map, your neighborhood will soon be the talk of the country and better teachers will seek your school. You had better add a room or two and put up a hundred dollars each, or more, than to send your child off to school.

Employ teachers who are qualified, who have had the high school and college work and can deliver the goods and pay them to stay with you, it will be better for you and your boys and girls. Do not read this and continue to sleep but get up and do something before these boys and girls leave your old dilapidated farm and country school house for ever to bless you for your indolent unconcern.—Owen County Democrat.

The Pendleton County Farmers Fire Insurance Company has cancelled insurance on all buildings in which gasoline engines or automobiles are kept.



FARM POULTRY

ALL-PURPOSE CHICKEN HOUSE

Structure Possesses Four Basic Principles, Light, Ventilation, Warmth and No Drafts.

Here is a sketch of what I consider my best all-purposo house. This statement brings forth the question, why? Before answering this I want to say that there are many good houses in use upon successful poultry farms or plants.

The house as shown contains the four basic principles necessary to a practically constructed poultry house, writes M. G. Scudder of Merrick county, Neb., in Independent Farmer. These principles are as follows: Light, ventilation, warmth and no drafts. The size of this house is 12 by 16 feet. It will house sixty head of most any variety of laying hens. Roosts and dropping boards are placed in each corner at the back of the building and made so they can be inclosed in extreme cold weather by simply dropping a curtain in front of the roosts. Two tiers of nests are placed against the wall betwen these roosts at the back of the building. This roosting method gives your flock a chance to divide during their roosting hours without crowding, thus avoiding dangers from colds, etc.

A window is placed toward the front in each end of the house, which helps to furnish light at the bottom of the building where needed when fowls are scratching for their food in the litter. One door, placed as indicated, with the open front two feet from the ground, assures against any draft when you enter the house. There is no need of using muslin upon this front except in stormy or exceedingly cold weather. The open front also furnishes light close to the floor, which also helps the fowls in their scratching for food. It also affords the very best possible system of circulation and ventilation when the front is open by using the adjustable windows at the top as an outlet for impure air. These windows at the front near the top furnish the light which keeps the roosts and roost boards dry. You will note that they come in just the proper place for the sun to shine into the extreme corners at the back of the building. My experience has taught me that we must have light in the house. The more we have up to a certain point, the better.

A house of this size, built of drop siding and tar paper with rubber roofing, will keep 50 or 60 fowls warm and comfortable the coldest weather. Not only is this house splendid for laying hens, but it serves well for surplus cockerels; or, if divided, makes the very best of breeding pens, or may be put to many other uses.

USEFUL COOP FOR HATCHING

Cheap, Durable, Neat, Handy, Lice-Proof, Close-to-Nature Device for Setting Hens.

"In trying to simplify the problem of having to set hens in boxes all over the farm I came across this plan: This setting coop is 12 feet long, 4 feet wide, and 1 foot high. It is divided into 12 runs each 1 by 4 feet in size, which is plenty of room for a hen. The frame is of 1 by 4 inch boards," writes D. O. Krehbiel of Enterprise, Kan., in Farmers' Mail and Breeze. "Sides, ends and partitions are made of poultry wire. Each run is covered with three slats, the outer two being nailed down while the middle one is used as a slide when feeding and watering the hens. This enables one to get at each hen without disturbing the others. The nest is put in a frame one foot square placed in one end."

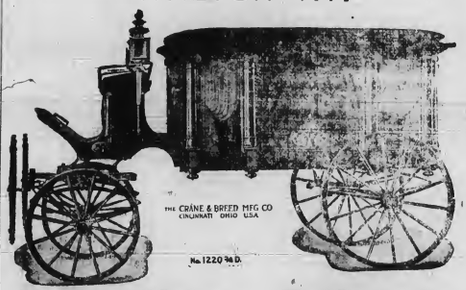
DUCKLINGS NEED FRESH AIR

Sometimes Well to Open Door of Incubator a Trifle to Permit Them to Breathe.



Ducklings, when hatched in an incubator sometimes need more fresh air in the machine than chicks do and when the hatch is complete and the little ducklings are still in the machine getting strong before being taken out, it is well to open the door a little, say one-eighth of an inch, to let in more fresh air for them to breathe. This, of course, applies to a good hatch, not where there are only a few ducklings in the machine.

A Delightful Meeting.

On the afternoon of the 12th inst., the ladies of the "Recreation and improvement Club" of Clover Lane enjoyed a most delightful meeting at Sunnyside, the pleasant home of Mrs. R. B. Huey After the roll-call came the singing of "America," followed by appropriate remarks and bits of history pertaining to the life and discoveries of Columbus, Mrs. R. B Huey in an attractive manner, then read the two poems, "There is Ever a Song Somewhere," and "Granny," by James Whitcomb Riley, concluding with a brief sketch of the life of this popular poet. The comic reading entitled "Ben Putoff," so cleverly rendered by Miss Pearl Botts was enjoyed by everyone and "Current Events" by Miss Artie Ryle furnished many items of varied and valuable information. Mrs. J. Howard Huey, charmed all by reading in her inimitable style "Armazindy." This, with another of Riley's realistic poems, "Billy Miller's Circus Show," read in a captivating manner bye Miss Alice Carver, concluded the program.

After a short business meeting the remainder of the afternoon was devoted as usual to social intercouse, music, fancy work, &c., last but not least, in the enjoyment was that of several varieties of luscious frout served by the hospitable hostess.

Hugh B. Gibson Dead.

On Tuesday evening between the hours of five and six o'clock, the citizens of this place received news of the death of one of our brightest lights, Hugh B. Gibson, which occurred at Cincinnati where he had gone to seek relief from acute liver and stomach complications. None knew of the extreme seriousness of his condition and the news of his death threw a heavy cloud of gloom over the hearts of our people.

Last Saturday afternoon Mr. Gibson, in company with his wife was taken to Cincinnati by auto to consult a specialist. The seriousness of his condition made necessary a consultation, which resulted in a verdict of high blood pressure which might prove fatal to him. Miss Esther Wilbur was called from here to nurse him and preparations were made to have him removed to a hospital. During the day Tuesd ay information that he was better was received and all were encouraged; but in the evening, as the shades of night were falling and the sun was sinking in the western horizon the soul of this good man passed out into the Great Beyond.—Rising Sun Recorder.

Whose Hat is It?

Earl Smith found a good hat lying by the roadside near Jerry Tanner's early last Saturday morning as he was going to Erlanger for a load of coal. A search was made by Mr. Smith who thought he might find the remains of the owner who, possibly, had fallen a victim to foul play, but no trace or marks of a tragedy were discovered, consequently the owner of the hat is supposed to be among the living.

The Recorder lost its bearings last week and said Miss Estelle Huey, after a visit, had returned to school in Georgetown, when it should have said she returned to Dry Ridge, Grant county, where she is one of the faculty in the High School. Miss Huey was a member of last year's graduating class at Georgetown.

Geo. White, of Milan, Indiana, a brother of Richard White, has been visiting his relatives in this county the past week. Mr. White has changed but little in appearance, time seeming to have dealt kindly with him. He says the only change he sees in this part of the country is the hills appear to have been growing.

Mrs. Anna Kirkpatrick, who is making her home with her daughter, Mrs. L. L. Ware, of Roachdale, Ind., came in last week to visit her daughter, Mrs. H. W. Ryle, of Erlanger, and friends and rrelatives at Burlington.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Smith entertained a number of their relatives from Newport, last Sunday at their home on the Burlington and Belleview pike.

Benjamin Stephens and wife, of Rabbit Hash neighborhood, were Saturday and Sunday guests of his brother, Richard Stephens and wife.

Miss Mary Roberts, who is teaching at Petersburg, spent last Sunday with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. C. C Roberts.

N. E. Riddell is attending the Masonic Grand Lodge in session in Louisville, representing Burlington lodge.

Miss Julia Dinsmore, of Belleview neighborhood, was transacting business in Burlington, Monday.

MR. HUGHE'S REPLIES.

(Milwaukee Journal Ind.)

"When notice was published with respect to the action threatened, I would have made it known in terms unequivocal and unmistakable that we should not tolerate a continuance of friendly relations through the ordinary diplomatic channels if that action were taken — and the Lusatania, sir would never have been sunk."—(Charles E. Hughes at Louisville last night.)

But, Mr. Hughes, suppose that in spite of all you say, the Lusitania had been sunk, what would you have done?

That is the question that Mr. Hughes will not face. It is the only question that it would mean something for him to answer. His assertions of the things that would never have been are childish. People have their wits about them these days; they known what a man is dodging. If Mr. Hughes is going on the stump to say that the Administration has brought humiliation on the country, he is expected to know what he would have done—not if there had been no war, not if there had been no submarine activity, but under the real conditions which no man in America was powerful enough to avert.

Since Mr. Hughes stepped down from the high seclumon of the bench he has given constant evidence of his conviction that the people are fools. Not even the speeches of Elihu Root show a lower estimate of the common sense of his audiences. Nothing could be more conclusive than Mr. Hughes' pretense that he would or could have avoided the sinking of the Lusitania.

Germany was remarkably equipped with submarine vessels, far more remarkably than anyone in any other nation realized or had realized up to last week. She was determined on getting the utmost advantage from that engine of war. Does Mr. Hughes suppose that the German naval staff was going to give up without a trial because of some different phraseology that he thinks he could have used? Does he think the people he talks to are going to believe that?

All the record goes for nothing with Mr. Hughes. He pretends to forget that no one in this country dreamed, even after the published warning to which he refers, that the Lusitania would be sunk. He forgets that even after that event, all the papers of the nation counseled going slow. He maunders about something he would have done with the small, weak nation of Mexico that would have prevented the German empire from trying out its policy.

There is this which Mr. Hughes might think over: Our Government had warned Germany that it would be held to strict accountability for the violation of American rights on the high seas. And it has been held to strict accountability. Yet even now, when the utmost step that Mr. Hughes says he would have taken, has been taken there is strong advocacy in Germany at this moment of a resumption of the submarine attacks.

Yet Mr. Hughes insults the intelligence of the American people by telling them that with the magic of a few words, he would have avoided the whole issue. It will not do. The question he avoided still remains: When the Lusitania was sunk, what would Mr. Hughes have done?

The more daring organs will take this up and try to make some thing of it. But the effort to charge the President of the United States with responsibility for the sinking of the Lusitania will evoke the disgust of the American people for a thing unspeakably contempible.

BEST METHOD OF EXTERMINATING VERMIN

HEALTHY FLOCK OF WHITE LEGHORNS.

(By PROF. H. L. KEMPSTER, Missouri College of Agriculture.)

If, for no apparent reason, there is a lack of thrift among your young chicks, perhaps the cause is lice, or worms in the intestines. Examine the chicks about the head for head lice. Lice are more likely to be present on hen-raised chicks. If lice are found, grease the heads of the chicks with lard which is free from salt. Do not use lard and sulphur. Apply the lard with the finger, rubbing the head, neck, under the wings, and around the vent. The brooding hen should also be treated. One of the best methods of exterminating lice on the mature fowls is to rub a piece of blue ointment, the size of a pea, into the skin just beneath the vent, and also under each wing. Do not daub it on, but rub it well into the skin, as blue ointment is very poisonous and will kill the hen if she gets some of it into her mouth.

If no lice are found, carefully examine the intestines of a dead chick for intestinal parasites, such as tapeworms or round worms. If worms of any kind are found, the chicks should be treated and removed to fresh ground where there are no worms in the soil. As long as the chicks remain on the old runs the danger of contamination is always present.

To treat for intestinal parasites feed should be withheld for 12 hours, and one of the following remedies given:

Powdered areca nut, 30 to 45 grains for an adult bird; powdered areca nut, 15 grains for immature chicks.

This can be mixed in a wet mash and fed so that each gets an equal amount. It can be fed to older birds in capsules which can be forced down the gullet.

Turpentine, one to three teaspoonfuls, depending upon the age of the bird, is also effective. It can be made less severe by mixing with an equal amount of cottonseed oil, but if ineffective, should be used full strength. The best method of giving turpentine is by forcing it through a small flexible catheter that has been oiled and is passed through the throat into the crop.

Good results have been reported also with the use of tobacco dust, using five to ten grains to a bird. This can also be fed in a wet mash.

The droppings containing the worms should be burned or buried deep to prevent the chicks from picking them up.

CLEAN OUT DROPPINGS DAILY

Some Sort of Material Under Perches Is Necessary—Sawdust Quickly Absorbs Moisture.

The modern "dropping board" necessitates the use of some sort of material under the perches so that the task of removing the droppings may be accomplished more easily and quickly, says a writer in an exchange.

Different poultry men use different materials. Some sprinkle a thin layer of sand or earth under the perches, while others use hay, chaff, leaves, sawdust or other such substances. Sawdust is about the best material that can be used when it can be obtained in sufficiently large quantities without difficulty. My experience has shown that this material quickly absorbs all moisture from the manure, and it is not chilling to the feet of the fowls, while, by its use, it is an easy matter to save the droppings to use for fertilizing, as sawdust mixes well with the manures.

No matter what material is used, it, together with the accumulated droppings, should be swept out with a broom every few mornings. When sawdust is used it is advisable to sprinkle it with water before sweeping, in order to settle the dust, which, otherwise, will be found obnoxious to the person doing the sweeping.

How often to clean out around the roost is a question that can be decisively answered by saying that the most successful poultry men clean out the most frequently. Many leading poultry farmers attend to this every day. Maybe this is a little oftener than necessary, but it is playing on the safe side.

COOP FOR THE BROODY HENS

Large Dry Goods Box With Sides and Bottom Slatted Will Prove Quite Satisfactory.

You can take a large dry goods box, knock off the sides and the bottom, and then use slats to tack on the sides and bottom in order to admit plenty of ventilation. The birds stand on the bottom and the fever cools more rapidly. The box should have supports about three feet in length.

The birds should be taken from the nest as soon as they have the broody fever. This enables you to break them from sitting more rapidly, and when turned from the coop they will begin laying much earlier. This will also prevent many eggs from being spoiled. The hens should be fed when confined in the coop so as to keep them in laying condition.

HIDING PLACES OF INSECTS

Nests and Perches Should Be Given Occasional Application of Some Insecticides.

The nests and perches in the chickenhouse should be kept from becoming the hiding and breeding places of vermin by occasional applications of insecticides like kerosene and crude carbolic acid; the hens themselves should be given opportunity for frequent dust baths. By doing this, all vermin will be kept within bounds and will do no appreciable harm.

TO DETERMINE FRESH EGGS

One Can Generally Tell by Color, Provided It Is Not Too Old—Water Test Is Favored.

How do you tell when an egg is fresh? How do you determine that an egg is stale?

One can generally tell by the color of an egg when it is fresh, provided it is not more than two or three days old. The shell of a fresh egg is clear, bright and is not easily mistaken for a stale egg. Nevertheless this is not an infallible guide.

Eggs kept in water glass for some time will stay at the bottom when immersed in water. Eggs from ten to fourteen days old kept in a room at a temperature of about 65 degrees, when immersed in a pail of water, will turn on end and begin to rise to the top. As the age of the egg increases it will rise in water more readily. If kept in a cool place it is said that nearly a month will elapse before the egg will rise to the top in water.

When an egg is held to the light, if it is old or stale an air-space can be seen in it. The air-space increases as the egg gets older. This is called candling and it is the surest way of determining whether or not eggs are fresh.

If a stale egg is shaken its contents will run together and a sound can be heard. Eggs once frozen when they thaw out will shake so the sound can be heard.

Whether an egg was laid the same day to be eaten can be determined if it is boiled hard. In this case the skin will adhere to the shell. It will not peel easily. Perhaps this test would hold for an egg boiled the same way a day after it was laid.—Arizona Experiment Station.

TASK OF SHEDDING FEATHERS

Heavy Drain on Constitution of Fowl —Can Be Aided by Feeding Highly Protein Foods.

The shedding of feathers is a heavy drain on the constitution of the fowl because it is necessary to manufacture a new coat. The making of new feathers can be greatly aided by feeding highly protein or meat foods. The ordinary grains like wheat, corn and oats do not contain enough protein. Meat scraps from the house or commercial beef scraps are necessary if best results are to be obtained. If a fowl is thoroughly chilled and thereby weakened by late molting during cold weather, she will find it difficult to recuperate until late winter or early spring. By giving her extra care she can be started laying much earlier in the winter.

TO PREVENT BOWEL TROUBLE

Pepper and Ginger in Chicks' Food or Water Aids in Overcoming Chills on Damp Days.

Black or red pepper and ginger in the chicks' food or water aids in overcoming chills and prevents bowel trouble, especially on cold, damp days. Plenty of grit and oyster shells, together with well-selected, wholesome food, eliminates this necessity in most cases.

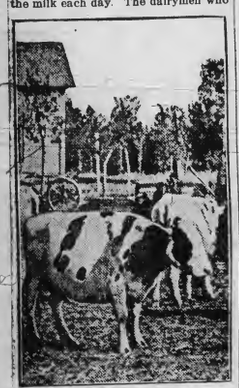
DAIRY



HEAVY PRODUCING DAIRY COW

Dairymen Who Are Successful Are Ones Who Pay Attention to the Little Details.

(By HUGH G. VAN PELT, Iowa.)

Feed your cow the best you know how for six or eight weeks before she freshens. The feed during this period should be light, dry and bulky, so as not to tax the digestive apparatus. The calf should be left with the mother for 48 to 60 hours after birth. This will aid in relieving inflammation.

After the calf is taken away, put the cow on dry feed, about five pounds of grain, with hay. Silage must be included, for the most economical feeding. Increase the amount of grain by one-half pound every day or two until her capacity for milk production is reached. To determine this it is necessary to carefully weigh the feed and the milk each day. The dairymen who make the greatest success are the ones who do the little things.

It is some trouble to weigh the milk and grain, but it must be done. By having the amount increased gradually the heavy producing cow may consume as much as 18 to 20 pounds of grain a day, but each cow has a different limit.

The cow should be fed one pound of grain per day for each 3 to 3.5 pounds of milk produced. It is necessary to watch the milk supply, and when the producing capacity of the cow has been reached any further increase in the feed will be a loss to the dairyman and a useless tax on the cow's digestive apparatus.

IMPORTANCE OF PURE WATER

That Flowing Through Muddy Ditch Is Not Suited to Dairy Cow—Furnish Ample Supply.

A large amount of water is needed by the average dairy cow for the upkeep of bodily functions. In addition to this, much more is needed in the production of milk, as the latter contains 87 per cent of water. Practical dairymen have found that it is a good policy to provide the cow with plenty of good, clean water. That flowing through a muddy ditch is not suited for a dairy cow.

It is also important that the water be of a mild temperature, especially in cold weather. Ice water taken into the stomach of the cow causes a shock to the system that is not conducive to high milk production. The tempering of this cold water in the cow uses some of the energy that might be applied to other purposes. In the winter, freshly pumped water is much better than the cold water in the tank. Tank heaters aid in overcoming this trouble. A cow will drink a much larger quantity of warm water in the winter time than of ice water.

AMOUNT OF GRAIN FOR CALF

Young Animal Should Never Be Given More Than It Will Clean Up—Two Pounds Is Limit.

A small amount of grain is all that is necessary for the calf. Never feed more grain than it will clean up. At the age of six weeks this should be about one-half pound; at the end of two months, one pound daily; and a month later two pounds a day, which is all that is necessary up to six months of age.

GENTLE TREATMENT OF COWS

Be kind and gentle to the cows you are milking. Nothing will so quickly reduce the amount of milk as unkind treatment. Kindness is profitable in handling dumb animals as well as in dealing with members of the human race.

VARIATIONS IN CREAM TEST

Common Cause of Dissatisfaction on Part of Seller—Use of Tester Is Urged by Expert.

(By C. H. ECKLES, Missouri College of Agriculture.)

One of the most common causes of dissatisfaction on the part of the man who sells cream on the butterfat basis, rises from variations in the test. This is especially true if each can is tested separately and the best way for the seller to convince himself that the tester is neither careless nor dishonest is to secure a little outfit for himself. A well-made, accurate and satisfactory tester can now be bought for five dollars and its use will not only satisfy the seller that he is getting honest treatment but will enable him to detect the boarders in his herd. The general interest in this subject is compelling the Missouri agricultural experiment station to reprint a circular for general distribution, but a little discussion of the principal causes of variation in this briefer form may avoid the necessity for so wide a distribution of that circular.

Speed of Separator.—A change in the speed of the separator immediately causes a change in the tests of the cream, the higher the speed the greater the amount of skim milk thrown out and so the higher the test of the cream secured. Putting it in another way, a low speed results in a larger quantity of thinner cream.

Rate of Inflow.—The use of the float does not always insure a uniform flow of milk into the separator, because the faucet may not always be opened equally wide and the flow will be more rapid when the tank is full than when it is nearly empty. Anything which makes the inflow more rapid will increase the proportion of skim milk which goes through, and lower the test of the cream secured.

Flushing the Bowl.—The amount of water used in flushing may easily be varied a pint or more and this without any other cause or variation may change the test by two, three, or even four or five per cent.

Variations in the Milk Itself.—The milk of an entire herd may rise or fall in its test from day to day because of excitement or change in the weather. If the milk of a herd, whose average test is four per cent, is ordinarily so separated that the cream tests 40 per cent fat, the test will suddenly rise to 42.5 per cent if the milk of the herd is suddenly raised to 4.25 per cent without any change in method of separating.

Cream Screw.—The test is, of course, readily controlled by means of the cream screw, but as it is seldom changed in this way, on the average farm, there should be no trouble because of variation from this source.

Feed of the Cow.—Variations in cream tests are practically never caused by changes in the feed of the cow as every well-informed cream seller is now aware.

Mistakes and Dishonesty.—Mistakes are most likely to result from carelessness in taking samples, as they must be very carefully and skillfully taken if they are to tell the truth and result in a fair payment, but actual dishonesty is probably much rarer than many sellers believe. A clever thief would manipulate the reported test in such a way as not to arouse the suspicion that an honest report sometimes brings up in the mind of the man who does not consider all the possible hidden causes of variation.

EXTRAORDINARY SITUATION.

To The Newspaper Readers Of Kentucky:

The executive committee of the Kentucky Press Association wishes to bring to the attention of newspaper readers, and the friends of the press, the serious situation confronting the publishers at this time, and point out some facts which we feel should be communicated to you in our attempt to meet conditions recently thrust upon us. We do this after much thought on the matter, feeling that we are acting for the good of both publisher and reader. Doubtless you have been, or will be called upon to pay a few cents more on your jobwork and in some instances more for your paper and advertising in cases where subscriptions and advertising rates have been at the minimum.

In the interest of a free press we ask you to meet the advance cheerfully.

There may be ample excuse, slight excuse or no excuse to advance the prices on us as they have been advanced, but the fact remains that we are paying from 50 to 500 per cent more for our paper stock, inks, oils, gasoline, metal, etc., than we did eight months ago.

Paper makers insist that there must be a cutting down in the demand upon them; that they are working three shifts a day, and that at this season of the year when they should be accumulating a reserve stock they cannot supply the demand. Large publishers everywhere are trying to meet the suggestion of the paper makers by the strictest economy, in the which they are cutting down the size of paper, margins and granting no return of unsold papers. Small publishers have slight opportunity to economize in this manner. The Federal Trade Commission is deeply concerned and alarmed but so far seems powerless to suggest feasible or adequate relief methods. Under existing circumstances few newspapers can continue long without a readjustment. Hundreds of the weaker ones have already gone under and many more are about to suspend.

There is a remedy and it lies in the strictest economy, advancement of rates on job work, advertising and subscription. It matters not how reluctant publishers are to do this, it will have to be done if they continue in business, and continue to be useful to their readers and patrons.

In conclusion, we call on all persons who believe in the mission of a free press to co-operate with us in adjusting our business to these new and unheard of conditions.

The Executive Committee

Of the Kentucky Press Association.

P. S. Since the above statement was prepared we note a number of press associations have prepared similar statements to the public.

The Boy, or the Hog.

For some weeks now farmers all over the states and counties have been flocking to the local fairs, some to exhibit to the public the results of their efforts and others to see and observe and profit by the results achieved by their fellows.

Among the many attractions to be seen at these fairs is the inevitable big fat pig. His hogship usually tips the beam around one thousand pounds, and we stand and marvel at the labor and patience it must have required to develop such swinish perfection.

Then if we are thinking men our thoughts will probably pass on to wonder if the owner of this marvel has sons of his own, and as to how great an effort he is making to develop them to the highest type to which they are capable of attaining. The hog's owner has been careful to eliminate from its progenitors all that would tend to take from its full and complete development. Has he been just as careful to weed out of his own life and habits and traits of character that would militate against the development of his son?

Often we have seen a boy succeed in life despite the shortcomings of a derelict father, and we have contented ourselves with the simple remark that the boy is a great improvement on the father. The tribute is weak and paltry. Little do we reckon on the fight the boy has waged in order to rise above his surroundings and overcome his handicaps.

Environment is mighty and powerful for good or evil. The greatest blessing a boy can have is parents who can point and guide him toward higher things—higher heights even than those to which they have attained.

At the risk of seeming to preach we wish to say to the fathers of this section that when you look upon the big hog you have seen the ultimate. Nothing further is obtainable unless, possibly, it be a little more of porcine perfection. But when you look upon your small son, how little you can see of the limitless possibilities for good and ill that lie in that small mind and heart, and how your care of him is going to mould his life into almost whatever you may will to make it!

Do not think less of the big hog but more of the small boy.

A Kind Word for the Teacher

The job of the teacher is no easy one.

This is a fact that we too often overlook when we discuss the subject of the education of our children.

We apply the verbal birch to the teachers of our kiddies and overwhelm them with hard criticisms of their ability and methods.

But to have charge of the education of the rising generation is no sinecure.

It demands a degree of patience and tact and enthusiasm that perhaps no other vocation calls for.

And it is well that we go easy with our criticisms and defer our condemnation.

Teaching school is not merely hearing recitations and marking papers. It is a problem in executive management and integrity to control and develop the ego of say a class of thirty individuals each with some idiosyncrasy, and every one with his own determined and contrary will.

No wonder our teachers welcome vacation as eagerly as the pupil.

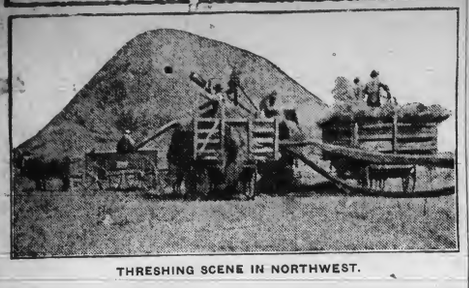
The relief after being keyed up for many long months is great. Of course there are the fluffy-haired girl teachers who merely engage in the desultory teaching of the three Rs until Mr. Right comes along, whom they marry with a precision that is wonderful.

But the vast majority of teachers are faithful persistent workers with their hearts in their work and who love their profession.

These are the teachers who are the salvation of our educational system; they incite the pupils to aim high and instill into them that divine discontent that means success.

They are the exacting teachers and therefore the least loved. But they are the ones to whom the parents look up to with respect.

But theirs is a hard row to hoe and they need plenty of diversion, outdoor and social life to save themselves from the irritation and morbid fretting that is incidental to their difficulties.



It might be a good idea for parents possessing the means to help the jaded teacher to have a good vacation.—Buffalo News.

Miss Ann McClasson, of Bullittsville neighborhood, entertained with a delightful week-end affair the following: Miss Elizabeth Hicks, Kathryn Hicks, Glenna Rose Gaines, Messrs. Alan Gaines, Geo. Gale, Norton Ford and Archibald McGlasson.

FEED AVAILABLE FOR CATTLE IS WASTED

THRESHING SCENE IN NORTHWEST.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A vast quantity of feed available for cattle is now either wasted absolutely or put to some less profitable use, says a recent report which the department has just published as Part IV of a comprehensive survey of the entire meat situation in the United States. Failure to utilize the full value of this material has increasd unnecessarily the cost of producing meat, has diminished the profits from cattle feeding, and has discouraged many farmers from engaging in an industry essential to their permanent prosperity.

According to the report already mentioned, the loss in grain, straw, and corn stover amounts to more than $100,000,000 annually. Both of these products are disposed of most economically when fed to cattle in connection with some form of concentrated feed. Straw is especially valuable in carrying the breeding herd through the winter, in wintering stockers, and as a supplementary roughage for fattening cattle. Stover, too, is an excellent feed for wintering cattle, especially mature breeding cows. Nevertheless, in many sections of the country where these products are abundant, little attempt is made to take advantage of their value for these purposes.

Of an annual straw crop of approximately 120,000,000 tons, it is estimated that only two-thirds is put to its best use—live-stock production. Of the remainder, a little more than one-half is sold or turned under and the rest, 15 per cent of the total crop, is burned. Burning is practically an absolute waste, and although plowing under does coatribute something to soil fertility, the benefit to the land is less than that which would be derived fom the use of the straw to produce manure. "Of all systems of obtaining permanent soil fertility," says the report, "none is so practical or as easily available as that of feeding live stock."

The average value of all kinds of straw is placed at about $5 a ton. In many sections, of course, no such price can be realized for it, and as a matter of fact only about 8 per cent of the crop actually is sold. The figure mentioned, however, may be taken as representing the value to the farmer of straw if he will use it properly in his farming operations as feed or bedding. In order to illustrate how this may be done the report gives three sample rations for wintering a breeding herd of beef cattle on straw combined with silage, shock corn, and cottonseed or linseed meal. Anyone of these rations, it is said, will prove economical. They are as follows:

Rations for Wintering Breeding Cows.

Ration 1:
Straw	10
Silage	20
Cottonseed meal or linseed meal	1½
Ration 2:
Straw	20
Cottonseed cake or oil cake	2
Ration 3:
Straw	10
Shock corn	10
Cottonseed meal	1

In this connection it is pointed out also that feeding straw in the winter will insure under certain circumstances the full utilization of summer grass. In a number of western states it frequently happens that grass goes to waste because feeders are unwilling to pay the high prices asked for steers in the spring. With an abundance of straw on hand to lessen the cost of wintering, feeders can take advantage of the lower prices for stocker cattle in the fall to secure on reasonable terms at that time enough stock to pasture all the grass the following year.

The production of corn stover is about twice that of grain straw, amounting to approximately 245,000,000 tons a year. A larger percentage (81.5) of this is fed than of the straw, but the waste is nevertheless astonishing. For this, poor methods of feeding are largely responsible. By far the most economical method of handling corn is by ensiling, but as a matter of fact only 8.1 per cent of the acreage was put in the silo in 1914, the year in which these investigations were made. About 11 per cent was cut for greenfeed and 81 per cent allowed to mature for grain. It is in the last portion of the acreage that the greatest waste occurs. Stripping the leaves from the stalks which are subsequently burned, removing the stalk above the top ear only, leaving the stalks to stand in the field until the loss of leaves and leaching have removed much of their fertilizing value, are all unthrifty methods. Furthermore, almost 4 per cent of the stover is harned, as though, instead of being a potential source of revenue, it were merely a nuisance to be gotten rid of. As a percentage of stover that is thrown away is as high as 7 or 8 per cent and the total loss to the country from the practice is estimated at nearly $15,000,000 a year.

To obtain satisfactory results from the feeding of farm roughages, such as straw and stover, they must be combined with some form of concentrated feed. At the present time large quantities of such feed, in the form of cottonseed meal and cake, corn, molasses, peanuts, and beans are exported for the use of European feeders. If the straw and stover that are now wasted were employed to feed more cattle, these concentrates could be consumed at home. The result would be a tremendous saving not only in the cost of producing beef but in the cost of enriching the soil as well. In 1914, for example, about 1,000,000 tons of cottonseed meal—half the total production—were applied directly to the soil as fertilizer. If this had been fed to cattle instead, three-quarters of the fertilizing value would have been returned to the soil as manure. The loss of the other fourth would have been far more than counterbalanced by the profit on the meat produced economically by the meal and the necessary roughages. Much the same thing is true of the other oil meals.

The value of these meals is far better appreciated in Europe than here. Denmark, for example, feeds annually 478 pounds of oil cake to each of her mature cattle, the United States approximately 24 pounds. Furthermore, the European feeder is aware of the fact that the high-protein meal, while more expensive to buy, is more economical to use. Meal of this quality is seldom sold on the domestic markets because the American farmer has not yet learned its value. Cottonseed and linseed are perhaps the best known of the oil meals, but there are others the use of which as feed could be profitably extended. Both peanut and soy bean meal and cake, for instance, are in good demand in Europe.

The efficient use of these and other feeds discussed in the report is of the utmost importance to the American farmer, it is pointed out, because the day when close calculation in feeding was not necessary is, in all probability, past. Hereafter it is likely that success will depend upon ability to put to the best use all available products. A greater knowledge of what these products are and of the ways in which they can be fed will result in the elimination of enormous waste.

WORMS WORRY SMALL CHICKS

When Several Establish Themselves in Throat and Approach Maturity, They Cause Suffocation.

Gapes is caused by the presence of gape worms in the throat of the young chick. Probably the actual injury caused by the presence of the worm is very slight, but the chick's throat is so small that when several worms have established themselves and approach maturity they so far fill the throat of the chick as to cause suffocation.

In all probability these worms often exist in the throats of larger chickens, but because they do not noticeably deprive their hosts of air they reach maturity or are dislodged, and their presence is never detected.

CULTIVATING PEAS IN CORN

Remove Front and Rear Tooth From 14-Inch Tooth Harrow and Straddle Row With Implement.

A good way to plant peas in corn is to wait until about two or three weeks before laying by. After cultivating the corn, plant a row of peas in the center of the middle. When the peas come up take a 14-tooth harrow and remove the front and rear middle tooth, and possibly raise the outside teeth next the corn so the roots will not be injured. Spread the harrow out so the middle will be pretty well filled and straddle the pea row with the implement. One or two cultivations of the peas will be a great help to them.

GOOD STORAGE IS NECESSITY

Place for Perishable Foods Often Lacking and Speculators Are Given Advantages.

Farmers lose much every year because their facilities for storing perishable foods are poor. Every farm home should have a cellar, storehouse and refrigerator so the surplus foods may be saved till such a time as they may be consumed. The fact that producers have inadequate facilities for saving perishable products gives speculators advantages.

INSANITARY STAMP.

Dear, dear, it is getting so that it is hardly safe to be alive. As if it were not enough to have to guard against germs in water and germs in food and to be watchful that we are not exposed to infectious diseases through association with our fellow beings, we must guard ourselves against another peril. Postage stamps, it now appears, are likely to carry germs about with them, says Indianapolis Star. Out of 50 stamps gathered from different places and tested by Philadelphia scientists, 48 specimens yielded bacteria. With the possible exception of two cases, it is true, none of the germs isolated could cause disease, but, as the investigators ably argue, they might as easily be dangerous germs as harmless ones and therefore it behooves everyone to be careful about handling stamps. This means, of course, that they should not be applied to their proper places on letters by the aid of that convenient organ, the tongue, used for the purpose from time out of mind. Hereafter the person who is in a hurry to get a letter in the mail must, if he would exercise due caution, restrain his haste until he can find a wet sponge wherewith to moisten the stamp.

Eating is important to everyone. It is a matter that calls for thought, for eating anything and everything without thought is certain to breed disease. Good health is necessary to our happiness, and health depends largely on the food we eat, its quality and quantity, and the regularity of our meals, says Milwaukee Journal. Quality includes the cooking. There are some who, as the Scotch say, "Dig their graves with their teeth." Louis Corano, some hundreds of years ago, wrote discourses on how to acquire and keep good health. The chief thing, according to Corano, was to eat simple foods, in moderation and lead a temperate life. His theories are quite as good today as in his time. Cicero said, "Eat to live, not live to eat." William Penn gave this advice: "Always rise from the table with an appetite and you will never sit down without one." Overeating, eating without regard to digestion, is the cause of a large proportion of our sicknesses. Gluttony kills more men than the sword. "Who minds not his stomach will soon mind little else."

Another expedition in search of sunken treasure has set out under the direction of a submarine engineering company of New York. Its objective is the wreck of the steamship Marica, which went down four years ago off Cape Charles light, with a million dollars in silver bars. If the new methods for the recovery of treasure from the ocean bed prove as successful as they seem scientific, a great deal of very fascinating fiction will have to be rewritten to bring it down to date.

A man whose turn of mind is agricultural rather than military wants to know why the poison gases which have been used in war abroad cannot be employed in this country to exterminate grasshoppers and other insects injurious to the crops. There may be something in this idea worthy of serious attention.

A college psychologist explains that girls kiss soldiers because they are hypnotized by the uniform. This destruction of their manly charms at one fell swoop and their cold-blooded representations as dummies is quite enough to make the boys in khaki forswear allegiance to home and to country and turn woman-haters.

In the days to come, that fisherman or ancient mariner who has not a tale to tell of a hard-fought and more hard-won battle with a shark in an inland harbor will have no standing in his local community.

The girl with the dimples never bothers about being out of style, because she knows that the fellers will travel nine miles for dimples to every mile they will travel for a soup bone.

Statistics cited prove that health on the farm is not as good as in the city, but many people will continue to stand up and cheer for the old-fashioned farm cooking.

Waists are to button up the back again this fall, which is Fashion's plea of guilty to the charge that someone is always taking the joy out of life.

Jenkins-Ransom Wedding.

Wm. E. Jenkins and Miss Bertha J. Ransom, both of Verona, were married Thursday afternoon, at the parsonage of the First Baptist church of Covington by Dr. R. B McDaniel.

AN INTERESTING SESSION

Held By The Hawthorn Literary Society—Hughas Gets The Decision.

The open session of the Hawthorne Literary Society of the B. H. S., which was held in Library Hall last Friday, was well attended and the meeting was very enjoyable. Principal Caywood opened the meeting with an address in which he emphasized the importance of literary work in the schools. The second number on the program was a piano duet by Misses Norma McGlasson and Maude Tanner. Following came a declamation on "Prohibition" by Mr. Horace Cleveland which was greeted with well-mertited applause. The fourth number consisted of a vocal solo by Mr. Frank Milner after which a piano solo was given by Miss Alice Walton. The selection rendered was not one in which she could display to the best advantage the skill which she possesses. Prof. Muntz followed with a very enjoyable reading dealing with expatriation. Then came a quartet by Messrs. Caywood, Muntz, Kelly and Milnier. Their response to an encore was especially enjoyed. The eighth number was a reading by Miss Agnes Carver who was followed with a vocal solo by Miss Kathryn Kelly. The tenth and last number consisted of a debate which was the main event of the evening. The subject for debate was—Resolved that Charles Evans Hughes should be elected President to succeed Woodrow Wilson. The affirmative was capably taken care of by Mr. Denzil Carpenter and Miss Elizabeth Kelly and the negative was supported by Mr. William Finn and Miss Gwendolen Goodridge. After consultation, the judges, who were Mrs. Nettie Hughes, Mr. G. W Tolin and Mr. A. A. Yelton, reached a decision in favor of the affirmative side, their verdict being unanimous. Thorough and careful preparation was shown by the participants, the efforts of Mr. Carpenter being worthy of especial mention as his forcible argument was supplemented by an excellent delivery. All in all the session was received with appreciation by those attending and it is hoped a repetition will be forthcoming in the near future.

How to Keep the Boy on the Farm

The answers to this question are as varied as the minds that have advanced them. Some have merit. Some are doubtful. Some are utter nonsense.

The problem, we believe, could be met if fathers of boys on the farms could only be brought to see facts as they are.

We venture to say that more boys leave the farm on account of the deadly monotony and sameness of the average farmer boy's life than from any other cause. The normal boy craves the excitement where humanity herds in crowds. It can't be found on the farm, hence he must go where it is to be found.

And right here is where the average farmer father fails from want of foresight. He uses every means at his command, even to force, in preventing the boy from familiarizing himself with town or city life. The business and social life of the town are cried down as something to be shunned—the surest way in the world to make the boy determined to plumb them to the depths. The boy is held to a monotonous routine on the farm until one of two things usually happens. He either sinks into a listless, spiritless automaton, or he revolts and throws off the shackles altogether.

Why not encourage the boy to familiarize himself with town life to some extent? Our word for it, he would soon lose many of his illusions. Let him go among the young men who are filling positions in town. Impress upon him that these men, instead of living like millionaires, are in reality worse dredges than he; that while he sometimes must work early and late for a very short season, these young men must frequently be at work before he is out of bed, and must remain there until he is back in bed again; and that as to the matter of fine clothes, frequently the suits he sees on their backs comprise their entire wardrobe. Let him also learn that while they frequently handle much money, very little of it sticks to their fingers—except with ugly results to themselves.

Let the boy come to town. Let him have a taste of town life and make the acquaintance of town boys. Let him learn, as he is bound to do, that not by any means is all gold that glitters. Thus, with the right surroundings and conditions on the farm an occasional dose of town life will not hurt him, and he will soon grow to see that his own life is infinitely to be preferred to that of any town boy of his acquaintance.—Ex.

A Sensational Elopement.

Elbert Jones, who resided on the Price pike about two miles from Florence, eloped one day last week with Miss Grace Houston, his neighbor. Jones leaves a wife and one small child. He was engaged in the dairy business with Ernest Horton, and it was thought he was doing well. At the time he left home his wife was visiting his parents at Petersburg, and he left a letter confessing he had wronged her, and directed her how to dispose of certain property that belonged to him. Just before leaving he drew a considerable sum of money he and his partner had in bank. It appears that his financial affairs are in very bad shape.

BOONE COUNTY

Is Fast Becoming One of the Leading Dairy Counties of the State.

That Boone is fast becoming a dairy county is evident by the large quantity of milk and cream being handled by the Union and Burlington creameries which, as the saying goes is not a drop in the bucket when compared to the quantity that is hauled out of the county and being shipped by both river and rail. There is no other business in which the farmers can engage that will produce the revenue and at the same time improve their land, and as this becomes the more evident the herds of dairy cattle will increase and the upbuilding of the herd will become the study of wise owners. There are in the county quite a number of extra herds of cows, with the owners of which the milk business has passed the experimental stage, but these owners lose no opportunity to increase the productiveness of their herds, and are encouraging their less attentive neighbor to become interested along that line, which makes the outlook very favorable for Boone to rank as a leading Kentucky dairy county in the next few years. And why not? An excellent market for both milk and cream is at her door, which reduces to the minimum the cost of putting the milk product on the market. The income from the dairy is every day in the year and the owner knows pretty correctly upon what he can depend in so far as his cows are concerned, and while his bank account is growing the fertility of his land is increasing. In what other business is this the case?

Assafoetida and Others.

Kansas City Star: Some one recently has recalled the ancient practice of wearing a bag of assafoetida around the neck to ward off disease. Where did the idea come from originally? Who first got the notion that wearing sulphur in shoes would keep colds away?

Presumably these, together with any number of other ideas, have come down from prehistoric times. The Roman Emperor Tiberius used to wear laurel leaves to protect himself from lightning. Augustus wore the skin of a sea calf for similar purpose.

Pliny was a great naturalist, but mingled with accurate observations are such statements as that the stag draws serpents from their holes by its breath; that a certain mollusk, fastening itself to a ship's keel, will hold the ship motionless even in a storm; that human saliva has mysterious properties, so that for instance, if a man spits into a serpent's throat, the serpent speedily dies.

Aristotle had reported the supposed observation that on the seashore no animal ever died except while the tide was ebbing. Pliny, several centuries later, corrected this observation. He found from studies made in Gaul that the observation applied only to the men. In the eighteenth century scientific observations in France proved that Pliny as well as Aristotle was wrong. But the belief that persons dying on the seashore "go out with the tide" is still prevalent.

In the middle ages the witchcraft delusion was supported on the highest authority. Judicial decisions in every country in Europe show that the ravages of witchcraft had been abundantly established after searching investigations. Macaulay records the fact that Charles II touched nearly one hundred thousand persons in the course of his reign, to cure them of scrofula. A serious aspect of the case is that a good many people really thought they were cured.

Presumably the growth of such beliefs was due chiefly to what would now be called hasty generalizations. A fisherman, perhaps died when the tide was going out, so it was inferred that animals died only at such a time. A sick person happened to get well after contact with the king, therefore the king's touch was considered healing.

Will Have a Picnic.

Salmon fishers are expecting a picnic next month if the river is not too high for that class of sport. It is claimed by those experienced in Salmon fishing that a salmon will pay no attention to creek minnows used as bait, while river bass relish them.

AUTOMOBILE BURNING

While the Driver Was Speeding Along Dixie Highway—A Hair Raising Experience.

Bert Rouse went to Covington, last Saturday, in his Ford, taking a considerable load of farm produce. He was not far from home when he discovered that his machine was indisposed, the symptoms being those of heart failure as it was with great difficulty it climbed the slightest ascents, a hill being out of the question. Having blown the muffler off of the machine he had made up his mind to pass through the quiet districts in the city so fast the cops could not see him, and you can imagine his chagrin when his machine went dead as he came upon the first traffic officer. He explained his troubles to the policeman in a most persuasive and impressive manner, and when he got the engine going again the policeman shouted, "Let 'er go Gallagher," and he did. Bert took the machine to a garage for repairs but the garage man found it as obedient and submissive a Ford as ever came down the road, and gave the owner a few pointers, when he concluded he could master it without further trouble, and proceeded to make his purchases and started for home. It was at Lewisburg that the real fun began. As he rounded the turn and started up Willow Run hill, Bert threw upon the throttle and the auto began a back-fire that made everyone who heard or saw the machine think a machine gun was being tried out and there was consternation among the traffic on the hill. A slow-up was had at the top of the hill when some one suggested to Mr. Rouse that a conflagration was in progress in the rear of his machine, and almost instanter he filled the air with flying bundles after the fashion of an explosion of considerable magnitude. The car being relieved of the bundles it was discovered the fire had burned thru the machine floor and the mat and was ready to begin business with the passages. The fire was extinguished, the machine reloaded with the packages and the trip homeward was continued and completed under very trying circumstances, but Sunday morning Mr. Rouse appeared to be enjoying his experience of the preceding day.

NUST GIVE UP PASSES

Or Political Offices— Even Railroad Employes Are Not Exempt, Says Atty. General.

Frankfort, Oct. 22.—New Year's day will bring a great many district and town officials of Kentucky to a decision whether they shall sacrifice the privilege of riding free on the railroads on the altar of public service or abandon that service at discretion.

There is a large representation of railroad employes on School Boards and Town Councils as well as in other positions of local authority in Kentucky. As employes of the railroads they are exempted from the operation of the anti-pass law; but as public officers they are liable to forfeiture of their offices and punishment if they ride on passes.

Attorney General Logan said he is of the opinion that the law clearly includes all these minor officials, and though many if not most of them, are serving in unsalaried capacities, they cannot avail themselves of their privileges as railroad employes to ride on passes without incurring the penalty for violating the law.

Pope-McConnel Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Myra Virginia McConnell to Mr. Fred Beallie Pope, will be celebrated this morning at 9 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John C. McConnell at El Dorado plantation two miles west of this city. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. W. L. Duren, pastor of the First M. E. church. Only the immediate families will be present. Miss McConnell is the charming and only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C McConnell who moved from Kentucky to this city several years ago, and has made many friends while here. Mr. Pope is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Pope and is a fine business man being book-keeper in the First State Bank. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Pope will leave for an extensive bridal tour. —Columbus, Miss., Dispatch, October 9th.

Automobile on Fire

Maree Riddell's machine back-fired when he cranked it in front of his store about eight o'clock last Friday night, and a considerable volume of flames appeared instantly in the leaves beneath. He called for help and the machine was pushed from over the burning leaves, but before the fire that was in progress under the hood could be put out three of the fingers on one of his hands were burnt considerable. For a while it looked like the machine would be destroyed.

Returning to Normal Conditions

After a serious slump in 1915, French imports of American leaf tobacco have almost returned to normal, according to statistics covering the first seven months of 1916, and included in a report to the Department of Commerce from C. W. A Veditz, American commercial attache at Paris.

Mr. Veditz reports that figures just published covering the foreign trade of France for the first seven months of 1916 show that Republic imported from the United States 48,390,360 pounds of leaf tobacco, against 9,867,670 pounds in the like period of 1915, and 42,351,-010 pounds in January-July 1914.

FORTY YEARS AGO TODAY

According to the census of 1870 the average wealth of each citizen of this county is $457.16.

The dark war cloud still hovers over the east and the war excitement, instead of abating, seems to increase. England has determined to hold Constantinople to the last and awaits the invasion of Turkey by Russia, in which event she will occupy Constantinople with 30,000 soldiers.

GERM IS LOCATED.

Cause of Infantile Paralysis Found To Lodge in Big Intestine.

Definite admission was made today by Johns Hopkins Hospital, through Dr. Horace T. Burrows, who has charge of the poliomyetis investigation, that the large intestine has been found to be the seat of the disease, as previously intimated in the Public Ledger. The discovery marks the greatest advance since the isolation of the germ two years ago by Dr. Simon Flexner, of the Rockefeller Institute. The conclusion is announced to be that infection is through the mouth, the germs being taken into the system by something swallowed. Lodgment of the germ in the large intestine follows, and the ensuing infection causes the paralysis.—Baltimore Cor. Philadelphia Ledger.

He Had the Automobile Bug.

He had the automobile bug and presently he bought a little 4 cyl. runabout, with which it seemed he ought to be quite satisfied. but, say, it wasn't long until he looked with large contempt and scorn upon that small 4 cyl. His mind was on an 8 cyl now, and presently he had an 8cyl. spinning down the road, which made him truly glad. But not for long, was he content with this, his latest prize, for soon he got a 12 cyl., which he thought was just his size. He drives that now, but listen. If there were a chance to find a car that was all cylinders he'd want to have that kind.—N. Y., Herald.

A Taste of Winter.

Weather very much like that which prevails in winter struck this part of the country last Friday morning, having been preceded a few hours by a thunder storm and a heavy down pour of rain.

HIGHWAY EXPENDITURES

Increase of More than 250 Per Cent in Total Outlay for Roads and Bridges.

Rapid increase in total expenditures for roads and bridges, growth of building and maintenance activities under State supervision, and a sharp decrease in the proportion of contributions in the form of statute labor mark the development of highway work in the United States during the past 12 years. These facts are brought out by statistics for the calendar year 1915, recently compiled by the Office of Public Roads and Rural Engineering of the department.

The total length of public roads in the United States outside the limits of incorporated towns and cities was about 2,152,000 miles on January 1, 1916. Of this about 277 000 miles or 11.3 per cent. were improved with some form of surfacing. The mileage of surfaced roads has been increasing at the rate of about 16,000 miles a year, and in 1915 approximately one-half of this increase was made under the supervision of State highway departments. In addition, these departments supervised the maintenance of nearly 52,000 miles of main and trunk line roads.

Got an Ugly Fall.

One day last week as County Judge Cason was descending the steps that lead from his office on the second floor of the court house, he slipped and fell when he stepped to the tile floor, and rolled down the flight of steps leading to the exit at the north end of the hall. He was rendered breathless for some time and received several bruises, but fortunately none of his injuries were serious. An investigation to ascertain the cause of the accident revealed a leaf adhering to one of his shoe heels, and which had evidently turned the trick The Judge is yet limping in spots, and is congratulating himself because of having been hurt no worse.

Interviewing the Growers.

J. M. Thompson of the firm of Wingate & Thompson, Petersburg, made a tour of a considerable territory in this county, last week, buying tobacco, offering as high as ten cents, which many of the growers refused to accept, they having an idea that a better price will prevail a little later on as what information they have points that way. The crop in this county is said to be light in weight but of splendid color, and what is lacking in pounds is expected to be made up in quality, altho there are those who say Boone's crop of tobacco is of an indifferent quality.

Change of Pastors.

Bishop Brossart of the Catholic diocese of Covington has announced the following changes among the clergy of the diocese:

William Cassander, pastor of the Church of St. Mary of the Assumption Alexandria, becomes chaplain of the Convent of the Good Shepherd, the Highlands, Newport. Rev. John Kroger, pastor of St. Paul's church, Florence, becomes pastor at Alexandria. Rev. J. M. Lelen, chaplain of the Convent of the Good Shepherd, succeeds Father Kroger at Florence, also having charge of Independence, which is a mission of Florence.

Taking Part in the Campaign.

Supt. Edgar C. Riley left Sunday morning for Murray, Calloway co., at which place he addressed a large and very enthusiastic assemblage of Democrats on the political issues of the day last Monday. He is billed for an itinery in the Third Congressional District where he will makes several speeches before the close of the campaign. Monday was Mr. Riley's first appearance on the political rostrum in the campaign now being waged.

Auto in Collision with a Bridge

Last Sunday night Bernard Rogers drove his machine against the end of the iron railing on the second bridge east of Miss Julia Dinsmore's on the Belleview pike. The radiator was ruined and the machine slightly damaged otherwise. The bridge crosses the stream at right angles with the pike, making the crossing somewhat dangerous even in day light. No one was hurt.

Write for the New Instructions

The State Road Department has prepared new instructions to surveyors, and all plans which will be made for State Aid work from now on will be made in accordance with the new instructions. Engineers who expect to make surveys for the various counties for 1917 work should write that office for a copy of the new instructions.

The stockholders in the Walton Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse will meet at Walton, Friday, Oct. 27th, to incorporate and make arrangements for opening the house for business the latter part of November. Work is progressing on the remodeling of the building and the installation of the necessary equipment and everything promises to be in readiness by the appointed time and there is every assurance of the warehouse being first-class in its appointments.

Carl Conner fell from a wagon at the residence of his father Meridith Conner near Richwood last Thursday and sustained a serious fracture of the left elbow and fore arm. The fracture was so severe that the boy was taken to Cincinnati by Dr. G. C Rankins to have an X-Ray examination to determine the extent of the injury.

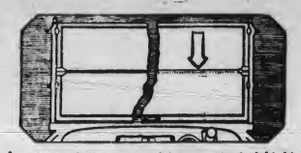
Saturday a "gospel train" automobile passed through here enroute to Florida. The auto was an extended Ford with three seats, and was occupied by a number of ladies and gentlemen, evidently engaged in religious work. The sides of the car were inscribed with numerous scripural quotations, and on the rear was printed "From Huntington West Virginia to Sebing, Florida."

Married—Jesse Clark Sellars and Miss Mattie Leola Allen were married at Brookville, Ind., Oct. 14, in the presence of a few friends and relatives. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Allen, formerly of Boone county, now of Metamora, Ind., and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alpheus Sellars of Metamora. The best wishes of many friends is tendered the happy young couple.

Frank Jacobs, R. T. Vories, Jeff McCune, and J. T. Ballard, of Sparta, E. B. Hisel of Sanders and Capt. Robert Utterback of Louisville were here Thursday enroute home from Williamstown where they had been attending the Grant circuit court as witnesses in the suit of Mrs. Nancy Kinman of Ellis ton, against the L. and N. Railroad Company for injuries sustained by being struck by a truck at Sparta about eight months ago.

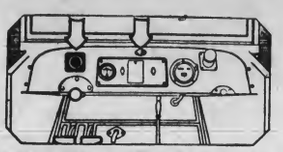
Last Saturday evening Misses Maud Crisler, teacher of violin, Covington, and Miss Dorothy Summers, teacher of piano, Cincinnati, gave a recital in the Verona school auditorium, and the hall was filled to its capacity, 180 tickets having been sold. The young ladies showed rare ability in their chosen department, and the audience evidenced the highest appreciation of the beautiful musical program so artistically rendered.

The Walton Baptist church will begin a protracted meeting Sunday, Oct. 29th, the pastor, Rev. Olus Hamilton preaching the opening discourse. On Oct. 30th, Dr C. C. Carroll of Winchester, Clark county, will be here to take charge of the meeting and there is promise of a great and interesting meeting for Dr. Carroll is one of the strongest exponents of the gospel in the State. He is a son of the late Dr. B. H Carroll of Texas, who was one of the foremost preachers in the Baptist church.



Geo. B. Powers, the real estate agent, has a display of the "Lincoln Wonder" silo corn in his office in the Equitable Bank that is a wonder indeed. Some of the stalks have five fully developed ears of corn of good size and the foliage is what is expressly desired for silo purposes. Mr. Powers is not interested in the sale of the corn but introduced it for the purpose of helping the farmer who has a silo or dairy, and ho would be glad to have the public call and see it as it is a product of his own farm.

The meeting of Walton Chapter Order Eastern Star, last Monday night, was very interesting and enjoyable, Mrs. I. T Grubbs, the Worthy Matron, making a very interesting report of the session of the Grand Chapter Order Eastern Star held at Dawson Springs, Hopkins county, when Mrs. B. K Menefee was unanimously elected Worthy Grand Matron of Kentucky. Arrangements are being made to give Sister Menefee a fine reception by Walton Chapter on Monday evening, Nov. 20th, in honor of her election to the highest office in the order in the State.



Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Green and daughter Miss Louise and Mrs. Edith Baker attended the funeral of Miss Corinne Conrad at Dry Ridge Tuesday. Miss Conrad was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. B. Conrad of near Dry Ridge, and was a most lovable young lady and a very active worker in the Baptist church. She had been ill for some time with an affection of the heart and Saturday evening shortly after having a pleasant talk with her parents she was seized with a paroxysm of pain and by the time they reached her bedside she was dead. The loss of their only child has prostrated Mr. and Mrs. Conrad and the heartfelt sympathy of their many friends is tendered them in their great bereavement.

Fred Waltz, a former well known citizen of Walton died at the St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Covington, Oct. 18th, from a blood clot on the brain, having been ill but a short time. The remains were brought here Friday in charge of Undertaker A. M. Edwards, and after a short funeral service at the Baptist church by Rev. Olus Hamilton, the interment took place in the Baptist cemetery. Mr. Waltz was born and reared here, and married Miss Liz ie Snow who preceded him to the grave years ago. One daughter was born to this union, Mrs. A. W. Sanderson who resides in British Columbia, near Sumas, Washington, but owing to the great distance was unable to attend the funeral. The remains were accompanied here by his niece, Mrs. Walter Woife, daughter of Charles Schultz, and Mrs. J. L Thome, daughter of the late Thos. Walsh, who was a gent of the Q. and C. Railroad here many years. Mr. Waltz was a carpenter by trade, and was well known by our older citizens.

Wider and longer seats and deeper cushions, as indicated by arrow.

MAXWELL Motor Cars are now equipped with a new and improved windshield, still longer and more flexible springs, wider seats, deeper and softer cushions, dashlight, gasoline gauge, and other equally important refinements.

To the generous value heretofore present in the Maxwell product, these extra improvements have now been added.

This is in line with the Maxwell policy—so widely advertised—not to change the Maxwell in any essential detail, but to continue improving it so that it will always be a standard, recognized product, constantly abreast of the best practices of the industry.

Notwithstanding the superlative and sometimes confusing claims that are made in behalf of various automobiles, we restate our sincere conviction that Maxwell Motor Cars offer more real value per dollar than any other car in the world.

This too, is the belief of the thousands and thousands of Maxwell owners. And these beliefs are supported by actual and tangible facts. We actually know that within the entire history of the automobile business, no motor car—in any class or at any price—has equalled the Maxwell in honest dollar-for-dollar value.

And if you will examine a Maxwell, ride in it, compare it with other cars, consider its splendid record, reputation and past performances, you too, will know it.

Farmers' Institute.

There appears in this issue the program for a series of lectures at Burlington High School building, beginning today, Thursday. The subjects are those in which everybody is more or less interested and it is hoped there will be a large attendance each day. Prof. Caywood succeeded in securing the services of the speakers from the College of Agriculture at Lexington, and they are well informed upon the subjects upon which they will talk. Show that you appreciate the efforts of the Professor in this direction by giving the speakers large audiences. There is one thing sure if you don't know any more after hearing them you will know no less. The fact that notice of these lectures has not been given before this date is the fact that Prof. Caywood did not receive notice of their coming until Tuesday evening.

Following is the program:

Duty is never so disagreeable as when it is neglected.

Just Neighborliness.

Stop a minute! Think of the great humanizing quality of neighborliness.

Contrast a community where it thrives and flourishes with one where it is a negligible quantity.

Consider how gregarious a creature is man, and how his very nature demands intercourse with his fellows.

Sit down and reckon up the percent of your comfort and happiness that depends in whole or in part on the good will of your neighbors.

Think what you would be without neighbors—a modern Robinson Crusoe, a hermit.

Honestly, now, don't about nine-tenths of the enjoyments of life come either directly or indirectly from your neighbors? They certainly do.

Well, now, are you doing YOUR part as a neighbor? Remember, your neighbor needs a neighbor as badly as you do—and you are he. Are you doing your full part to pass along the little acts of neighborliness and kindness that are extended to you? Or are you like the sponge, absorb until you are full and never give up until you are squeezed?

Now ask yourself this question: "What would this world be if every other man were just like me?"

Are you a neighbor or a sponge? BE A NEIGHBOR.

SPEECHES THEN AND NOW.

In the Outlook for September 2, 1911, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Our country stands well nigh alone among the great civilized powers in being unbroken by the present world wide war. For this we should be humbly grateful.

"I wish it explicitly understood that I am not at this time passing judgment in one way or the other upon Germany for what she did to Belgium. I am merely calling attention to what has actually been done in Belgium. I am not passing judgment one way or the other upon Germany's action. A deputation of Belgians has arrived in this country to invoke our assistance in the time of their dreadful need.

"What action our government can or will take I know not. It has been announced that no action can be taken that will interfere with our entire neutrality. It is certainly eminently desirable that we should remain entirely neutral, and nothing but urgent need would warrant breaking our neutrality and taking sides one way or the other.

"Neutrality may be of prime necessity in order to preserve our own interests, to maintain peace in so much of the world as is not affected by the war, and to conserve our influence for helping toward the reestablishment of general peace when the time comes; for if any outside power is able at such time to be the medium for bringing peace, it is more likely to be the United States than any other.

"Of course it would be folly to jump into the gulf ourselves to no good purpose, and very probably nothing that we could have done would have helped Belgium. We have not the smallest responsibility for what has befallen here, and I am sure that the sympathy of this country for the suffering of the men, women and children of Belgium is very real.

"Nevertheless, this sympathy is compatible with full acknowledgement of the unwisdom of our utter ing a single word of official protest unless we are prepared to make that protest effective; and only the clearest and most urgent national duty would ever justify us in deviating from our rule of neutrality and non-interference.

"Every public man, every writer who speaks with wanton offensiveness of a foreign power or of a foreign people, whether he attacks England or France or Germany, whether he assails the Russians or the Japanese, is doing an injury to the whole American body politic. We have plenty of shortcomings at home to correct before we start out to critize the shortcomings of others."

Contrast his recent "skin 'em alive" speeches with this calm, judicial article on America's duty in September 1914.

Which is partisanry and which is patriotism?

At a meeting of the American Society of International Law in April, 1914, Senator Root was one of the chief orators. The Mexican situation was then thought to be at a very critical stage. The Washington Post's account of Mr. Root's speech said that he "spoke with tears streaming down his cheeks and in a voice that shook with emotion." He did not until after his speech was delivered know that the crisis had been averted by the interchange of notes between our department of state and the South American countries which brought about the A. B. C. Conference. And it is said that he was profoundly affected when the Secretary of State informed the assemblage of that happy averting of the crisis.

Mr. Root's speech was reported as follows:

"I have been feeling very unhappy during the last few days over our affairs in Mexico," he said. "It is not in the possibilities of human nature to avoid difference of opinion as to policy, and every one who has a duty to perform must act according to the dictates of his own judgment and own conscience in the performance of that duty. I wish the cup could pass from us."

At this point in his speech the Senator's voice grew husky and tears welled from his eyes.

"But the President has acted upon his responsibility and his conscience. He is the head of this great nation. It is for the nation that he acts. No matter how we may have differed in our opinions of policy in the past, we must all, every one of us, stand loyally by him. There must be no backward look, but forward, for the success and honor of our beloved country, which we best serve in loyal support of the chief magistrate upon whom rests the responsibility of leadership.

"Thank Heaven, we have a President in whose lofty character, in whose sincerity of purpose in his genuine desire to do what is right, wise, patriotic, and what is best for the country and humanity, we can all trust absolutely. I trust in it. I have differed from him in questions of policy and doubtless shall differ from him again. Men coming up with different environments and associations and ideas must differ; but I have confidence in the character and purpose of the President of the United States. He is my President, and I will stand behind him in his leadership."

Three days later in the Senate when force was proposed against Mexico he said that even a threat of force would tend "to reverse the policy of the U. S. and take a step backward in the path of civilized progress."

Today this utterance of Senator Root and his recent speech in New York.

Which is partisanry and which is patriotism?

What counsel are the people of America who wish to stand by what is right, who wish to vote wisely according to the best interests of the country, who wish to stand by things that are just and to approve them—which counsel must they follow? That of 1914 when no partisan feeling embittered or distorted the views of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Root, or their counsel now in the heat of a political campaign?

SLUGS ARE EASY TO CONTROL

Best Spray Is Arsenate of Lead, Applied in Such Manner as to Cover Surface of Leaves.

(By C. P. GILLETTE, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

The dark brown snail-like larvae that appear on the upper side of the leaves of cherry and pear trees during the latter part of June and early in July are the young of what is known as one of the saw-flies. This insect is black, about as large as an ordinary housefly, but possessed of four wings.

These flies deposit their eggs, one in a place, just beneath the cuticle of the leaf by means of their sharp ovipositor. The location of each egg is indicated by a brown spot about the size of a small pin head. With the point of a knife the epidermis of the leaf may be raised so as to expose the white egg beneath. The damage done by these slugs is often serious to the cherry and pear foliage and is sometimes quite destructive, also, to the foliage of plum and quince.

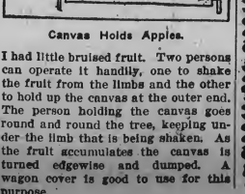
Remedies: These slugs are very easily destroyed, either by an arsenical spray or by the use of white hellebore. The best arsenical to use is arsenate of lead and should be applied as a misty spray so as to cover the upper surface of the leaves as soon as the slugs are seen in any considerable numbers. Use in the proportion of: Lead paste, one pound; water, 30 gallons.

Use the white hellebore in the proportion of one ounce of the powder to each three gallons of water and spray as directed in case of arsenate of lead, above.

White hellebore is fully as efficient as the arsenate of lead and is to be recommended in all cases where there is fruit nearly mature upon the trees, as it is not likely to do any serious injury to persons who might eat freely of the fruit afterwards.

GOOD APPLE-PICKING RULES

Handle Fruit as Gently and Carefully as You Would Eggs—Pick No Speckled Specimens.



Some good apple-picking rules:

1. Pick lower limbs first.
2. See that the ladder is pushed into the tree gently so as not to knock off or bruise the fruit.
3. Hang the basket so as to be able to pick with both hands.
4. Lay the apples in; do not drop or throw them.
5. Pick no speckled apples.
6. Pick no small, green ones.
7. Do not take much time picking a few little apples out of reach—let them go.
8. In emptying, pour gently, as you would eggs.
9. Do not set one basket or crate on another so that the apples below will be bruised.
10. Lift and set down gently all filled crates.
11. Use spring wagon in hauling, avoid rough ground and go slow except on smooth road.

MAKE FRUIT PICKING EASIER

Scarcity of Help Compels Kansas Man to Arrange Device for Gathering Apple Crop.

On account of scarcity of help last year I conjured up this contrivance to make fruit picking easier, writes H. W. Prouty of Hesston, Kan., in Farmers, Mail and Breeze. It worked fine and Canvas Holds Apples.

I had little bruised fruit. Two persons can operate it handily, one to shake the fruit from the limbs and the other to hold up the canvas at the outer end. The person holding the canvas goes round and round the tree, keeping under the limb that is being shaken. As the fruit accumulates the canvas is turned edgewise and dumped. A wagon cover is good to use for this purpose.

A Good Sale of the Weed.

One of the first sales of tobacco reported in this county for this season, that is, of the tobacco that had been cured in the barn, is that of the crop of Bob Hamilton, raised on the Charles K. Lillard farm at Drury. This crop of 5,000 pounds was sold Tuesday to Thomas Evans the Carrollton buyer, and will be delivered as soon as ready for market. Mr. Evans also offered Keene Lillard 14 cents a pound for his tobacco, raised on the same farm, but the offer was refused. Mr. Lillard sold last year for 14½ cents, we believe, and has his usual fine crop this year. —Warsaw Independent.

A Novel Plan.

A novel plan is being adopted by the churches in this section of the State to help the Baptist Orphans Home at Lynnland pay for the home and the farm which they recently purchased at a cost of $12,000. It is planned to have each of the churches raise $100 for the purpose of paying for one acre of land, or more if they wish. By this means it is felt that the whole farm can be paid for in a short time and without unduly burdening anyone. The Hodgenville Baptist church men have already raised $100, and paid for one acre of land and will shortly pay for another. The Baptist Woman's Missionary Union is now engaged in raising a fund for the purchase of an acre. The Union recently sent to the home a box containing food and clothing valued at $125.—Larue County Herald.

School Discipline.

At some of our educational meetings the subject of discipline in school is discussed, and it should be. In fact discipline should be enforced at home and in school. In many homes there is no discipline. No discipline in school means no school. Many are able to command respect and obedience of the children without much whipping, yet there are many cases in which to spare the rod means to spoil the child. School work is a business proposition and should be looked upon as such by teacher, pupil and patron to make it truly so all must work together and bring about system and discipline. The highest interest of the home, community and country demand that every thing shall be run in decency and in order. All people at all times obeying the rules and laws of schools, churches and nation.—Owen County Democrat.

Caritalizing Game.

In Maine, in Canada, in the Rocky Mountains and other parts of the country where game abounds or where fish abound, many residents make a profit upon the natural resources by guiding visiting sportsmen, by boarding them and by serving their needs in other ways. Game wardens in Kentucky have suggested that Kentucky mountaineers make an effort to conserve fish and game and capitalize resources which once were, and should again be, more fruitful than farming where the little cornfields are planting and the yield from eroded soil is small. There are sections of the mountains in which farm land is fertile but there are considerable areas providing excellent cover for game, in which farming as practiced is not very profitable. There are mountain rivers and smaller streams which would be ideal for the purpose of the angler if there were sufficient interest in the counties they traverse, in aiding the Fish and Game Commission to enforce the law conserving fish.

Louisville sportsmen have received letters from one mountain land owner, who, ahead of the others, is preparing to make his game pay a return. He writes that he has protected the quail on his farm, and that, as a result, they are plentiful. He proposes to board a limited number of hunters, to direct them to good shooting and in other ways to make his guests enjoy their outing. Shooting parties already have been made up, it is said, to take advantage of the opportunity. The example of this owner of cover should be suggestive to others in his and in other communities.

Kentucky's great mileage of streams in which game fish will will flourish under adequate protection, yielding a harvest for the local fishermen as well as good sport for the angler from a distance, could be capitalized handsomely by residents of their shores In addition to the money paid to guides and paid for board and lodging the visiting anglers would spend more or less money in the communities visited. The land owner should realize that his and the visiting sportsmen's interests are mutual and not, antagonistic. A field which does not provide enough birds to attract the town hunter does not provide enough to make it profitable for the farmer or his son to spend a day shooting for sport or for the pot. The stream which offers no attraction to devotees of the rod and reel who are glad to go as far as Maine Colorado or Canada to find good sport offers nothing to the one-gallused lad who would be glad to enjoy a summer day fishing, and would like to bring home sufficient fish to vindicate his choice of the manner in which to spend time which might have been employed at odd jobs about the farm.

Land owners would be glad to do all that can be done to conserve fish and game and to attract responsible sportsmen to the fishing and shooting. The vagabond with the gun or fishing rod, ready to commit petty depredations, does not operate in a wide area. The sportsman whose appearances admit of his making a journey of 50 or 100 miles usually is a responsible and considerate citizen who is willing to obey game laws and the dictates of courtesy. He is willing to pay for his keep and to meet other expenses. He should not be compelled to go to a far-away State for sport which his own state can offer, provided there is sufficient neighborhood interest in fish and game conservation.—Courier-Journal.

Rather Betwixt and Between.

Some people talk much and do little. Others talk little and do much. A few are betwixt and between and never succeed in setting themselves or the world afire.

There is, however, a happy medium which will afford us the necessary outlet for our thoughts and yet serve the good of the community at large.

Don't be a clam, and don't be a big noise. Talk when you feel like it, but talk sense and talk to people who have sense. When we do that we will gradually bring to the surface the good points in each other; we will open up opportunities for the development of the community, and will be able to hit upon the means of pushing our town along.

The man who talks little but says much when he does talk is often silent when a little talk from him would accomplish wonders. On the other hand, the big noise is known as a noise and commands about as much attention and remembrance as a passing gust of wind.

Talk up, but speak gently and to the point. You will be both heard and heeded.—Ex.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Five hundred hogsheads of tobacco shipped by Rudolph, Hack & Company, of Clarksville, Tenn., to Copenhagen on the steamer Trafalgar, which was held up by the British Government, have been released to the consignee, according to an official statement received by the State Department today. This news may relieve the apprehension of tobacco dealers who thought they had good reason to believe that Great Britain would hold up large tobacco shipments indefinitely unless the shipments were paid for prior to August 4th, and shipment started before August 30.

GOOD ADVICE FOR DAIRYMEN

Profitable Milk Producer Has Wide Sprung Ribs and Deep Abdomen—Give Bull Exercise.

A cow which will do her full duty at production will generally have wide sprung ribs and a deep abdomen to provide great capacity for the digestive organs.

The cream screw on the separator is a small thing, but a mighty important one. See that it is properly adjusted and that is does not become clogged.

The manure carrier is a necessity on the dairy farm. With this device the manure can be carried well away from the barn, and a potent source of contamination is thus removed.

The bull, though he should be confined, must be given clean surroundings and ample room for the exercise necessary to maintain his potency.

Give the calf its meals in pails as clean and sanitary as those used in handling milk for human consumption. It pays.

Don't change the dairy cows' feed too abruptly. Digestive troubles and a consequent falling off in milk are likely to result.

The common practice of compelling the dairy heifers to shift for themselves is to be severely condemned. You can't develop good cows that way.

The best receptacles for the cream are the cans designed especially for that purpose.

Buttermilk is a valuable by-product and a profitable market for it can often be found among regular butter and egg customers.

The worn-out separator or the machine of poor make often causes enough loss in one season to more than pay for a new machine of a reputable make.

GET MOST MILK FROM HEIFER

Animal Shows Dislike for Unnecessary Noise and Delay in Diminished Quantities of Milk.

A heifer does not like unnecessary noise, or delay, and shows her dislike by diminished quantities of milk. Milking her regularly at as near the same hour night and morning as possible is important.

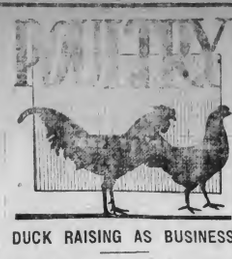
The first streams of milk contain many objectionable bacteria, and onto the ground is where they should go. It is poor policy to wet the hands with milk. Instead rub a little vaseline on the hands. This keeps the teats in nice condition and makes milking easy.

Of course the milker ought to be clean, kind and sympathetic. He should not sit off at a distance, but his left arm should be in close contact with the leg of the heifer so that she cannot kick. If she makes the attempt he will only get a push instead of a blow. It is necessary to do the milking quietly and in the shortest possible time, and it is important that the heifer be milked clean and dry every time, otherwise she will be injured as a milker, besides the richest and most valuable part of the milk will be lost.

PROBLEM OF PURE-BRED SIRE

One Solution Is for Several Neighbors to Club Together and Secure Needed Males.

The farmer with only a few animals can hardly afford to keep pure-bred males. Yet he cannot afford to use scrubs. One solution of the problem is for several neighbors to club together and secure the pure-bred sires needed. This will really make the cost of the pure-bred sire less to each farmer than would be the cost of scrub sires if each owned one.



AIM TO PRODUCE DRY BUTTER

Proper System of Manufacture Will Produce Article That Will Perfectly Secrete Moisture.

Aim to produce butter that is visibly dry while yet containing a percentage of moisture approaching the standard.

A proper system of manufacture will produce a butter in which the moisture is in such a fine state of subdivision that it will not ooze out in transit or when the butter is cut up.

POULTRY

DUCK RAISING AS BUSINESS

Fowls Are Fine for Family Use Though Not Very Valuable as Product for Marketing.

The duck has its place on the farm, but duck raising as a business is as yet comparatively unprofitable because of long distance to market and prejudice among buyers of live poultry. The duck furnishes a delicious roast for the family and an abundance of feathers for home use.

"Contrary to general opinion, a pool large enough for swimming is not necessary," says N. L. Harris, superintendent of the Kansas state agricultural college poultry farm. "Ducks can be raised on dry land—that is, if they are provided with water sufficiently deep to allow them to submerge their beaks and wash the sand from their nostrils. Otherwise they will die.

The natural food for ducks consists of bugs, worms and green succulent vegetation found in marshy places. Notwithstanding the fact that ducks are easily raised, they should not be hatched until warm weather, at which time such feeds are plentiful.

There is danger of overfeeding, according to Mr. Harris. The duck is the most ravenous feeder of all classes of domesticated fowls except the goose.

The two breeds most extensively raised for meat are the Pekin and the Rouen. The Pekin is the better because it has white feathers, white meat, and yellow legs—characteristics which are desired in dressed poultry.

MUCH DEPENDS ON BREEDERS

Parents of Chicks Should Be Strong, Vigorous, Hardy and Resistant to All Diseases.

Whether a farmer will raise better poultry this year than he did last will depend primarily upon the kind of stock that is used for breeding. Every baby chick is entitled to be well born. Unless its parents are strong, vigorous, hardy and resistant to disease, a "poor hatch" and weak, puny chicks will result, say the poultrymen at Iowa state college.

The use of low vitality breeders is the most frequent cause of poor incubating success and high death rate in brooding. Chicks hatched from poor breeding stock never reach the size of well-bred individuals. The pullets do not begin laying until the following spring and then hardly enough to pay for their feed.

If the flock is to be improved, only those birds that show size, vigor and egg-producing qualities should be used as breeders. Twenty-five good females in a roomy pen with a couple of good males will furnish eggs for incubation that will produce chicks worth while, ones that will grow into big fellows worth a good price on the market. The pullets from such mating mature rapidly and are in condition to "lay the winter eggs."

GRADING THE LITTLE CHICKS

Grade According to Size and Vigor or Arrange Things So Weak Ones Are Comfortable.

Owing to differences in the vigor of parent stock, age of eggs when incubated, and other causes, there are always differences in the vitality of the chicks, and these manifest themselves very quickly. The stronger chicks shove the weaker away from the food, crowd them out of the sunniest spots in the brooder, and take the best of things generally.

Since the most vigorous chicks are the most valuable, we do not like to discourage this disposition to thrive, but strong chicks should not thrive at the expense of the weak. As soon as there is a perceptible difference in the size of the chicks, either grade the chicks according to size, or fix things so the weak chicks can eat by themselves.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good: I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 40 years of wonderful success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. REDUCING COST OF PORK PRODUCTION

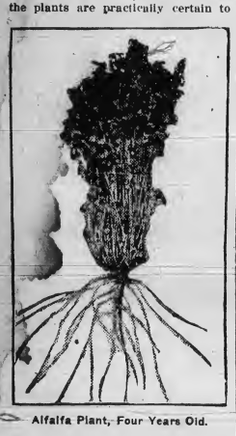
PIGS ON OAT AND PEA FORAGE.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The cost of pork is reduced materially by the use of pasture and forage crops, but it is desirable to feed grain or other concentrated feed in addition. In some sections of the country where pastures are luxuriant, mature hogs are maintained in an apparently satisfactory condition on pasture alone. This practice should not be followed, however, in the case of young, growing pigs, because they will become thin in flesh and stunted if compelled to live on pasture alone.

Hog raisers differ widely regarding the quantity of grain that should be fed to hogs while on pasture. Some feeders give them all they will consume. Others feed a ration equal to about 2 to 3 per cent of the live weight of the hog. Still others will allow pigs to run on pasture and feed them a 1 per cent grain ration. There is no fixed rule governing the supplemental grain ration which should be fed in combination with forage. The amount of grain fed depends upon the kind of pasture used, the price of grain, and the market.

Pasture forage has a variable composition. Alfalfa, clover, vetch, and peas furnish feed much richer in protein than most other crops. Where hogs are feeding on leguminous pasture they require less concentrated feed than when grazing upon nonleguminous pasture such as timothy, orchard grass, Bermuda, or bluegrass. In the early stages of growth the cereals may be classed as nitrogenous forages. A farmer may have more hogs than his pasture will accommodate. When this is the case, the pasture will last longer if a full grain ration is fed. The more grain a hog consumes, the less forage he will eat.



When grain is high, it is rather expensive to feed a supplemental grain ration. At such times there is a great temptation to place the hogs upon pasture alone. This practice will hardly ever pay, for it generally takes more grain and more time to finish off the hogs than if they had been fed a liberal ration while on pasture.

The amount of grain used will also depend upon the length of time the feeder has in which to fit the hogs for market. Hogs that are marketed from ten to twelve months old are usually maintained on pasture alone during the grazing season. If any grain is given at all it is very light. In this way the greater percentage of growth is made from the cheaply grown forage. Where rapid finishing is desired, the liberal use of grain is important.

GETTING STAND OF ALFALFA

Use Seed Which Is Pure and of Good Vitality—Thick Stand Will Keep Out Weeds.

The amount of seed to sow per acre is variously estimated at from 8 to 20 pounds. It is well to have a rather thick stand the first year, as some of the plants are practically certain to die, and with a thin stand the stems are coarser and not so palatable, but 10 to 12 pounds of seed per acre is enough to sow.

A small amount of seed which is pure and of good vitality is better than a larger quantity of seed of lower grade.

One advantage of a thick stand is to prevent the weeds getting a foothold. In parts of Kansas, four plants per square foot is considered the best ratio; in Ohio, one every four inches is more common.

The seed may be drilled or sown broadcast and disked or harrowed in.

In broadcasting, many people favor sowing one-half the seed in one direction and the remainder at right angles to the first sowing. This is believed to give a more even distribution.

Disking before plowing helps make a firm seed bed.

Sometimes it is possible to get a stand by sowing a few pounds of alfalfa seed with red clover. Then plow up the clover and seed to alfalfa.

The soil will contain enough bacteria to make a good catch fairly certain.

FEEDING SILAGE TO CALVES

In Absence of Other Nutritious Feeds It May Serve as Substitute—Avoid Coarse Parts.

Value of corn silage for young calves is an unsettled question. In the absence of other and more nutritious feeds, it may serve as a good substitute. It should never be fed extensively, and care should be exercised to prevent the feeding of coarse parts.

WARM WEATHER AND HORSES

Sunstroke Caused by Sun's Rays Falling Directly on Skull—Heat Exhaustion Similar.

(By PROF. O'TOOLE, North Dakota Experiment Station.)

Sunstroke is caused by the direct rays of the sun falling upon the skull. A horse so affected may die suddenly as though stricken with apoplexy or he may have a gradual paralysis of respiration. The symptoms which usually present themselves are restlessness, pawing, spasms and a marked redness of the mucous membranes lining the cavities of the head. The temperature in sunstroke may not rise above normal during the whole course of the disease.

Another condition very similar to sunstroke is that known as heat stroke or heat exhaustion. This is brought about by overexertion and insufficient heat elimination. The direct rays of the sun are not responsible for this affection, which very often occurs to an animal on a cloudy, sultry day. Some of the more prominent symptoms of heat stroke are weariness, profuse sweating, difficult breathing, an extremely high temperature, and a rapid pulse, which gradually grows weaker and upon the approach of death muscular tremors will be noted. The treatment for sunstroke and heatstroke are the same. Remove the animal to a cool, quiet, well-ventilated place, and permit a stream of cold water to flow over the horse and if possible apply ice packs to the head. If ice is plentiful apply it all over the body.

TO DESTROY INJURIOUS MICE

Enemies Have Been Killed Off and Little Rodents Have Increased Quite Rapidly.

How to destroy injurious mice is a difficult question. The owl and the hawk are the natural enemies of mice, as is the cat, and to some extent the dog, the weasel, the mink, the otter, and the beaver perhaps, but these suspected enemies of the mice have been killed off. There are few of them remaining, thus mice have increased rapidly and it seems necessary to employ strychnine, which may be mixed dry or otherwise with crushed grain or whole grain, wheat or oats. How to place this deadly poison within reach of mice without destroying other useful creatures is a question difficult to decide.

SELLING DIRECT FROM FIELD

Farmers Favor That Plan With Cabbages, Letting Dealers Stand Risk of Storage.

Most farmers prefer to sell their cabbage direct from the field, preferring that the dealers stand the risk of storage; this is probably the better plan. Where it is desired to store cabbage for home use, or even for sale later, one of the many plans in use is that of trenching. A shallow trench is dug and the cabbage laid in it head down, and then covered with soil. Straw, litter, and manure are placed over this to prevent deep freezing. Storing in a warm, damp cellar ruins the flavor of cabbage.

DENIES THE CHARGE.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 6.—Prof. Hugo Muensterberg, of the philosophy department of Harvard University, today indignantly denied the charges made by his colleague, Prof. William Ernst Hocking, that he is secretly working for Germany's benefit rather than in behalf of the United States.

Dr. Muensterberg's reply, which, like Prof. Hocking's charges, was in the form of an open letter, takes the latter severely to task for his "sensational newspaper attack." He denies that he has endeavored to induce German-Americans to put Germany's interests above America's.

Prof. Muensterberg says in part: "In spite of many unexpected happenings think your attack was the most startling surprise. From the days when you were my student to last week, when I came to your house and made a speech for your guests, I have shown you the utmost courtesy. You emphasize your pride in the university. You know how much I share this feeling."

Prof. Muensterberg recites how the late William James urged him to come to Harvard from Germany and then tell how, when he wanted to return to the University of Berlin, Josiah Royce, who died last month, promised that if he would stay he would "be living among dear friends" in the philosophy department.

Prof. Royce, adds Muensterberg, "did not forsee that one of those brethren of the department would write a letter like yours."

"You draw the fantastic conclusion that I expect German-Americans to put Germany above America. The fact is that I have emphasized that they must be politically strictly Americans, nothing else but you yourself have urged your fellow countrymen to help the cause of the Allies.

"You did not mean that they ought to become disloyal Americans. Why, then is it disloyal for other Americans to show their sympathy for Germany?"

Autos and Railroads.

In a considerable number of annual reports of railroad Presidents in the last two years mention has been made of inroads which automobiles are making on railroad passenger business. There is another aspect, however, of the development of the automobile and automobile truck which may turn out to be of considerable advantage to railroad development. The use of the automobile and the automobile truck is acting as a preventive of branch line railroad building, thus conserving capital for investments to existing lines. A good road is built by the state or county, and this road, with the development of the automobile truck, acts as a feeder for the railroads which it crosses, and, moreover, a feeder built with the public's capital and not the railroad company's capital. Unprofitable branch line mileage has been the old man of the sea on the back of many a railroad in this country. A good state or county road crossing a railroad will be a feeder to it for 40 to 50 miles on either side of the track. At the present time there are many rural communities which are sending freight and passengers over 40 miles or more of good road to the nearest railroad by automobile—as much traffic as the railroad could hope to get over a branch line, the interest charges on which would be great enough to eat up nearly all the profits on the line.

The long interval between his nomination and the holding of the election has apparently been very detrimental to Mr. Hughes' chances of becoming President.—Columbia State.

Does yours bring joy to the breakfast table?

North—East—South—West—women are solving the coffee problem.

Armies have solved it. "An army travels on its stomach" and of the army breakfast, ask any soldier what he would miss most.

Famous restaurants have solved it. They know that without the right coffee they would have failed.

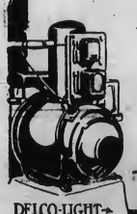
One of the greatest American judges has said that unhappiness in the home commences with the first cup of poor coffee.

There is a coffee which brings a million men to breakfast "in a hurry"—a coffee that makes all these men eager to get to the breakfast table, slow to leave it.

Your grocer has this coffee—Arbuckles'. Today you can introduce its rich, full flavor in your home. Serve Arbuckles' for a week and notice how much more his breakfast means to him. Bring joy to your breakfast table.

Today there are whole towns where Arbuckles' is practically the only coffee used. In one State, alone, in a year, four pounds of Arbuckles' Coffee was used for every man, woman and child in the State—four times as many pounds of coffee as the population of the State!

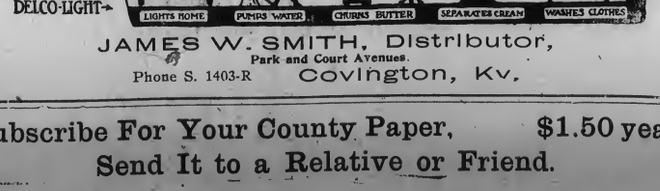
DELCO-LIGHT



ELECTRICITY FOR EVERY FARM

DELCO-LIGHT is a compact, efficient and economical electric plant for farm, village and suburban homes. Delco-Light furnishes electricity for lighting the house and other buildings—it has a capacity of 40 to 50 lights. Delco-Light also furnishes power to operate small machinery.

It does the washing.
It pumps the water.
It operates the cream separator.
It churns the butter.
It drives the sewing machine and the vacuum cleaner.
It brings city comforts and conveniences to the farm and takes away much of the drudgery of farm life.
It is so simple that a child can operate it.



It has been developed by the same engineering and manufacturing ability that has made Delco Cranking, Lighting and Ignition for automobiles the standard of the world.

A thousand Delco-Light representatives and service men are in the field—there is one in your locality.

Let him demonstrate Delco-Light to you in your own home. At least write for illustrated book.

BUSH FIRE.

Nearly every summer brings its toll of death and devastation in the bush fires of the North country. The wiping out of several towns in northern Ontario, with a loss of life estimated to reach 200, and the injury of scores of persons, is another chapter in the often-told and seemingly never-ending story. A long dry spell, a little carelessness—and carelessness is the rule rather than the exception—and disaster results. Lives and property worth millions are gone forever; progress is set back; the battle is begun over again, with trust in Providence the only offset to a repetition. The bush fire is one of the perils of those who go into the wilderness, says Pittsburgh Dispatch. In the nature of things that peril must be ever present. Man shows impotence against the forces of nature nowhere more tragically than when the fire fiend starts on a march of devastation. Many are the romances that have been written of the woods; stories of heroism have come to us in books telling of almost superhuman efforts to gain safety and of almost superhuman sacrifice; of readiness to meet with fortitude a terrible death when death was found to be inevitable. Yet the cold news reports of any disaster such as that in the Nipissing country contain all the thrills and all the terror and all the heroism that any fiction writer could imagine.

The sale of opium and its principal derivatives seems to have become a "drug" on the drug market under the operation of a federal statute known as the Harrison law. It is stated by leading manufacturers that the sales of opium products have fallen off one-third within a short time. This will not be disagreeable news in many communities. The Harrison law is said to have some weaknesses, but if it is reducing the sales of powerful drugs in many poor, misguided human beings it is making a brave beginning to stop the hitherto wholesale distribution of the article, says Boston Globe. Physicians are not backward in saying that the liquor habit is far less dangerous and easier to cure than the drug habit. For this reason reliable physicians are also very careful to avoid administering to patients all habit-forming drugs.

A Pennsylvania farmer has a yellow-and-white color scheme on his farm. His barns and outbuildings are yellow with white trimmings, his farm house is white with yellow trimmings, the horses and cows are yellow. Even the dog and chickens are "done in the yellow-and-white" as the society column would say, says Houston Post. He does not testify whether the colors affect the growing of crops or the yield of milk, but many a farmer would find that any colors would improve the general appearance of things on his place. The "clean-up-and-paint-up" movement should have its home on the farm.

Sporadic Zeppelin raids on England continue, but they are a disappointment from the expectations entertained of them as agents of frightfulness. Two years of the war have passed, and their score as practical factors in military results has been negligible. For this humanity can devoutly give thanks, for if they could aim and strike as accurately as the submarine, their powers of destruction would have proved terrible.

A couple of Frenchmen in the trenches, who had quarreled, fought a novel duel. Each took a bomb and attacked the German trenches, agreeing that the other would be satisfied as soon as one had been wounded. It sounds foolish but is the most sensible French duel in recent times.

When you see a young couple sauntering in front of a furniture store, inspecting everything from draperies to kitchen fixtures which gleam from the show windows, it is a sign that their noble purposes are never to be facilitated in a boarding house.

It is a peculiar thing about a European belligerent that he does not seem to care much about anybody's losses but those of the enemy, nor about anybody's gains excepting his own.

At least the farmers of Poland and Picardy will have wire enough to fence their farms after they straighten out some of those entanglements.

After going over the conditions in Indiana, Senator Tom Taggart adheres to his original prediction that the State will go 50,000 Democratic, and your Uncle Thomas generally knows whereof he affirms. Keep a tab on this prediction.

FORTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Next Tuesday is the Presidential election.

The Eastern troubles bid fair to be settled without a general war.

The strong arm of the law has been doing its duty in this section for the past few days. To make a start a man charged with stealing a horse, was brought here and put in jail; another indicted for murder was arrested and jailed; two negroes were arrested for carrying concealed weapons and jailed; one young man was fined for knifing another.

The Williamstown Sentinel office was being removed when a floor gave way precipitating the material into a confused mass.

Died on the night of the 27 ult., Mrs. Eliza Tanner, relict of the late Llewellyn Tanner.

Hons. Jno. G. Carlisle, Thos. L. Jones, W. E. Arthur and W. W. Cleary have been invited to address the Democrats in Burlington next Monday.

Mr. Thomas Stephenson is making an effort to establish a good school in Morgan Academy.

Deputy Sheriff G. W. Sleet went to Sparta, last week, and took charge of Pres Webster indicted for the murder of Alex Milliner at Walton some time since. Webster is in the Burlington jail.

These are melancholy days with fever heat.

An unknown tried to assassinate Squire Billiter near his home at Florence. Fires one shot at Mr. Billiter in the dark as he was returning home.

Piers of the bridge at mouth of Woolper creek have been raised six feet and are ready to receive the wooden superstructure.

Miss Nannie Greenwood, of Covington, and Miss Sophia Finch, of Florence, have been guests of Burlington friends several days.

W. M. Conner united with the Universalist church at last Sunday night's services.

Mound Builders' Secrets.

The long-continued search of scientists and ethnologists for the secret of the mound builders of the middle western part of the United States may in time result in success.

Dr. Laurentius Scheidl, a Benedictine monk of St. Benedict, La., has been making a study of inscriptions found on tablets in excavations made in the mounds and has already found the key to some of the inscriptions and is in hope he will sooner or later be able to make translations.

There have been many finds of such tablets in the mounds and the engravings thereon show that the mound builders were not only of a non-Indian type, but were familiar with Bible history.

Dr. Henru Hyvernat, of the Catholic University at Washington, recently dug out of a mound near Detroit a slate tablet about a foot long, containing a circular calendar of thirteen months, indicated by dots and mysterious characters.

Below the calendar are two heads in profile, representing types of semicivilized people.

The tablet was lying due east and west and the general formation of its surroundings and the strata of ashes and charcoal indicated that the mound had been a tomb. The tablet will be placed in the museum of the Catholic University.

In June last Dr. Scheidl found in a mound in the same vicinity a blue slate tablet seven and one-half by twenty-five inches. On one side is a large figure of some personage, evidently of importance. The full lips and long beard clearly indicate the non-Indian type.

On the reverse side are the figures of two other personages, with several lines of writing which Dr. Schaidl has not yet been able to decipher.

Big Spelling Bee Next Friday.

Next Friday at 1:30 p. m., the county's annual eliminating contests in spelling will take place, the Burlington, Beileview, Petersburg and Hebron teams spelling in Burlington, while the Florence, Union, Landing and Verona, teams will spell in Union. The winning teams in the Burlington and Union contests in a few days thereafter will engage in another contest in which the Walton school will participate. It will be remembered that the Walton school captured the banner in the final contest last year, it having been held the two preceding years by the Burlington school. This contest is looked forward to each year by the schools and it creates considerable interest on the part of the patrons of the several schools that take part in it.

How to Get Winter Eggs.

In order to obtain eggs it is necessary to have healthy, vigorous stock, properly fed, and a good dry place for them to stay at night.

See that the fowls have plenty of green feed. Always sow a patch of rye for the chickens, or better still, have a mixture of oats, rye, and clover sown together.

Have a place for the chickens to scratch. Put the wheat, corn and oats in straw and let them scratch for it. This will give them plenty of exercise and help to keep them warm.

Give one pint of grain feed to each dozen birds twice a day, and just before going to roost allow them to have a hot mash made by cooking some vegetables, such as turnips and cabbage, and also using the table scraps, such as cold bits of meat, etc., and mixing this with bran.

Have a comfortable house for the fowls. The sides, top and back must be tight. Have the door facing the south, and see that the floor is dry at all times. In order to have healthy fowls the house should be cleaned out as often as once a week.

A TEST FOR CLOTHES.

How to Tell if Cottons Hide in Your New Wool Suit.

To test silk boil the sample in 3 per cent solution of caustic potash for fifteen minutes. If the silk is pure the fabric will be practically destroyed, leaving but a small residue like paper ashes. If there is cotton in it the cotton will remain. Another excellent test is to remove the threads which form the warp and the woof. Keep these separately and test in strong hydrochloric or sulphuric acid. If they are pure silk the threads will dissolve within two minutes. If there is either wool or cotton in the fabric the threads will remain unaffected.

Pure woolens are adulterated even more than silk because they are in greater demand and also because they are quite easy to imitate. Many a yard of cloth sold as "pure wool" contains from 20 to 80 per cent cotton. Blankets sold as "half wool" have frequently been found to contain only 10 per cent of pure wool. There are machines today which cleverly wrap wool around cotton threads, and the finished product has every appearance of being all wool. Another method of adulterating is by adding cotton cloth and "felting" short woolen threads upon its surface by means of heat, moisture and pressure.

A purchaser may be fully convinced from the appearance and feeling of cloth that it is all wool but the only safe method is to take home the sample and make tests. Immerse the sample of so called wool in oil of vitriol for about two minutes. This will destroy the cotton, but the wool will not be affected. Another test is to moisten a sample with 50 per cent nitric acid. This will turn the wool yellow, but the cotton will retain its color.

Use the same tests for linens that you do for woolens. If the sample is genuine linen it will not be affected by oil of vitriol, but any cotton that is in it will be destroyed. Imitation damask is made today by means of printing upon the surface, with a sort of transparent mucilage, the designs. These designs appear to be woven into the cloth. By immersing a sample in boiling hot water and allowing it to boil for several minutes the design will disappear.

Pity For a Persecuted Industry

The New Haven railroad reports for the past fiscal year the largest gross earnings in its history. Its total net income was nearly $4,500,000 ahead of the previous year's, and even then the road actually suffered from an excess of business beyond its ability to take care of economically.

At the same time and at the other end of the scale the Western Maryland also reports the largest gross earnings of record. For big roads and little, it is the same story the country over. The Illinois Central raises its dividend rate from 5 to 6 per cent. Railroad shares are strong in the market and reflect general financial opinion that earnings will be even better in the new fiscal year.

This is the country's most persecuted industry. It is especially appealing to public commiseration just now as the most conspicuous victim of what Mr. Hughes calls "the new slavery." There has been a "surrender" somewhere and this involves the roads in still another sale into slavery from which Mr. Hughes himself dares not say he would undertake a rescue if elected. Inadequate rates, excessive wages and now a forced trial of the eight-hour day in train service—even hope for the best with the roads is extinguished.

At this rate of ruinous persecution, and with railroad earnings proceeding as they do, even those that never paid a dividend are in danger of having to pay something soon.—Messenger.

OPPOSED TO MILK INEPECTION

Fayette County Dairymen Are Up in Arms Against Proposed Plan.

Lexington. — Fayette county dairymen will fight the Department of Health to the limit in the matter of the proposed plan to cause all milk to pass through a central milk inspection plant here. Sixty dairyman affected by the proposed plan, forming the Fayette County Dairyman's Association, held a meeting at the court house and planned their defense. The dairymen will fight the attempt to compel them to pasturize their milk on the ground that pasturized is worthless for infants, according to many medical authorities. Dr. Maguire's plan contemplates a central inspection plant in order to insure a supply of pure, fresh milk, since all milk could be there subjected to a chemical test for bacteria.

COMPULSORY VACCINATION

Upheld by Kentucky's Highest Court. A School Principal Loses Out.

Frankfort, Oct. 25.—The authority of county boards of health "when there is reasonable apprehension of the outbreak of a communicable disease, such as smallpox, to take such action as may be necessary in order to stamp out the disease and prevent its spreading" was upheld by Chief Justice Miller today, dissolving an injunction granted by the Henry Circuit Court, restraining the county board of health and county health officer from further prosecuting Principal B. F. Hill, of the Bethlehem Graded School, and the chairman of the Board of Trustees for refusal to obey an order for compulsory vaccination of children attending the school.

The board issued an order that no child should attend school until vaccinated. Principal Hill thought he had not right to enforce the order, as, he said, most of the people of the district are opposed to vaccination. He was backed up by the chairman of his board, and the county health officer swore out warrants for them.

They secured affidavits of physicians that there had been no smallpox in the county for a year and none in the district for eight years. On the other hand were affidavits from physicians that there were outbreaks every spring and fall and that forty soldiers of a company of militia, who had been at Fort Thomas, where there was a case, had returned to the county, and the order was necessary to prevent an outbreak.

Judge Miller said the county health board was justified by the circumstances and had ample authority to make such a rule and enforce it.

He further said: "The Legislature may, by express provision, in the exercise of its police power require or empower a local or administrative authority to require the vaccination of children as a condition of their being admitted to the public schools, although smallpox be not prevalent or its outbreak be not apprehended."

Too Late.

South Americans are grieved, not incomprehensibly, because inhabitants of the United States are called "Americans." Someone has risen to propose that the name of the United States be changed so that citizens of this country can be designated by a term indicating their nationality, yet not indicating that the U. S. is America. It is proposed that "Unitatia" be adopted as a name for this country, and that persons who are citizens of "Unitatia" be called Unitatians for the accommodation of South America.

There is no probability, of course, that such a suggestion could be taken seriously anywhere in the United States. The United States of America is an old and established land and a country, like a business, has a right to the label, brand or trade-mark, which it has used until it has a value.

Nobody can blame an Argentine or a Brazilian for feeling hurt by the designation of a citizen of this republic as an "American" but the name has been agreed upon by the civilized world, and there is nothing that can be done about it. North America includes some countries which are not American. They belong to foreigners. South America remained for a long time similarly connected with the Old World. The United States of America, among the countries of the two continents, was alone as a country "American" in a feeling and Government for a considerable time. Its territory did not include all of North America, but its boundaries included all of North America that was "American." So the name was earned, and as much bestowed by the world as accepted by the world before South America cast off the weakening yokes of Spain and Portugal.

Americans can sympathize with the neighbors in South America, who remained too long in possession of European monarchies while the United States was becoming America, but nothing will be done or could be done, to change the existing situation. It is too late. —Courier-Journal.

Thaksgiving Turkey Scarce.

Thanksgiving turkey will cost 10 cents per pound more this year than it did last, according to the prediction of H. G. Peterson, a Chicago poultry man. He said that there is a shortage of poultry and he believed turkeys would retail 30 cents a pound.

Why Peace Instead of War.

"Not only has prosperity been passed around on every hand in the United States, but it has been enjoyed in peace. The smoke on yonder horizon does not pour from the funnels of death-dealing cannon, but from busy mills and happy firesides; the workmen walking along your streets at night are not men marching to the beat of drums off to trenches to relieve their comrades; the crowds on the street corners talking of current news or perhaps looking at the bulletin boards of the newspapers, do not tremble as they read for fear that some bulletin may bear the news of a relative or friend lost forever to them in the trenches of a foreign country; your women are not wearing the habiliments of mourning for a brother or husband lying in some unmarked grave on foreign soil. And how has this come about? Because of not only the legislation, but by the true policy of neutrality or nonintervention of Woodrow Wilson and a Democratic administration."

Extract from speech of Solicitor General John W. Davis, delivered in Louisville last Friday night.

Dirt Roads Need Attention Now

The county that can afford to macadamize only some of the worst places in its roads and some of the main lines of traffic need not be discouraged about its highways. After it has macadamized the roads where the demand is greatest it should have the other roads laid out the best way to serve the people and to get them on a good grade, not over 5 per cent. Adequate road machinery should be bought and the roads should be graded and rounded up so the water will run off of the roadbed and into the gutters quickly. Culverts and bridges should be put in as rapidly as means will allow and of the best material available.

By this system the roads can be made good for about eight or nine months of the year in the South. Then if split-log road drags are constructed and provisions are made to use them after heavy rainfall and when freeze is going out of the soil, these dirt roads can be kept good nearly all of the year and will come through the winter comparatively free from ruts, so that as soon as they dry off in the spring they will be smooth and in first-class condition.

The split-log drag is giving satisfaction out in Missouri, where the soil is as bad a road soil as the worst we have in the South, and is much inferior to the average road soil of our section. It will do the work for us—it is doing it in some cases—if its use is learned, the roads are given the proper shape with graders, and then a plan is adopted that will insure the roads being dragged each time when needed.

Some one must be hired to do the work and an official must see that the work is satisfactorily done before it is paid for. It is just as well to pay out some money for using the split-log drag as it is to keep in repair the hard surfaced roads and to pay an extra amount of interest on the bonds voted to built the expensive roads.

A Pig Tail.

The following pig tale is related by the Stanford Interior Journal, telling how a fat hog fell through a culvert and was found alive six weeks later. About six weeks ago J. M. Cress drove a bunch of hogs to the stock yards. When the bunch was counted it was found one of the porkers was not there, and much subsequent inquiry failed to locate the missing hog. Last Thursday, W. T. Blankenship, when on the road with a bunch of sheep and cattle, was keen-eyed enough to find the missing swine where it had been all the time, in plain sight of all who passed the road during the time the hog was gone. Near the residence of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Lawrence, their spring branch leaves their premises and runs under the pike and into the field below. At the end of the culvert the water had washed out quite a sink-hole about three feet wide and three feet deep, and drift and mud had filled the culvert and it was thereby put out of commission. Here in this narrow prison the hog had fallen while being crowded along by the rest of the drove. As the man in charge did not see it fall in, it was "out of sight, out of mind." Here for six weeks it had subsided on the bark of the sycamore roots and the least possible amount of water during the continued drouth. When first lost it was fat enough to butcher; when found it was a shadow, lean and lank. After a few days careful nursing and dieting the hollowsided specimen is feeling like a new hog.

30,300,000 Pounds of Tobacco is Pledged.

Record Pool for Green River District Closed.—Crop Double in Size.

Owensbo ro, Oct. 26.—The pool of the Farmers' Co-operative Tobacco Association composed of the counties of Daviess, Hancock, McLean and Ohio, closed today. It was announced that 30,000,000 lbs. of tobacco had been pledged to the pool. This is the largest pool ever organized in the Green River district, and one of the largest ever formed in the State.

Tobacco buyers estimate that the crop in the Green River district will run 50,000,000 pounds this year, nearly double the size of last year's crop. This will leave about 20,000,000 pounds for the Owensboro loose leaf floors, provided the pool is sold.

The prices have not yet been fixed by the directors of the association. However, several of the local buyers have viewed the samples. There is every indication that the Green River type of tobacco will demand a high price this year.

Senator Fairbank's Rule For Supporting a President.

In August, 1913, Senator Fairbanks, addressing the Indiana Press Association, after discussing at some length the situation in Mexico, said:

"It is a pretty safe rule, when we come to deal with grave international problems to put our faith in the President of the United States and follow where he may lead. He speaks for the country when we come to deal with international affairs. The President of the United States is a safer guide than sensationalists and the soldiers of fortune who come to the surface whenever international controversies arise."

PAPER SHORTAGE HEARD.

New York—Recent developments in the white paper market indicate that the shortage which was predicted early this year, is an actual condition and that the prospects are not encouraging to the publishers.

The scarcity of print paper has in the last few weeks caused the newspapers to institute economies hitherto unknown in the business and to look around for additional methods of conserving the stock in hand. Even allowing for drastic reductions in consumption next year, experts point out that the supply will not come up to the demand. The public, it was said, must realize that smaller newspapers are due.

The situation has become so serious that a dozen different remedies have been advocated and adopted recently. Cutting down the size of the paper or the advertising is only one of these. Raising the price of the newspaper and watching to detect the smallest waste of space are other devices.

Most of the mill owners realize that excessive prices will wipe out the smaller customers by the score, especially in the rural districts, and they are moderate in their demands but the A. N. P. A. officials believe there are other manufacturers who are seeking all the traffic will bear, regardless of future developments.

In behalf of the manufacturers it is pointed out that little new production is provided for because of the cost of installing new machinery, not to mention the fact that it takes approximately two years to develop water power for a new plant. Whatever the reasons for the shortage, and the producers and consumers will advance hundreds of conflicting reasons, the supply is dwindling and publishers are cutting down their papers.

The purpose of the International Paper Co., in dating contracts, January 1, is to prevent an unwarranted rise in price, according to a statement by Philip T. Dodge president of that corporation. By having all contracts expire with the last day of this year, and new agreements to fulfill commencing with the first day of 1917, it is possible, Mr. Dodge says, to distribute the year's work over the company's machines to the best advantage, obtain the maximum output, and at the minimum price. The International company which supplies about 22 per cent of the newsprint manufactured in the U. S. has not yet decided whether the new tonnage publishers will obtain, will be on the basis of the amount used in the past or not. Newsprint manufacturers have not erected new mills to meet the present enormous demand, he says, because there is no assurance that it will continue, but he states that paper makers will be perfectly willing to construct more plants, if they can be protected by contracts running from three to five years.

James P Lewis, Secretary of State, refused to receive the incorporation papers for the Ku K recently organized in W Kentucky. He said the ob the organization seemed enough, but he objected name.

L Kirkpatrick were moved from his place of business and scattered about town, while wheelbarrows, wagons and numerous other articles were stacked up in front of the doors of business houses. The boys had a feast of fun.

The Old Fashion Slate Coming Back.

The old fashioned school slate which Dad used to clean with his sleeve, etc., etc., is likely to come in style again. There is a very serious shortage of all kinds of paper, and the school boards are considering adopting the old fashioned writing materials. The objection is that slates are unsanitary—however, it is admitted that they may be made sanitary, by a sponge and water accompaniment.

DAIRY

WOODEN BLOCKS FIND FAVOR

Ideal for Paving Floors of Dairy Barns —Coal Tar Creosote Adds Much to Durability.

(By B. O. LONGYEAR, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

Pavements made of wood blocks are no new thing—in fact, they were extensively used a generation ago in the principal timber-producing regions of the country. They were usually composed of round blocks set on end and the spaces filled with sand. While excellent when new, they soon wore out in places by the decay of some of the blocks, which left the pavement rough and full of holes, unless frequently repaired.

Substitutes such as stone, brick and asphalt have largely replaced wood for pavements, while concrete has come into use for ground floors in stable and dairy barns. The desirable qualities of wood, however, which these substitutes largely lack, have again brought the wooden block into favor. Thus, it is more quiet, it is not so slippery and is less trying to the feet and legs of animals than are most of its substitutes.

Its lack of durability is now overcome by treating the blocks with coal tar creosote, and the blocks are cut square or rectangular so that there are no large openings between them.

For dairy barns, creosoted wood blocks laid on a concrete foundation are found to produce an almost ideal floor, and one that is lasting and sanitary as well.

PROPER COOLING FOR CREAM

Attention Must Be Given Just as Soon as Separated—Dampened Blankets Lower Temperature.

Now that warm weather is approaching, every possible means must be taken to get cream on the market in good condition. The warm days that have already passed have had a marked effect in lowering the quality of cream now being made into butter.

Attention must first be paid to cooling the cream just as soon as separated. However, the greatest exposure to heat usually comes when the cream is hauled to market, and the cans are left uncovered and exposed to the hot sun and dust.

It has been found by experiment that the temperature may be kept more than 20 degrees lower when dampened blankets are thrown over the can or dampened blankets are used than when the cans are left uncovered. In addition, the dirt and dust are kept away from the cans and cream.

It is not only to the advantage of the producer to help in keeping up the quality of the cream so that good prices may continue, but low-grade cream cannot be allowed to come upon the market in the future.

KEEP A MILK BOTTLE CLEAN

Closure, Invented by Terre Haute Man, Is More Sanitary Than Ordinary Pasteboard Disk.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a bottle closure, invented by R. E. Redding of Terre Haute, Ind., says:

The invention provides a closure which is more sanitary than the ordinary pasteboard disk. This is due to the provision of a cloth strip which forms an auxiliary closure member and prevents dirt and dust from entering the bottle while the main closure member is being removed. It also provides a device having a closure of the type described which may be readily taken off or applied to the bottle.

BEST RATION FOR DAIRY COW

Much Rough Feed in Form of Hay and Silage Must Be Supplied—Also Give Her Grain.

The good dairy cow is a large eater and drinker. She has a large stomach and must consume large amounts of feeds daily to fill the milk pail at every milking during the year. She must eat till she is full and content to lie in the stall or pasture and chew her cud.

Much rough feed in the form of hay and silage must be included in her daily ration. Also she must have some rich or heavy feeds such as grain or meal. The total amount of feed she should receive daily or at a single feed will depend somewhat upon the amount of milk she is giving, or capable of giving. While she is giving her heaviest flow of milk she should have a rather heavy grain or concentrated ration in addition to the bulky matter.

2. Because he has abolished invisible government, dispersed the corrupt lobby and restored the Government to the hands of the governed.

3. Because he prefers construction to destruction.

4. Because he has secured the reduction of the tariff, not upward but do onward, to a competitive basis.

5. Because he has secured the adoption of a dumping clause to protect American labor, capital and business against the possibility of cut-throat competition when the European war is over.

6. Because he has secured the imposition of an income tax, obliging wealth to share with want the burdens as well as the blessings of the Government.

7. Because he has secured the establishment of a non-partisan tariff commission so that hereafter the tariff may be revised; whether upward or downward, upon scientific principles and in the light of all the facts.

9. Because he has secured the establishment of a Federal Reserve system, dethroning the money trust, democratizing credit and reassuring the future against recurrence of banking and currency panics.

10. Because he has secured the establishment of a Federal Trade Commission to suppress unfair competition and to protect and promote honest business and to safeguard law abiding business men against needless and vexatios litigation.

23. Because he urged and signed the Eight-hour Act, which crystalized the enlightened judgment of mankind into the law of the land in accordance with the Progressive platform of 1912 and the Democratic platform of 1916 and in accordance with the matured conviction that the man who toils should be allowed to enjoy a fair share of the treasure and the leisure, and the pleasure which should be the portion of civilized men in a civilized society.

24. Because he has said, "suffer little children to come out of the mines and the mills and the sweat shops."

25. Because he believes in the conservation of human resources as well as in the conservation of natural resources.

27. Because by taking the American people into his confidence he has deserved the confidence of the American people.

28. Because by upholding and maintaining International law when great warring nations sought to disregard it, he has performed a monumental service to civilization and humanity and to future ages.

29. BECAUSE HE IS A GOOD MAN AS WELL AS A GREAT PRESIDENT.

Mule Colts Plentiful.

Mule colts were plentiful on the court day market, in Shelbyville, but buyers were scarce and few sales were made. Choice colts were held at $100 but the best price reported was $85. There were no good aged mules on the market, and but little demand for the kind offered. Prices ruled lower than a month ago. Common horses sold at prices ranging from $40 to $50 and some of better quality from 60 to $70. Few mule colts were sold under the hammer at from 40 to $50.

State News.

Versailles, Oct. 25.—The coal situation in Versailles is serious. Several dealers have been entirely out of coal for some days and don't know when they will receive a supply. The price of block coal has been advanced to $6 a ton and the prediction is that it will go still higher.

Georgetown, Oct. 25.—Miss Abbie Smith, 19, was probably fatally burned this afternoon and her mother sustained severe burns to her hands. The young woman's skirt caught fire from a grate she was passing. Her mother was burned while attempting to beat out the flames.

Springfield, Oct. 26.—After having had the case under consideration twenty-four hours and being unable to reach a verdict the jury in the case of the Commonwealth vs. J. R. Keeling, charged with murdering Frank Casteel, was discharged by Circuit Judge Thurman. This makes the fourth hung jury in the case.

Franklin, Oct 25.—Both the local loose leaf floors conducted sales today and air-cured tobacco reached the highest point in fifty years. On the Simpson county loose leaf floor 90,000 pounds were sold at a general average of $8.80. Fifty thousand pounds were sold by the Farmers' Loose Leaf Co., at an average of $8.36. The crop is the largest in the history of the county and the initial sales proved the sensation of the year.

The crowd court day gave out the fact that many of our farmers have sold their tobacco at good prices and will begin stripping in earnest next rain. Madison Elmore has paid $20 per hundred, so we learn. Porter Ransdell of Sanders, has bought some good at from 12 to $14. Wm. Marston has bought quite a purchase at good prices. Sidebottom & Co., of Owenton, have bought a number of good crops at 11 and $12.—Owen County Democrat.

Burkesville, Oct. 25.—More than 2,000 Cumberland River pearls, the largest lot of pearls ever seen in Burkesville, were sold here at public sale to C. R. Hicks, an attorney, for the sum of $512. These pearls were the property of the late Hiram Staten and were sold by his executor in order to wind up the estate. Saten was a pearl dealer, and sold thousands of pearls every year on the New York market. It is said that Staten was offered $2,000, which he refused to accept, for these pearls only a short time before his death.

Barbourville.—The coal car shortage continues at Southeastern Kentucky mining plants. Just now operators are flooded with orders for the winter domestic trade. A representative of one of the largest steel industries has been in the Bell and Harlan districts endeavoring to quicken the movement of coal to the steel mills. Mines on the Cumberland railroad in Knox county, normally requiring 100 cars daily, are fortunate if they secure this number in one week. It is claimed that city retail prices will be high this winter, due to the scarcity of cars for shipping.

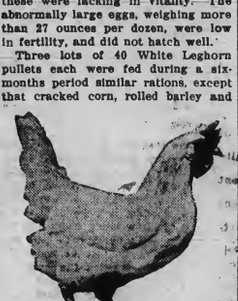
Thirty-two years ago in Cincinnati on the night of the courthouse riot, Mrs. Albert Potts, of this city, and his brother, James K. Potts, were separated in the Queen City. Since that time Albert Potts had heard nothing from his brother until a few days ago when he received a message to meet the steamer Reuben Dunbar at the local wharf. When he met the boat he found that his brother was mate on that steamer and had been living in the up-river district all these years. Jas. Potts had heard at the local wharf that his brother lived in Maysville.—Maysville Independent.

Pineville.—The work of building the Boonesville-Dixie Highway, between Pineville and Middlesboro which is being done by the State Highway Commission is progressing most satisfactorily and if good weather continues the road between this city and Middlesboro will be completed before the first of the year. The work is being done entirely by convicts, 75 being employed in the various kinds of work. The rock, which is procured from the county's quarry in this section, is quarried by convicts. Another engaged in bridge building and still another in spreading stone on the grade ditching.

Mrs. R. C. Stewart, of this place, was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Covington last Saturday and on Sunday was operated on by Drs. A. V. Menefee and the hospital surgeons. This is the third operation Mrs. Stewart has been compelled to undergo within the past ten months, each of the operations taking place on the 22d day of the month. The first operation was for appendicitis on the 22d day of January the second on the 22d of July and the third on the 22d of October. Mrs. Stewart was formerly Miss Iva Menefee, of Flingsville. She has rallied from the last operation and is on the road to recovery.—Grant Co. News.

Jonas Weil, who has returned to Lexington from a cattle-buying trip through several of the neighboring counties, says the price of grass fattened cattle is keeping up remarkably well for this time of the year, which gives evidence of a high beef market this coming winter. Mr. Weil shipped 15 carloads of grass fattened cattle from Madison county to Philadelphia last week, which brought the owner $8.75 per 100 lbs. This is the time of year when the Western cattle growers are moving their grass cattle East in great numbers, the necessity for winter feeding begins, and the high prices on this grade of cattle reflects an unusually strong demand. —Danville Messenger.

POULTRY FACTS



AVERAGE COST OF HEN FEED

Results of Poultry Experiments at Washington Station—Leghorn Costs $1.35 Yearly.

From records kept by the Washington experiment station, it is estimated that the average cost of feed for a laying hen is $1.60 per hen per year for the general-purpose breeds, such as Orpingtons, Plymouth Rocks and Langshans. The cost for Leghorns and Anconas has been $1.35 each. The average cost of producing eggs has been 16 cents per dozen.

In incubating and brooding trials, out of 3,000 eggs incubated, 2,300 chicks were hatched. The loss of chicks during the brooding period was 8 per cent. It was found that chicks hatched from eggs weighing from 24 to 27 ounces per dozen were more vigorous and grew more rapidly than those from abnormally large or very small eggs. The small eggs were about equal to the larger ones in fertility, but the chicks hatched from these were lacking in vitality. The abnormally large eggs, weighing more than 27 ounces per dozen, were low in fertility, and did not hatch well.

Three lots of 40 White Leghorn pullets each were fed during a six-months period similar rations, except that cracked corn, rolled barley and whole oats were compared as supplements to whole wheat in the grain mixture. The amount of grain consumed by the respective lots was 1,040, 1,060 and 1,000 pounds; the amount of mash consumed, 400, 360 and 430; the total cost of feed, $26.40, $23 and $23.60; the number of eggs laid, 2,975, 2,974 and 2,574; the gain in weight, 27, 32 and 17 pounds, respectively. Out of 200 eggs incubated in lot 1, 185 were fertile, from which 153 chicks were raised; lot 2, 180 fertile and 150 chicks raised, and lot 3 168 fertile and 133 chicks raised.

FIRST ATTENTION TO CHICKS

Keep Them Quiet and Warm Until Thirty-Six Hours Old—Then Give Sand and Water.

Many young chicks are breaking their way into the world and will need our attention if they are to grow and bring a profit. Do not be in a hurry to feed them, but keep them quiet and warm until thirty-six to forty-eight hours old. Then give some fine sand or grit, and water.

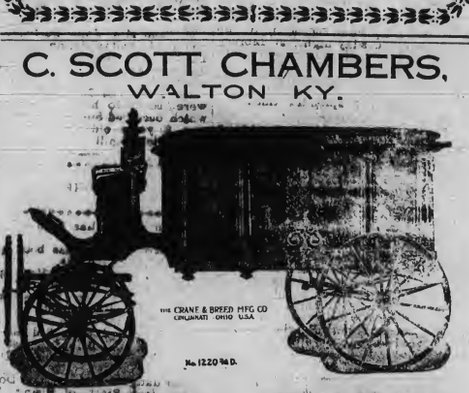
After this, feed some hard-boiled eggs, dry bread or cracker crumbs, oatmeal or prepared chick food. Feed a little at a time, and often until a month old, when four times a day will be sufficient. After three months, feed three times a day until grown. Finely ground feed should be given until they are about a month old, when a gradual change can be made to fine cracked grains, which may be fed until they are about two months of age. Then another gradual change can be made to cracked corn and whole small grains.

GOOD FIRST FEED FOR CHICK

Rolled Oats Are Very Nutritious and Relished by Young Fowls Just Out of Shell.

A good first feed for little chickens is to throw a limited amount of rolled oats on the floor, only the amount that the chicks will clean up in about one hour. Rolled oats are very nutritious and relished by the chicks and are excellent as a first feed. However, their continued use is not advisable. Hard-boiled eggs, ground in a food chopper and mixed with dry bread crumbs may also be successfully used as a first feed.

ARRANGING NEST FOR TURKEY



Be Careful That It Is Deep Enough So That Eggs Will Not Roll Out —Build Up Sides.

When the turkey hen makes her own nest be careful that it is deep enough so that the eggs will not roll out. Sometimes it is necessary to build up one or more sides of the nest a little, using the material around the nest so that the hen will not suspect that the nest has been tampered with.

Burlington basket ball teams went to Belleview last Friday and dropped two games. The girls were defeated 7 to 3 and the boys 23 to 17. Belleview has decidedly the fastest boys' team in the county and they are playing for a clean score this season with prospects fair for success.

Price of Mule Colts is Off.

Mule colts are off from ten to twenty dollars per head now and this would be a fine time for feeders to purchase their usual number to carry through the winter. In all probability they will go up within the next few weeks. However, aged mules are selling for big prices and many sales are being reported.

Making a Nice Road.

A good job of repairing is being done on what is known as the Woolper pike, and so far as the work has been completed it gives the road a much better appearance than it ever had. The road is being nicely crowned and numerous new culverts put in that will give it a drainage which will prevent water under ordinary conditions accummulating in a volume sufficient to do any damage.

President Wilson Urges Unity.

On his visit to Cincinnati President Wilson urged unity in the United States to meet the new problems and a spirit of human sympathy, declaring the position of neutrals has become intolerable and in the future the nations of the world will get together and say, "nobody can be neutral as respects the disturbance of the world's peace for an object which the world's opinion cannot sanction."

It Was a Splendid Speech

Gen. J Tandy Ellis, of Frankfort, addressed a moderately sized audience at the court house last Saturday afternoon in the interest of the Democratic party. He was introduced by S. W Wolin in a short speech of about ten minutes. Mr. Ellis is a very entertaining speaker and his audience was sorry when he concluded his remarks. He was accompanied by Atilla Norman, son of the late L. C. Norman bt this county. They were taken to Petersburg by Sheriff Cropper, where Mr. Ellis addressed a large crowd Saturday night.

Standardizing Grain.

The Federal Dopartment of Agriculture has issued rules and regulations providing for the manner in which grain is to be graded. It is interesting to note that among the licensed inspectors will be men to inspect and grade shell corn for shipment in interstate or foreign commerce. Water and moisture in grain must be considered, and deductions made for its weight. While watered stocks may continue to thrive in the financial markets, water is discouraged as a part of the price charged for grain. It is a long ways from the old flail, and the process of shelling corn on the barn floor to the present day when Governments standards are being devised.

IS IT PAINEUL To DIE?

If We Submit Meekly to it the Sensation is Delightful.

The physical pain of death depends I suppose, on the particular cause of death. Naturally death from starvation or cancer must be very much more painful than death from old age. Dying is probably more painful than death itself. At some most painful deathbeds there seems to come a period of calm when the end draws near. I think it is a great pity that for the sake of relations a death agony is sometimes prolonged by the use of powerful drugs. I remember a doctor saying to me at the death bed of a young officer: "If there were relations here we should keep him alive for a few hours." Why should a dying man be kept alive for these sentimental reasons?

I suppoce a great deal of the painfulness of death is due to our struggling against it. Just as, when we resist an anaesthetic it causes us great discomfort while if we meekly submit to it the sensation is delightful so with death.

The reason we resist is that we cling to life. This does not necessarily mean that we are afraid to die or that we have doubts about immortality and want to have as much of this world as possible for fear there is no other. The greatest struggle for life I ever witnessed was on the part of a young Spiritualist who most certainly believed in the next world. He simply refuse to die and did literally live some days longer because of his detrmination. It was rather splendid this insistance on life though it probably cost him a lot pain.

On the other hand. I remember a young soldier in France who died from sheer lack of wanting to live. The doctor told me that need not have died if he had only resolved to live.

Another case I remember of a young Tommy who had a long, weary illness from an awful wound. He, no doubt, was bound to die, but, he, too lost heart. It was arranged that he should go to "Blighty," but he had ceased to care to do so, and refused. The end came very rapidly after that.

I think these instances show that much depends on will power. My own father was a man of extraordinary vitality. A month before his death his doctor said to me: "By all the laws he ought to be dead now." It was difficult to believe a few hours before his death, at the age of 90, that he was a dying man. His again was a case of the most absolute belief in the other world, coupled with an intense desire to live and not die a moment too soon.

Probably the greatest pain in death is mental pain. I can conceive a wasted life, a stupid life, and, still more, a wicked life making it very painful for a man to die.

At the same time I am bound to say that many people who have lived a very unsatisfactory life are apparently able to make a very peaceful end. Perhaps they have never understood what life is, or what it is meant for. To lose it does not mean much for such persons.

Others, I think, are really sorry to die, because they have so much interest in life, and there are all sorts of problems they had hoped to see solved, and now it is all going to be hid from their sight. This is exactly where religion does bring great comfort, to the dying. The man of faith has lived "seeing the invisible," and now he is going to see it visibly. He has always been "proving the unseen; now it will be seen."

I think that religious teachers are foolish not to preach heaven as the solving of doubts and the enjoyment of truth. What the late Minor-Canon Shuttleworth used to call "a giant tea garden with a mammoth Crystal Palace in the background" can never attract some people to heaven. Mr. Bradlaugh used to say that he did not want to go to heaven if none of the heretics of history were to be there.

It is a far cry from such persons to the poor wounded Tommies. But there again I verily believe that peace does come to them on their death beds from the thought of duty done on the one side and the prospect of seeing Christ on the other. I was in a hospital near the front the day after "the push." "He was with me. I'm sure of it," was what more than one man said as he lay dying.

Automobiles and Not Germs.

Automobiles, not germs, are to blame for the epidemic of infantile paralysis that has swept the country, according to the assertion made by Dr. Thomas F. Hartington, Deputy Commissioner of Labor of Massachusetts, in an address before the annual convention of the American Public Health Asso, ciation.

"Infantile paralysis is due to chemical agents, namely, gases and fumes given off in the atmosphere by the combustion of oils and the fluids used in automobiles," Dr. Hartington declared. "Cases of gas and fume poisoning and cases of infantile paralysis agree in every essential.

"In infantile paralysis we are dealing with a chemical agent, and not a micro-organism. Infants and old persons are more susceptible to the malady. Although infantile paralysis has been epidemic form dates from the introduction and wide use of the automobile."

Eddins Buchart.

FEEDING AND PREPARING MARKET GEESE

EMDEN GANDER SHOWN AT HAGERSTOWN FAIR.

The following were among the replies received by the United States Department of Agriculture to the question, "What is your method of feeding and preparing geese for market:

Vincent M. Couch, Moravia, N. Y.: To fatten goslings, confine, and after five to six weeks make cornmeal the principal feed; add some beef scraps, and allow them to have some grass. Of the large breeds, they should weigh from 10 to 20 pounds at ten weeks old; and market at this age. Reserve the smaller breeds until holidays.

F. D. Fowler, Carlinville, Ill.: Market geese are kept closely confined and fed three times a day by measure: Bran 2 parts, shorts 1 part, oilmeal and beef scraps 1 part, cornmeal 1 part, dampened with water so it will crumble. Whole corn is sometimes given. Green food, grit, and water are always before them.

B. F. Hislop, Milford, Ill.: To prepare for market, as soon as weather becomes cool, confine in small lots. Commence to feed gradually mash composed largely of cornmeal, mixed with milk if convenient, otherwise water, giving enough forage or vegetables to keep in health, increasing grain until they have all they will eat, twice a day, never forgetting plenty of water and a box of grit. By the time the goose market is on, say from Thanksgiving to New Year's, the birds will be in prime condition and bring top market price. To dress them, kill same as other poultry. Commence to pick the coarser feathers and most of the down off as soon as the fatal stab to brain is given and bleeding commences. Then sprinkle and rub well with powdered rosin, scald and rub down off quickly, plunge body in hot water then cold, wipe, and hang up or lay on table to cool before packing.

Mrs. M. Swartsley, Columbus, Neb.: To give size and flesh, I feed half cornmeal, one-fourth ground oats, the balance barley meal and wheat middlings, all mixed together with scalding water or milk, and feed as much as they will eat four or five times daily, at all times providing plenty of water.

M. B. Caldwell, Broughton, Kan.: As soon as our goslings are grown up we turn them in the hog pasture—ten acres of alfalfa—and they feed on alfalfa and eat after the hogs, and get very fat and heavy.

CONTROL OF CHICKEN MITES

Unsatisfactory Growth in Summer May Be Caused by Vermin—Destructive Work at Night.

When well fed and otherwise properly managed, chickens do not always make satisfactory growth in summer. There is a cause for this which may be wholly unsuspected. It is likely to be due to the presence of chicken mites.

This pest is a blood-sucking parasite. It harbors under the perches, in cracks, and in other places. Its destructive work is done at night. When the chickens are at roost the mites crawl from their hiding places on to the birds. They gorge themselves with blood much the same as a mosquito does, and then crawl back to their hiding places.

If this pest is not discovered it multiplies into millions in a few weeks of hot weather.

If the mites become numerous, they will suck more blood from a chicken in a single night than the chicken can produce the next day from the digestion and assimilation of the most nourishing food. And since the blood carries the assimilated food for the growth of the different parts of the body, there can be little or no growth so long as such a condition continues.

The time and the labor of the poultryman, as well as the feed consumed, are thus practically wasted in the presence of chicken mites.

During the summer every precaution should be taken to keep the pens and roosting places free from mites. This is not a difficult matter. The mite is a very small parasite, barely perceptible with the unaided eye.

When not gorged with chicken blood it is light-colored. It becomes red when it has gorged itself with chicken blood. For this reason it is sometimes called the "red" mite. But this pest is so delicately constructed that it can be easily destroyed by spraying with kerosene or whitewash.

VENTILATION IN THE SUMMER

Brooding and Roosting Coops Must Be Open to Permit Free Circulation of Air.

During the summer the brood coops and roosting coops must be very open so that plenty of air can circulate through them; otherwise the chicks will overheat at night, which will check their growth and reduce their vitality, making them less profitable.

FICHTING IN THE AIR

A Graphic Description of a Battle Between Aeroplanes.

Geting started is the hardest par of an attack. Once you have begun driving you're all right. The pilot just ahead turns tail ulike a rout dropping back in the water, and swoops down in irregular curves and circles. You follow at an angle so steep your feet seem to be holding you back in your seat. Now the black Maltese crosses on the German's wings stand out clearly. You think of him as some sort of big bug. Then you hear the rapid tut-tut-tut of his machine gun. The man that dived ahead of you becomes mixed up with the topmost German. He is so close it looks as if he had lit the enemy machine. You hear the staccato barking of his mitrailleuse and see him pass from under the German's tail.

The rattle of the gun that is aimed at you leaves you undisturbed. Only when the bullets pierce the wings a few feet off do you become umcomfortable. You see the gunner crouched down behind his weapon, but you aim at where his pilot ought to be—there are two men aboard the German craft—and press on the release hard. Your mitrailleuse hammers out a stream of bullets as you pass over and dive nose-down to get out of range. Then, hopefully, you redress and look back at the foe. He ought to be dropping earthward at several miles a minute. As a matter of fact, however, he is sailing serenely on. They have an annoying habit of doing that, these Boches.

The shade trees about town are nearly denuded, preparing for winter.

The hunting season will not open until the 15th of this month so do not be in too much of a hurry to get your gun, Johnnie.

Dr. W P Foreman, who resides between Walton and Verona will have a big sale on the 22d.

Next Tuesday is the day designated for the political land slide.

Thanksgiving proclamations are about due.

HAVE TURKEYS READY FOR THANKSGIVING

PROFITABLE FLOCK OF YOUNG TURKEYS.

The advantage of an early market for turkeys cannot be overestimated. Keep them growing and try to have the bulk of the turkey crop ready for Thanksgiving. The demand for turkeys is greatest at this time and the price is best. Keep pushing the feed from this on. Let them have all they want of the best food. They will grow and lay on flesh at the same time. While they must be left on range, yet, well fed, they will tramp off no flesh because they are not worrying now about a living. They are taking life easy. Of course, English people confine turkeys and fatten them up on ground oats or corn and milk, boiled vegetables, with table scraps—anything soft and tasty and in plenty twice a day. When on range they should be fed three times a day at fattening time wheat, oats and old corn, never new, for this makes intestinal trouble that precludes laying on flesh. At noon the feed should be ground stuff made into a mash. It pays to spare plenty of good grain to an increase of turkey flesh, for it brings more accordingly, and with no more feed, than beef, mutton or pork per pound for the farmer.

DETERMINING SEX OF FOWLS

Knack Is Particularly Valuable to Those Selling Day-Old Chicks—Male Is Sturdier.

(By W. A. LIPPINCOTT, Kansas Agricultural College.)

Ability to determine sex is particularly valuable to persons who make a business of selling day-old chicks and to those who desire to raise the pullets only. It is impossible for poultry raisers to do this, however, except in the case of a few of the varieties in which there is a difference of color marking between the sexes as in the Barred Plymouth Rocks and Silver Wyandottes.

In China where one family follows the same occupation generation after generation, the poultry raisers have developed their sense of touch so highly that they can determine the sex of chicks quite accurately. Even with a Chinaman to tutor him, it is not probable that any American, with the possible exception of some of the students of the blind institutions, can become proficient in this art, and consequently the American must depend on sex characteristics and color markings.

In all varieties of poultry, the male chicks have a sturdier appearance, a wider comb space and heavier legs and beak. These characteristics alone often are misleading, but coupled with color markings, they make a good working basis.

DROPPINGS AND THEIR VALUE

Poultry Manure, Properly Cared For, Is One of Best Fertilizers—Keep in Airy Place.

Properly cared for, poultry manure is one of the best fertilizers the ground can have. The best way to preserve them is to put them in a dry box or house, protected from the weather, but airy enough to keep dry.

Sifted coal ashes on the dropping board, or mixed with the droppings, help to dry them out. Sawdust will answer the same purpose.

If the poultry droppings are cared for each day or week, the condition of the flock may be estimated by the character of the droppings. If the droppings show traces of blood, the chances are the birds are getting too much meat; if they are unshaped and soft, the mash is too wet. If the excrement is yellow or bright green, or both, bowel trouble of the nature of cholera may be apprehended.

In health, that part of the excrement which is given off by the kidneys is white.

GOOD MIXTURE FOR GOSLINGS

Nothing Better for Newly Hatched Fowls Than Bread Moistened With Milk—Add Some Grit.

There is nothing better to feed newly hatched goslings than bread moistened with milk, in which a little fine grit and a little finely granulated charcoal has been mixed. After the first two or three days a mixture of one part corn meal and two parts bran can be gradually substituted for the bread.

FEED OFTEN BUT SPARINGLY

Four or Five Feedings Daily Until Two Weeks Old Is Favored—Avoid All Sloppy Feeds.

Little chicks must never be overfed. Feed four or five times a day during the first feeding week, gradually diminishing the number of feedings until the end of the second week. Cracked grain may be fed three times a day and dry mash kept before them all the time after the second week. Sloppy, wet foods should be avoided.

MOLTING PERIOD OF FOWLS

Very Serious Drain on Vitality of Laying Hens—Interesting Findings From New York.

(By O. W. DYNES, North Dakota Experiment Station.)

Every year the hen goes through a physiological process known as molting in which it sheds the old feathers and replaces them with new. This is a very serious drain on the vitality of laying hens. Usually they stop laying entirely during October, November and December. The New York State College of Agriculture has made some interesting findings regarding the molting period of fowls. These may be summarized as follows:

The hen feathers more quickly in those areas which protect the vital parts.

From the incubator to the laying period, chicks experience at least four moltings, either partially or completely.

Hens frequently lay during the summer while partially molting, but seldom during the general molting.

Young hens molt more quickly than older ones.

Hens molting very late molt in less time than those molting earlier.

Hens molting very late give a higher yearly production than those molting earlier.

Hens lose in weight while molting.

Broodiness appears to retard molting.

Starving the hens appears to increase broodiness.

Hens molting early resume production more quickly after molting than those molting late.

Hens molting early lay more eggs during early winter than hens molting late.

The most prolific hens molt latest.

It is thus seen that hens which molt late are usually the heavy producers. There is a lesson in this for every poultry keeper. Take proper care of the hens that molt late because of the cold weather. Such hens make excellent breeders in the spring and should be properly cared for. This can be done by putting them into the house early and not allowing them to suffer from the cold winds.

HEN PLANT MINUS ROOSTERS

Buy Baby Chicks Each Spring to Replenish Laying Stock and for Roasters and Fryers.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

To those who refrain from keeping poultry, being fearful that the roosters will disturb the quietude of the neighborhood, let me recommend the keeping of hens without roosters and buying baby chicks each spring to replenish the laying stock and to raise for fryers and roasters. There are thousands following this plan.

Even those having small back yards can raise poultry, providing, of course, such yards are touched by the sun. Poultry must have sun. There are some who are attempting to keep chickens in back yards and basements never reached by a ray of sunshine, but my advice is if you can't give your chicks this necessity of life you had better not try to raise poultry.

BLUE OINTMENT FOR VERMIN

Poison Is Not Recommended for Young Chickens—It Is Effective Also for Scaly Leg.

For body lice on chickens apply blue ointment just below the vent. Use a piece the size of a pea. Lice go to the vent for water. Do not use this on young chickens. Blue ointment is effective also for scaly leg. This information is given out by the California experiment station.

CHEERFUL FACE.

Do not be grumpy in your own home. Some folks save all their smiles for company or special occasions. It is far more necessary to happiness to be cheerful in your own home and with your own family. If the home is happy, one can bear rudeness met elsewhere. If the home is happy, the happiness will radiate among neighbors and friends. One gives the sensible advice: "Come down in the morning as if you had just heard a pleasant piece of news." Bring that cheerfulness to the breakfast table. It will improve your appetite and aid digestion. It gives a good beginning to the day, makes work easier and helps endure the day's vexations. If you have worries, keep them to yourself unless you must tell them. When you must reveal your worries, choose the right one to share your burden. There is no need to tell troubles to the entire household when few can be of help, says Milwaukee Journal. Why cloud the joys of others and be a wet blanket to enthusiasm? Most things that are worried over are things that never happened. Take notice of worries and you will find this true. If you have problems, they are better solved by facing them with calmness and cheerfulness than in a gloomy spirit. It is said that there is no faculty so happy as the faculty of thinking you are happy. The Scotch have a saying: "A man is weal or woe, as he thinks himself so."

Someone has said that of all people in the world the Americans have the worst manners in public. Whether this is an exaggeration or not our bad manners are amply in evidence in most public places, especially where there are crowds. It is astonishing how even people of breeding who in private intercourse are polite and considerate, lose all regard for others when the relations cease to be personal. In short with a vast number of people, courtesy does not seem to be a natural thing, but something merely imposed by custom, and they lapse from it as soon as their relations to their fellows cease to be direct and personal, says Indiana Farmer. Even in the use of the telephone this lapse is noticeable. People whose voices and manners are affable in face-to-face conversation very often answer their phone calls with a curtness that would be positively resented by anyone who was directly addressed in such a tone.

The mustache, which generally means much in the young lives of most men, means brains at Harvard. Statistics gleaned from an inspection of 175 professors and instructors in Harvard show that 117, or two-thirds of them, carry something on their upper lips besides a smile. Mustaches beat bald heads by more than a hair's breadth as an indication of brains, says Boston Post. Among the same 175 professors and instructors there are only about 75 bald heads. Quite a few of the faculty members are in both lists, with mustaches and bald heads.

"Married life," says a woman's page writer, "would be infinitely happier if married men would obey the whims of their wives with half the alacrity they displayed when their wives were their sweethearts." Why not make allowance for the fact that a bachelor isn't eternally worn out humoring his sweetheart's whimsical idea that there's a burglar in the house and hunting for him with a flashlight?

A professional prophet says the war will end this year, because the hands of the French and British aristocracy show square fingers and hard palms. But the world at large will require evidence of a little more definite character than this to be assured of the desirable event.

Inasmuch as dyes of the rarer colors are now quoted at $70 a pound, it looks as if most of us would have to go along with garments of the commoner colors. But, really, you know, that's what most of us have always done.

It is a tribute at once to the chivalry and restraint of the American character that the woman who wears autumn furs is not mobbed in the streets on sight.

It certainly sounded like the good old days to read, mixed in the list of Sunday automobile casualties, an item about a collision between two buggies.

A short matrimonial item that appeared in last week's RECORDER has got the people guessing and two or three young men have been spotted as the party to which the RECORDER had reference, and it hopes each one of them will prove that he is the person.

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS

Given by Covington's Industrial Club to Help Northern Kentucky Farmers to Improve Their Stock.

In line with the policy of the Covington Industrial Club to help the farmer of Northern Kentucky in his effort to improve his stock and his farm in general, $500 was set aside Wednesday, at the request of the club's agricultural committee, to foster the breeding of better cattle in Kenton, southern Campbell, Grant, Boone and Pendleton counties.

On the agricultural committee are: Henry Hartke, chairman; Jno. E. Shepherd, William Macklin, Geo C. Goode and Joe Luhn

The plan they recommended to the club and which brought about the $500 appropriation, is for the club to buy an interest in high-grade bulls for breeding purposes.

It is planned not only to improve cattle for meat purposes, but also largely for dairy purposes.

The farmer, who usually would pay fifty to seventy-five dollars for a low-grade bull, will go to the club and point out that he can get a much more desirable animal for twice that amount.

The club will then enter partnership with him and add to his fund a like amount.

Thus an animal for $100 to one hundred and fifty dollars may be purchased, and an improvement in the stock of the farm for either meat or dairy purposes effected.

The agricultural committee of the club believes that a few high-grade Jersey, Guernsey, Holstein or other animals of the milk-producing families will do much to improve and enlarge the milk supply of this vicinity, and that similarly high-grade animals, of other families will built up the meat-producing herds.

The club by advancing half the purchase price of the animals, will have an interest in them, with the proviso that the farmer at any time may buy the club's half by payment of breeding fees or in other small amounts.

It is believed that many northern Kentucky farmers and stock breeders will embrace this opportunity, just as they have the government plan of offering to them high-grade stallions for horse breeding purposes.—Ky Post.

Kentucky Cares for Cholera.

Hog cholera used to cost Kentucky $2,000,000 a year. Last year losses from this disease in the state were only half that sum, according to Dr. Robert Graham, head of the department of live-stock diseases at the Experiment Station. For six years this department has been conducting a campaign against cholera and has just got the machinery of control in working order. There are 24 depots in the state for the distribution of serum, 22 of which were established in the last two years. Due to the rise in hog prices and the demonstration in cholera control by the Experiment Station farmers have come to see that this disease may be controlled and that it is worth while to take all possible measures to control it. The Experiment Station has been in touch with less than half the outbreaks, and hopes by extending its activities with the co-operation of farmers, thru the County Agent, to reduce the present million-dollar loss to a much smaller figure.

CITY MARKETING.

Methods Employed Largely Influence the Prices Paid to Producer and Cost to Consumer.

The farmer has a direct interest in the efficiency of the marketing organization in cities, since lack of efficiency may be reflected in the poor prices he receives for his products. Sooner or later the great majority of the perishable produce raised on the farm for sale finds its way to the cities for distribution; and whether it passes from the ownership of the farmer before or after reaching such centers, the sales usually are based on city-quoted prices. Many farm products, especially perishables, are consigned to city commission merchants to be sold for what they bring, the prices received in such cases being directly dependent on their city market values. Prices based on these values are paid also when such products are sold by the producer directly to wholesalers or jobbers after shipment to city trading centers. Even the products which the farmer sells at the nearest railroad station are bought largely for consumption in cities and so are paid for, in most cases at prices which are dependent on those prevailing in city markets. The city, therefore, thru the operation of city demand in relation to supply, largely determines the prices which the farmer receives for his perishable products.

Dairying Increases in South.

An indication of the hold which the movement for diversification has taken in the South is seen by dairy specialists of the department in the growth of the cattle division at the Louisiana State Fair in four years from 25 head exhibited to 400. This fair, in a section heretofore not well supplied with dairy cattle, stood second last year among the Jersey shows of the United States.

Other indications of diversification by development of the dairying industry are found in the organization in the South last year, with the assistance of the Dairy Division of the department, of three bull associations and three cow testing associations, the purchase of 927 head of cattle, including 166 bulls, and the establishment of two additional college creameries. An example of what the development of dairying means to southern communities is pointed out by a specialist in Alabama where practically all the cream supplied to the creameries of the State is produced by native cows One plant in the boll-weevil territory of the state produced last year 129,000 pounds of butter worth $39,000. This represents an asset present before the construction of the creamery, but largely or improperly handled at that time.

Price of Paper Still Soars.

Washington, Nov. 3.—In a statement tonight announcing virtual completion of its investigation of news print paper prices, the Federal Trade Commission declares that during the first half of this year, when prices already were soaring to unprecedented figures the average cost of producing news print paper in domestic mills was less than $1.60 a 100 pounds, or below the average cost in the past three years.

The commission announces that before issuing its report, public hearings will be conducted and manufacturers, publishers and others interested given an opportunity to appear. No date is set for the hearings, but the report is said to be ready to send to the press in the near future.

Certain facts developed by the inquiry are made public now, because most of the publishers' contracts for paper are about to expire. Contract prices rose this year from less than $3 per hundred to 3 and $3.50, and on current market purchases the publishers have paid $7 or more for paper bought in the same way prior to January 1 for between 2 and $3.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Denzel Carpenter Meets With Serious Injury on the High School Campus.

Denzel Carpenter, 15, a studeat at the local High School, experienced a very serious accident shortly after school was dismissed the afternoon of Wednesday of last week, resulting in the dislocation of one of his ankles and a bad break of the bone in the leg, near the injured ankle. He was taken to Dr. Duncan who realized the seriousness of the injury and took him as soon as possible to a Cincinnati hospital where an X-Ray picture of the injury was taken, disclosing a very serious injury that will confine him to his room probably as long as two months. The unfortunate young man is a son of Mr. and Mrs William Carpenter, of Locust Grove neighborhood, and came to school from home, a distance of about four miles, using a horse and car, to make his daily trip. Wednesday afternoon young Carpenter had started home but before he got out of the school campus he drove his cart over a frame to which some bed springs were attached, the rebound of the springs upsetting the cart, and threw him to the ground with the result stated above. The young man was making fine progress with his studies and his professors and fellow students are very sorry to see him compelled to remain away from school so long a period.

RURAL SCHOOLS

Short Terms and Poor Attendance Rob Rural Children of School Privileges.

Before the rural schools can come into possession of the things due them there must be an aroused public sentiment as to their needs. If it were possible to take into consideration the large number of rural pupils who are not enrolled but who would be enrolled by a proper enforcement of a reasonable compulsory attendance law, the average daily attendance in the rural school for the country at large would be less than 60 per cent.

If we go one step further in our reasoning and take into consideration the millions of rural school children in short-term schools of three to four months in length, it is evident that the average daily attendance of millions of pupils in the rural schools for the nation at large is not 50 per cent of what it should be when measured by the attendance of pupils in city schools with a nine months' term. In other words, the short term and the poor attendance in the rural schools are depriving millions of country boys and girls of over half their birthright in matters of free school privileges as compared with city boys and girls.

With the help of the press we are determined to expose this unjust, unreasonable and un-American discrimination against country boys and girls. Equality before the law and equal educational opportunity have not yet been provided for the farm boy and farm girl. —J. L McBride School Extension Agent, U. S Bureau of Education.

Farming the Greatest Business

The past ten years has shown the American people that there is no greater business than farming. Many of our people fail to realize the truth of the statement because they have not learned to farm. The good farmer grows enough food products for his family before he tries to feed the outside world. Many of our farmers grow tobacco and depend upon this crop alone to feed the family and often it proves an utter failure.

The successful farmer raises his own meat, molasses, corn and hay puts up vegetables for the use of the family and often has a surplus to sell which adds to the money received for the tobacco.

The high cost of living for this winter will do more to cause our farmers hereafter to feed themselves than months of talk to them could do.

Woodrow Wilson was right last spring when he said, plow farmers plow, raise all the crops you can, and the same will be true again for next year.

Crops must be grown in great quantities, yes bumper crops must be grown before the cost of living will get any cheaper. Looking into the future with all the conditions existing to cause higher prices, the farmer who does not work early and late to raise a great crop next year will miss a golden opportunity to do well.

Delighted With the Road.

The people who use the Woolper pike most are delighted with the excellent condition in which that road is being put. Once put in first-class order that road will not be hard to keep up if given attention as soon as it is needed.

A Very Fine Fall so Far.

Work on Sidewalks Suspended

The work of constructing sidewalks in Burlington has been suspended by the contractor, Jesse Kirkpatrick, the cool weather retarding the setting of the cement to such an extent as to make the work unprofitable. The work will be resumed as soon as weather conditions in the spring will permit.

FOUR MILLION DOLLARS

Great Inheritance Tax to Be Paid Out of Western Land King's Estate.

San Francisco dispatches tell how California is preparing to collect her greatest inheritance tax, possibly $4,000,000.

Meanwhile, the people of that state are interested in the will of the late Henry Miller, great cattle and land baron of the golden west.

When Henry Miller died a few days ago he left an estate variously estimated at from $40,000,000 up. Miller was no ordinary multi-millionaire.

His vast fortune lay in the land, of which he had so many acres that he himself did not know the extent.

His vast estate was one and a half times as big as Belgium, comprising millions of acres.

It was stated that he could start a drove of cattle at the Canadian border and drive them 1400 miles to the Mexican line, and camp every night on his own land.

Miller owned cities, banks and great droves of cattle.

His motto while alive was "buy land, but never sell it," and that he lived up to his belief is attested by the vast holdings he left at his death.

To his only daughter, Mrs. J Leroy Nickel, her husband and their three children go the bulk of the estate.

Two of the grandsons are boys, J. Leroy Jr, and Geo W. Nickel. Beatrice is the granddaughter.

An interesting feature of the will is that the grandchildren must remain "sober and industrious" if they are to enjoy the fruits of the vast inheritance.

Miller also added that the grand sons must "enter upon some useful and honorable business."

Sarah E. Miller, widow of the late Henry Miller, Jr., receives a bequest of $50,000 only from the will.

The aged land baron bequeathed $800,000 for public benefaction. Of this, $500,000 is for a medical research fund, $300,000 for a hospital at Gilroy Cala., and $50,000 for San Francisco charities. Other substantial bequests are provided for relatives and employes of the great estate.

It Looks Good Now.

The Belleview pike has been given an overhauling to what is known as the Botts road near the foot of the big hill. From that point to Belleview the road is in fairly good condition. The work that has been done on the road makes it look a thousand per cent better and the people along the route are delighted with it. The roller was taken to Hopeful, last Saturday, where the new road just completed was rolled and put in nice condition.

HOME FROM PANAMA

Boone County Native, Employed In Canal Zone, Visiting His Parents.

The triennial assembly of the Eastern Star here has afforded a home coming opportunity to Mr. and Mrs. Robert S Houston, of Gatun, Panama Canal Zone. Mrs Houston is the official delegate from the Panama chapter, which she was instrumental in organizing early in 1915.

Mr. Houston, a native of Boone county, has been engaged in the canal construction work for ten years, and new is in charge of the domestic water supply at the Gatun lock district. Mr and Mrs. Houston will leave for Vecona, Ky., Friday, following the close of the assembly, for a visit to their parents.

An interesting story of his experiences since removing to Panama, and conditions prevalent there, is told by Mr. Houston, who said that while only small slides now occur to block traffic in the Panama Canal, it is the general opinion there that the canal can never be depended upon until the hills on which the slides originate are entirely eliminated. Continuing, he said:

"Considerable interest is taken there in the agitation for the construction of a canal via the Nicaragua route, which was surveyed by the United States before work on the Panama Canal was begun. The opinion prevails that the Nicaragua route would be far more acceptable than the Panama route, because of the different nature of the country, while it would not be many miles longer, and is several hundred miles farther north."

Mr. Houston also told of the conditions among the natives, whom he said never worked and never would, because natural food there is so plentiful and because there is so little need of wearing apparel.—Courier-Journal

FALL GARDEN CLEANING.

Cut and Burn Diseased Animal Plants—Remove Vegetation that May Harbor Insects.

Garden cleaning in the fall is as important in its way as housecleaning in the spring, whether flowers or vegetables make up the garden plot. The achievement of garden cleanliness at this season will often do much toward insuring healthiness and thriftness of plants during the next growing season. The foliage and branches of plants which have been attacked by disease or badly infested by insect pests should be cleaned up especially well and burned.

If it is possible or desirable to clean away plants from some portions of the garden before frost such areas may well be sown to rye as a cover crop, the growth to be turned under in early spring. Incidentally, also, the patches of green will give the otherwise bare garden a cleanly and more cheerful appearance during the winter.

If it is possible or desirable to is most needed in the garden. When annual plants have been nipped, those that may harbor disease or insect pests should be cut down or dug up and burned. If the soft-leaved plants which will rot easily are free from disease and insects they be turned under advantageously at this time. It is not well, however, to turn under tree leaves, especially such tough leaves as those from oaks. These make valuable compost when rotted, but usually require two years for proper decomposition. They should be collected and placed in a compost pile or pit maintained in a convenient location. Soil, wood ashes, lime and fresh manure should be mixed in the compost heap.

The fall is the time also to cut down asparagus bushes. This should be done after the foliage dies. The old canes of black raspberries also should be cut out at this time. If there is reason to believe that the trimmings harbor disease spores or insects they should be burned. Rhubarb leaves should be removed in late fall and the crowns muiched with straw or manure.

A Cow is a Cow.

Bright farmers hold no longer to the theory that a cow is a cow. On the contrary they stick to the principle that a good cow is an excellent investment and a poor cow is a waste. That sale at Coopersburg of 126 animals for $80,000 proves that the bright farmers have their pocketbooks in hand ready to pay for pure blood. The man who gave $3,000 for a cow knows that she is cheaper than another cow which would cost him $50. A cow is a living machine which converts hay, grain and fodder into milk, and the greater her capacity to perform this process of conversion the better cow she is. One of the best things our agricultural schools have taught is a knowledge of the superiority of first rate stock of every kind over inferior stock. It has come to a point where a knowing farmer can measure the quality of other farmers easily by the cows he keeps.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The tobacco in this section is curing up in first class condition. Fred Wayland has bought about 175,000 pounds at prices ranging from 10 to 13½ cents, and there is some fancy tobacco in the lot. Careful handling of the tobacco is a big item to be considered by the growers, for that means better prices than a poorly handled crop. Get the crops ready for the early market for the prices will be at the best then, and the greatest activity is expected in the beginning of the season. The Walton loose leaf house is advertised to open with the first sale on Saturday, Dec. 9th, and it is expected the weather conditions will admit of the tobacco being in the proper condition to handle by that time, though at present there is very little stripped or ready for market.

Clean Up the Garden

All refuse should be removed from the garden or be deeply plowed under before winter sets in If left upon the fround the old vines, stalks and leaves become hibernating places for various insects. They are alyso a source of infection of numerous diseases. Cabbage stubs and asparagus and onion tops should be destroyed especially if there has been any tendency towards disease. Asparagus tops should be cut close to the ground and burned. This not only will destroy a large proportion of the seed but will help to keep rust under control. Fall plowing of garden land that can be heavily covered with manure or that has a heavy cover crop growth in recommende.

We picked up a daily paper the other day and noticed that England had won a great victory. In the next column the Kaiser was sweeping everything before him. Turning over a page, we found Russia sweeping her foes into eternity, and Austria, Italy and the whole gang exterminating their enemies on every hand. Now, if war is hell just what is a war correspondent?—Oldham Era.

As ONE Sun Heats the Entire Earth—So ONE Register Heats Your Entire House

The Caloric way is Nature's way—most sensible, economical and healthful. No unsightly, expensive pipes and flues to cause fire danger, waste heat and clutter the cellar. The absence of pipes prevents overheating the cellar, hence produce is not spoiled. Its great heat radiation will save you at least 35% of your fuel.

PIPELESS CALORIC FURNACE

The Original Patented Pipeless Furnace

There are three reasons for this big saving. 1st, The warm air reaches your rooms by nature's direct method of circulation and there are no pipes to absorb or resist the heat. 2nd, Our double ribbed firepot and specially patented combustion chamber produce perfect combustion, thus insuring thorough burning of the fuel and a much greater heating surface. 3rd, Our specially patented triple casing, insulated with two air spaces, prevents any heat from radiating into the basement. This is the only successful, patented, one-register furnace and no other furnace can claim these three big features. This means that you get all the heat from your fuel.

Sold Under Guarantee

Put the Caloric Pipeless Furnace in your house and give it a fair trial. Its successful operation is guaranteed and we'll make right any defect in material or workmanship. The Caloric firepot is guaranteed for five years by us and by the manufacturers, The Monitor Stove & Range Co., Cincinnati, O. See this furnace and get FREE book.

So far this has been a very warm November.

The court day crowd last Monday was a little larger than usual.

Winter cover crops wnrich the soil by adding vegetable matter and humus.

Mrs. F L Peddicord, of Lakeland, was the guest of Burlington friends last Tuesday.

The paying of election bets are now in order. Local wagers were small, few and far between.

Stanley Eddins and wife have gone to housekeeping in the residence recently purchased from the estate of Mrs. Belle Brady

Last Saturday night E. E Kelly's truck took a load of Burlington people to the protracted meeting in progress at Belleview Baptist church.

Saturday evening, Nov. 17th, the Hamilton High School will give a box supper at the Hamilton school house. All are invited to come and bring a box.

Miss Alberta Kelly lost on the streets of Burlington her class pin on which is engraved B. H S, 1915. The finder is kindly requested to return it to her at the store of her father, E. E Kelly

The weather has been so dry that the growers in this county have had no opportunity to strip any tobacco. As a general thing Boone county tobacco is not ready for an early market, altho much of it may be soid while yet in the tier.

There will be a pie social at the Berkshire school house Saturday evening, Nov. 18 The ladies are invited to attend and bring pies and the gentlemen to come with a pocket full of money. This will be for the benefit of the school.

Fred Morris has taken several race horses to keep through the winter, having made special arrangements for handling them. He has had considerable experience in that business, and has among the owners who visit Latonia, a good reputation as a careful and succesful handler of race stock.

The indications are that many farmers in the county, who have been using coal several years for both heating and cooking purposes will have to revert to wood again this winter, because of local dealers in coal not being able to secure a stock sufficient to supply the demands made on them. It is the opinion of many that the short age of cars, which is delaying the delivery of coal, is only a pretence on the part of many of the large dealers in coal, to give them an excuse for elevating the price of that fuel.

If you will look to the East these golden autumn mornings when day is drawing nigh you will see the beautiful star of dawn, while in the dark blue west another brilliant star is sinking slowly beyond the horizon. These two stars seem to me symbolic of two noble types of American womanhood contemporary with Rob Morris in the Eastern Star movement and order. The one was Clara Barton, greatest of American women, born in New England like Rob Morris and wearing the emblem of our sister order upon her breast as a Red Cross heroine throughout the Civil War. The other was Mrs. Martha Eubank the first Matron of the Masonic Widows and Orphan's Home in Louisville who was for fifty years a Mother in Israel to hundreds of boys and girls cast on the world with no one to care for them. In the name of the Child of Bethlehem these little ones were gathered into the fold and she died a martyr's death for their sake. Some day the Masonic records and traditions and characters which we have so long cherished in Oldham county will be given to the world as the true story of "Rob Morris and friends."— Oldham Era

A large crowd attended the spelling match at the school building last Friday afternoon which was participated in by the Belleview, Petersburg, Hebron and Burlington schools. Each school's team consisted of three of the schools best spellers, and each pupil was given fifteen words to spell, the list having been prepared in Lexington and was not opened until the spelling was ready to be begun. The list was composed of very hard words, 68 out of the list of 180 being spelled incorrectly. Mrs G. W. Tolin pronounced the words for the class in a most satisfactory manner. The first three words pronounced were missed, and for a while it looked as though the Petersburg team would come through winner but it was nosed out by Burlington on the home stretch Burlington having missed 11 and Petersburg 13 as shown by the official score which was kept by Prof. Carter, of Petersburg.

Following the spelling contest came the game of basket ball between the Burlington and Independence teams of boys. Quite a number of Independence fans accompanied their team and were very much disappointed in the showing it made, the score being 53 to 5 in favor of Burlington. Each of the Burlington team was inclined to star last Friday.

Ordering the Weather.

How would you like to order your own weather, just as you order Sunday's joint? There is a possibility that scientists may achieve this.

Prof. Summerton of the Australian Scientific Research Association, is busy with experiments which may revolutionize our meteorological arrangements. He contends that his system will secure or prevent rain and sun, as is necessary for the country's good.

The atmosphere about our earth is loaded with minute particles of dust which, when condensed with moisture too microscopic to be attracted to earth alone, fall to the ground in the shape of rain.

Atmospheric electricity is said to resist rainfall. The air immediately above us is not charged with electricity. Our earth is charged negatively with electricity. At cloud level the air is charged positively with electricity, and the dust particles there become likewise charged.

During atmospheric disturbances the equilibrium is upset, and the negative electricity of the earth passes through midair to meet the positive electricity, consequently bringing down the dust with its load of moisture.

Prof. Summerton proposes that the negative electricity should be sent up whenever we require rain. A conductor, taking the form of captive balloons fitted with steel points, and aided by certain other electrical devices, is the weather implement suggested. When sunshine is needed the method would require reversing.

START BABY BEEF ON GRAIN

Provide Creep in Pasture So That Young Animals Will Not Be Disturbed by the Cows.

A creep should be provided in the pasture so that calves may have access to grain without being disturbed by cows, as it is very important to start beef calves on grain before they are weaned. They may be kept in a separate lot into which the cows are turned twice a day, if this method is preferred. In this case there will, of course, be no need for creeps or anything else to keep cows from the grain which may be fed at such times that the cows will not disturb the calves.

The calves may be started on a mixture of two parts of shelled corn to one part of oats, by weight. The oats may be gradually reduced until none is being fed at the end of eight weeks, but while this is being done a little old process linseed oil meal or cotton seed meal should be added and the quantity gradually increased until it makes up about a seventh of the weight of the ration. On full feed calves should eat about two pounds of grain for every hundred pounds of live weight in addition to good roughage. Well-bred calves handled in this way should be in prime condition at the end of about 10 or 12 months.

DIPPING TO ERADICATE TICK

Parasite Probably Does Less Damage Than Either Mite or Louse—Tobacco Dips Are Favored.

Of the commoner external parasites attacking sheep, the tick probably does less real barm than either the mite or the louse. The illustration shows a greatly enlarged figure of the sheep tick. This pest is not easily killed by the lime and sulphur dips frequently used, but is killed very readily by any of the standard strength tobacco dips, extracts or solutions. The tobacco dips are in general use, as they will kill all the commoner types of external parasites without injury to the animal or the wool.

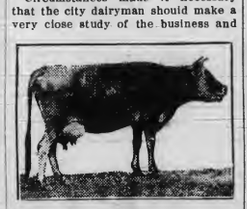
CHEAPEST GAINS ON PASTURE

Result of Trials Conducted at North Dakota Station—Animals Need Some Grain.

Pigs make the cheapest gains on pasture. Trials at the North Dakota experiment station indicate that brood sows running on good pasture and nursing litters will do as well when receiving one to 1½ pounds of grain per each 100 pounds live weight of sow, as sows in dry lot receiving 2½ pounds grain per day per each 100 pounds live weight. The pasture just about cut the feed cost in two. The pasture alone does not furnish enough feed for either the brood sow with litter or for the weaned pigs. They should be fed some grain, so as to make a rapid growth. In this way the spring pig can be ready for market before real cold weather sets in.

Alfalfa, clover, bromus and winter rye make the earliest pastures. When these have not been provided early spring seeding of such grains as oats and barley or rape are the next best thing.



DAIRY FACTS

BETTER STANDARD OF DAIRY

Farmers Allow City Dairymen to Pick Out Best Producers in Herd—Quality Deteriorates.

It seems to be true that the quality of the farm dairy herds is of a much lower standard in practically every way than those of the city dairyman. This really works to the detriment of the farmer and yet he is to blame for the whole thing. The city dairyman who must buy all of his feed knows that he cannot afford to keep a cow unless she is a real producer, therefore he goes out into the country and persuades the farmer to part with the very best cows in his herd. The cow is taken to the city and worked as hard as possible until she begins to fail, when she is sold to the butcher. All of her calves have gone to the same place and thus we see that nothing whatever has been done toward building up the standard of the dairy animals of the country.

Circumstances make it necessary that the city dairyman should make a very close study of the business and knowledge thus acquired enables him to take advantage of the average farmer when he goes out into the country in search of cows to add to his herd. Very seldom does he consider buying the cows that the farmer is willing to dispose of but he ferrets out those that he is confident are the real producers and, be it said to the credit of his shrewdness, he usually gets what he wants.

Such sales are bound to keep any herd down to a mediocre standard because the cows that really produced a profit are gone, also there is but small likelihood of any improvement because calves from poor cows seldom prove more valuable than their dam. Such methods usually allow the quality of the herd to deteriorate.

SALTING IS NICE OPERATION

Should Be as Near Absolutely Pure as Possible—Used for Flavoring and Preserving.

Salting the butter is a nice operation which requires considerable knowledge and care to be done properly. In the first place, the butter must be washed until entirely free from buttermilk before the salt is added. The salt should be as near absolutely pure as can be purchased and the finer it is the better. One ounce of salt to one pound of butter, added to the butter gradually and well worked in, is the rule.

It is advisable to permit the butter to stand after salting for 24 hours if possible, then work it over and put it in prints or pack it for market as desired. Salt is added to butter with a twofold purpose. First as a flavoring element and also as a preservative. Water holds in solution an enormous quantity of salt and the salt in butter absorbs the water which persists in the butter in spite of much work and makes the product proper as it comes to the table, nearly dry. The amount of water in the usual sample of butter runs between 10 and 12 per cent. There is no step in the production of good butter more important than the salting.

EXPENSE OF RAISING HEIFER

Must Be Worth More Than $60 When Two Years Old to Be Profitable to Dairy Farmer.

Investigations made by the department of agriculture indicate that the average cost of raising a heifer on a dairy farm in the northern and eastern sections is about $61 at the end of her second year; this includes an allowance of $7.81 for labor. The heifer is given a credit of $8 for the manure she produces. Thus it appears that the dairy farmer in the sections mentioned cannot afford to raise a heifer that is not worth more than $60 when two years old.

GOOD COWS TO CONTEMPLATE

Time, Patience and Effort Are Required to Secure Butterfat—Prize Is Worth While.

Cows that produce large amounts of butterfat are good to contemplate, but it requires time, effort and persistence to get them, and in the getting a good many blanks will be drawn; but the prizes make the effort worth while.

DAIRY FACTS

INFECTION CAUSE OF GARGET

Germs Gain Entrance Through Test Duct—Bacteria Do Little Harm—Observations to Note.

(By I. E. NEWSOM, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

At one time it was thought that garget was due to mechanical injury to the udder, and while this cause cannot be entirely eliminated, it seems evident from all recent work that practically all cases are due to infection, the germs gaining entrance through the teat duct.

It is well known that sterile milk is not to be had even when removed under the most rigid precautions. This indicates that germs are to be found in the udder most of the time. Under ordinary circumstances these bacteria do little harm, but occasionally a harmful one gets in and sets up severe inflammation. This is especially likely to be the case at about the time of freshening, or during the time the cow is drying up. At both periods there is an accumulation of milk that is not drawn out regularly and consequently it forms a good medium in which bacteria can live. When there is much accumulation of milk, milking should be done in order to get out these foreign organisms before they become harmful. While it is not necessary at the time of drying up to encourage milk production by milking dry, yet it is much better to milk out a small quantity so as to get all of the organisms out of the sinus, than it is to allow it to accumulate for several days.

DOUCHE IS OFTEN NECESSARY

Plan Outlined for Treating Cows for Sterility and Abortion—Good Solution in Use.

Frequently the dairyman finds it necessary to use a vaginal douche as a treatment for abortion and sterility troubles. The following method is recommended for such cases:

Secure a large galvanized pail, four to six gallons in capacity according to the size of the herd, and fit it with a stop-cock. Buy a pure gum horse stomach tube and fit it to the stop-cock. Elevate the pail until it is about three feet above the cow so that the liquid will flow freely. This can be readily done by making use of the feeding and litter track if there is one in the barn. When ready to use the apparatus, insert the stomach tube into the vagina, open the stopcock and allow the douching solution to flow into it by gravity until it is completely filled. A very good solution to use is a 1 to 2,500 or 3,000 parts of permanganate of potash and water.

SEPARATING A THICK CREAM

Skimming High-Test Product Leaves More Skim Milk on Farm for Hogs, Calves and Fowls.

Farmers will make more money by separating a reasonably thick cream than a thin cream. Skimming high-test cream leaves more skim milk on the farm to feed to the hogs, calves and chickens. Skim milk utilized in this way has a feeding value of about 35 cents per hundred, while if the milk is left in the cream, nothing is realized.

The butter maker usually wants a cream testing around 35 or 44 per cent butterfat. In the winter, if the cream is above 40 per cent it is rather difficult to get the cream all out of one can into another or into a vat. Cream testing about 35 per cent in the winter and 40 per cent in the summer is right for buttermaking.

COWS ARE DAIRY MACHINES

If They Fail to Produce Profits Something Is Wrong—Usually It Is Raw Material.

The cows on the dairy farm represent the equipment that produces a profit. If they fail something must be wrong. They are the machines. The feed is the raw material, the milk or butterfat is the finished product.

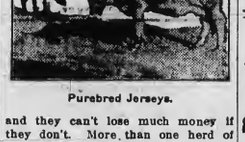
If the machines are efficient and the finished product is not all that can be desired, the trouble must be with the raw material.

THE DAIRY

REMOVE HORNS FROM CALVES

According to Writer Best Dehorning Agent Is Caustic Potash in Pencil or Stick Form.

The best dehorning agent is caustic potash fused in the pencil or stick form. The caustic should be applied as soon as the budding horn or button can be felt under the skin. As a rule this can be done when the calf is but a few weeks old, and although it is claimed by some that horns may be removed from animals six months old, it is undoubtedly best to operate early, advises Dr. E. H. Lebnert in Farm and Home.



When the proper time arrives, clip the hair over the horn from an area the size of a half dollar, wash with soapsuds and rub on the moistened caustic. To prevent the caustic from running, moisten it only slightly, and apply lard or vaseline all about the spot treated. When the scabs fall off, a careful examination should be made, and if the horn is still prominent, make another application of the caustic. To protect the fingers, wrap the caustic well with paper. If active caustic is thoroughly applied over a sufficiently large area, the horn will unfailingly be killed by one application.

VALUE OF PUREBRED HEIFERS

Editor of Agricultural Paper Picks Up Prize at Public Sale—Possibilities Unknown.

A few years ago a certain editor of an agricultural paper bought a couple of cheap little Jersey heifers at a public sale. Some of the breeders present had a good bit of fun at his expense and they haven't all got over it yet. When these heifers became cows the better one made a record of production excelled by only a few of her age in the country for a month or so and was then injured. She may be heard of later. The other one produced over 10,000 pounds of milk and 480 pounds of fat with her first calf, which was not so bad for a $50 heifer.

The fact is that nobody knows very much about the possibilities of purebred youngsters. When they are going cheap it's not a bad plan to pick them up and wait awhile. They may develop into the basis of a useful herd and they can't lose much money if they don't. More than one herd of purebred cattle has been built on something that didn't look very good to the crowd on sale day.

USE OF CENTRIFUGAL FORCE

Various Movable Parts of Machine Arranged to Render Separation Nearly Positive.

The Scientific American, in illustrating and describing a cream separator invented by J. A. Falk of Stacyville, Iowa, says:

Mr. Falk's invention comprehends an improved construction of separator, making use of centrifugal force, the various movable parts of the separator being so arranged as to render the separation as nearly positive as possible, and to prevent the mixture of the cream with the heavier portions of the milk after the separation of the cream therefrom.

Cream Separstor.

FEED CALVES IN STANCHIONS

After Young Animals Have Devoured Milk and Grain They Lose Desire to Suck Ears.

There are several good reasons for feeding calves in stanchions. The calves can be fed their milk, then their grain, and after they have eaten the grain they will lose their desire to suck one another's ears. A stanchion made of wood will be entirely satisfactory. It should be made from 3 to 3½ feet high and 18 to 24 inches from center to center, with the neck space 4 to 5 inches wide. It is built in the same manner as the old-style rigid stanchion. The calf should be fastened while eating, but loosened from the stanchion after it has eaten its grain. The calf pens and stanchions should be built in the south side of the barn, where plenty of sunshine and light can be had.

LITTLE ESSAY ON PANTS.

Some Very Interesting Thoughts on Those Worn by Male of The Species.

Pants are of two kinds; human and dog.

The human pants of commerce are worn mainly by males.

But equal rights prevail among dogs.

Human pants are worn thicker in winter and thinner in summer.

The dog's pants come thicker in the summer.

The dog's lungs are the seat of its pants. (Date 1875, Hostetter's Almanac.)

White pants are not a garment. They are a business to themselves.

The man who wears them doesn't work at much else at the time.

When I was small and on a farm, I wore pants that were not new.

So far as I could find out, they never had been new.

When they had been first worn out, by the first tailless ancestor I had, they had been patched at all the ventilated places.

When the original goods wore out between the patches, the first patches were connected by other patches.

And sew on.

Where they overlapped—the patches—the goods became about an inch thick.

And when human legs made of any material less durable than vulcanized flint are incased in a set of inch-and-a-quarter Deer Island jeans trousers patched with every kind of heavy goods from horse blankets to remnants of rag carpet—when I say, any human nether limbs are incarcerated in these bendless tubular garments in a wheat-field on a southwest hillside at two o'clock on a clear, still day when the temperature is 110 in the shade and there is no shade, the owner of said legs thinks longingly of the bastile, the stocks, the pincers the guillotine, the pillory, the thumb-screw, the rack, the stake and other religious pleasantries.

I have gone long days in the wheat field in a pair of such asbestos pants lined with sandpaper or barbed wire, and now death or public speaking or fashionable dinners—none of those things has any terror for me.

I playfully inquire of death as to the location of its stinger.—Farm Life.

Feeding Hogs.

It is very hard to teach an old dog new tricks. There is lots of philosophy in this adage and it applies to a good many farmers in Kentucky. For instance, in the matter of hog feeding. Most farmers will tell you bluntly that they know more about hogs than a County Agent or a farm paper can tell them. In fact, we have heard the old gag, "I've forgotten more than so and so will ever know."

It is not in a manner of reflecting on the intelligence or knowledge of our farmers—and we have good ones in Kentucky—but new discoveries come out occasionally that are valuable. Among them is the matter of giving our hogs something they crave and need, something they can not get in an ordinary feed lot or pasture—animal food. Hogs love meat and bones. They need the meat in order to build up the lean tissues, and bones to supply the bone phosphate. With plenty of these the hogs will grow quicker, larger and stronger. Animal meal or tankage has been found to be the most economical carrier of these elements, and the boys in the pig clubs are demonstrating what can and should be done to make bigger hogs of our pigs and richer men of our farmers.

Take, for instance, one day's receipt of hogs at the Bourbon Stock Yards this week. 5,000 porkers were received and sold and and 75 per cent of these were under 125 pounds in weight. These same hogs, if they had been properly fed on a balanced ration—just as the boys are doing—should have weighed 200 to 250 pounds. What a loss to our farmers!

Kentucky is known in the big markets of the country as a "light weight" hog state. Buyers would rather pay for a 250-pound hog than one weighing 125 pounds. We can grow as big and fat hogs as any State in the Union, then why do we not do it?—Kentucky Farming.

HOME-CURED MEATS.

Curing meats with brine is a good method for farm use. It is less trouble to pack the meat in a barrel and pour brine over it than to go over it three or four times and rub in salt, as in the dry-curing method. The brine also protects the meat from insects and vermin. Brine made of pure water and according to the directions in the following recipes should keep a reasonable length of time. During warm weather, however, brine should be watched closely, as if it becomes "ropy," like syrup, it should be boiled or new brine made. A cool, moist cellar is the best place for brine curing.

Pure water, salt, sugar or molasses, and saltpetre are all the ingredients needed for the ordinary curing of meat. The meat may be packed in large earthen jars or a clean hardwood barrel. The barrel or jar may be used repeatedly unless meat has spoiled in it. It should be scalded thoroughly, however, each time before the fresh meat is packed.

Curing should begin as soon as the meat is cooled and while it is still fresh. Ordinarily 24 to thirty-six hours after slaughter are sufficient for cooling. Frozen meat should not be salted, as the frost prevents proper penetration of the salt and uneven curing results. —Clemson College, S. C

OLD AND NEW SWIMMING HOLE

That of the Present Day Cannot Obliterate Grandfather's Memories of His Youth.

Memory goes tacking back thru the years to the old swimming hole. This one was on the "current side" of a great river, and the nadir of one of its majestic bends. Huge elm and oak trees grew on the bank and shaded water whose limpid depths held such delights as nowhere else have been experienced. The smooth rock bottom of the river was ever washed clean, while the white sand of the bit of beach along the shore was firm and grateful to the foot. This ideal spot was not easy to access, but the enterprising youth of the village found ample recompense in its joys for any exertion, even on the hottest day, required to reach it. Those who swam there, now grown gray, look at the homes that have invaded their happy land with some thoughts of sorrow.

The old swimming hole is only a cherished memory, remarks the Omaha Bee. Its wonderful freedom in all ways appreciated by a healthy boy, is contrasted with the modern swimming hole, provided by a great city, mondful of the needs of its growing citizens. In this case it is a huge tank, set on the slope of one of the fine hills in a city park, surrounded by beautiful trees a well kept lawn, and provided with all the appurtenances needful to the complete enjoyment of the boldest swimmer or most graceful or daring diver. It is a wonderful pool and the shouts of glee that come up from its surface these hot evenings testify most forcefully to the appreciation of old and young of privilege.

The new swimming hole is typical of the newer life into which the race is merging its existence, the urban rather than the rural. It is a regular step in the orderly progress of man's evolution, but its well appointed and equally regulated delights will never take the place of that splendid swimming hole nature provided for the use of boys, many of whom are now grandfathers.

State News.

Mr. Walter Roberts recently lost a valuable Jersey cow, from eating a lot of cucumber pickles which had been thrown away by a tenant on his farm.—Cynthiana Log Cabin.

In the first time in our life we saw a man this week vote by proxy for President. A gentleman from Iowa came into the clerk's office, swore to his vote and sent it home. Most of the western states have a law of this kind.—Carrollton Democrat.

Hunters entered upon the property of Mr. John Scott, three miles south of town and shot and killed accidentally a fine Jersey heifer belonging to A. T. Whitt. The heifer was being pastured with Mr. Scott, who is taking no further loss, but is forbidding any further hunting on his lands.—Clay City Times.

During the past ten days three prominent farmers of Bourbon-co, have died leaving life insurance policies aggregating $60,000. The late P. J. Millett had his life insured for $25,000; Sidney G. Clay carried $20,000 on his life and the late William P. Ardery held life policies aggregating $15,000.—Cynthiana Democrat.

Lum Rogers has one and one-fourth acres of land which he has had in cultivation this year and it has yielded him more than $350 above all expenses. He has raised beans on the ground, and last week he made the last shipment, receiving his check the latter part of last week. Having kept an accurate account of the expense incurred in producing the beans, including baskets, picking, etc. he has to his credit more than $350 in clear cash.—Carlisle News.

Col. I M Dunn, the well-known tobacco man, says he is satisfied that the farmers will have the most profitable season they have ever enjoyed. The crop is good, and there is every reason to believe that large prices will be paid to the growers He is thoroughly familiar with the situation all over the State and says the Central Kentucky growers have a most encouraging outlook. Both the Danville houses will be operated this season, and extensive additions to the buildings will be made, and both put in the best possible condition.—Danville Messenger.

Paducah, Nov. 2—Without returning an indictment the special grand jury that probed the lynching, shooting and burning of two negroes, Brack Kinley and Luther Durrett, October 16, submitted a sealed report to Circuit Judge William M. Reed this afternoon and was discharged. What the report contained was not made public, but a member of the grand jury said no one was indicted because none of the witnesses knew any of the mob. Between 100 and 150 witnesses were examined. The sealed report is believed to contain a simple statement of the work performed by the jury.

Saturday afternoon we were shown by Johnson Mattingly a box of ripe strawberries that were picked that afternoon from his vines. The berries were of good size, rich red color, and of delicious flavor, and were of a variety known as the "Everbearing," a few vines of which he has in his garden in this city. Mr Mattingly has been using the berries from these vines constantly all through the spring, summer and fall, and not withstanding the frosts that had fallen up to that time the vines were loaded with blooms green and half ripe fruit. Mr Mattingly says that at no time during the past summer did the vines quit bearing or show the least decrease in yield.—Bardstown Standard.

BAD FEED FOR THE DRY COW

Advisability of Feeding Animal Well is Not Usually Recognized—Give Her a Vacation.

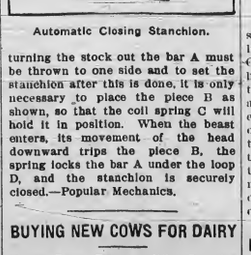
(By R. W. LATTA, New Mexico State College.)

"We'll feed this spoiled hay to the dry cows." This statement shows a common attitude, but a wrong one. True, the dry cow can utilize to advantage, as part of her ration, some off-grade hay, but the advisability of feeding her well is not usually recognized. A cow will do better in milk production for twelve months if she has six weeks to two months' "vacation on full pay." While she is dry she is nourishing her calf and getting her system into condition to give a large flow of milk when she freshens. While drying off the cow, she may be given the starvation treatment—no grain and only a poor grade of dry roughage, but as soon as she is dry she should be well fed again. The good dairy cow cannot be made too fat, when dry. All the fat stored up in her body will be milked off again, increasing the yield of milk, and also, it has been demonstrated, her milk will test higher throughout the following lactation period than if she freshens in poor flesh.

Ten days to two weeks before calving, the feed should be reduced, and light, loose feeds of choice quality should be fed. Bran, ground oats and linseed oilmeal are especially valuable at this time. A bran mash fed as a warm gruel is excellent to cool out the cow's system. It is important to have the bowels in a laxative condition at calving time. The cow should get plenty of exercise, and water not too cold. After calving she should not be crowded with feed, two weeks should pass before she is on full feed. If cared for in this way the calf will be strong and healthy, and the cow will be ready to do a big year's work.

TURN SEPARATORS TOO SLOW

Large Majority of Operators Lose From Seven to Twelve Pounds of Butter From Each Cow.



Extensive investigations conducted by Purdue experiment station and others show that 19 out of 20 separator operators turn their machines too slow and that every time they do they lost from 7 to 12 pounds of butter per cow per year. This serious loss many times spells the difference between success and failure in dairying.

Every kind of separator, to do efficient work, that is get the greatest percentage of cream from the milk, must be operated carefully in accordance with the instructions supplied by the manufacturer.

STANCHION IS SELF-CLOSING

Device Works Automatically When Beast Puts Its Head Through—How It Is Operated.

A practical stanchion that will close automatically by the action of the beast when placing its head through the bars is shown in the sketch. The stanchion is made in the ordinary manner except that it is equipped with the self-closing parts. When turning the stock out the bar A must be thrown to one side and to set the stanchion after this is done, it is only necessary to place the piece B as shown, so that the coil spring C will hold it in position. When the beast enters, its movement of the head downward trips the piece B, the spring locks the bar A under the loop D, and the stanchion is securely closed.—Popular Mechanics.

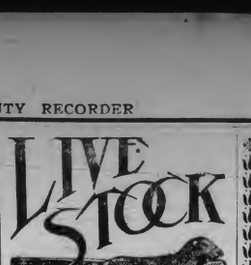
BUYING NEW COWS FOR DAIRY



Those From Farmers Who Practice Rational Methods of Feeding Are Always Preferable.

In buying new cows for the dairy one should buy from farmers who practice rational methods of feeding, preferably from those who do not feed calves in stanchions. The feed should not consist of too much grain and rich concentrates.

Many cows have been fed so much grain that they have lost their capacity for handling home-grown roughage.

Such cows are no longer profitable dairy producers and should be avoided when buying new cows for the dairy.

COMB AND BRUSH FOR HORSE

Equipment Needed in Every Stable Whether on Racetrack or Farm—Use for Currycomb.

A currycomb, a broomcorn brush, a scraper, a stiff brush and a number of rags of the right sizes should be a part of the grooming equipment of every stable, no matter whether the stable is located on a farm or at the edge of a racetrack. In most instances the currycomb should be used only to lightly raise and loosen the sweat and scurf over the fleshy portions of the horse's body, the main reliance being placed upon the brush.

The brush is the best implement for cleaning the body, as it does the work well and easily, and does not irritate the horse. I find that the principal use for the currycomb in cleaning most horses is in using it to scrape the dirt and loose hair out of the brush, says a writer in an exchange. Because of its steel teeth and general harshness and stiffness, the currycomb should never be used about the limbs. There are some people who can use it on the legs and about the bony places of the horse's anatomy without irritating the animal past all endurance. They are softer-handed than most of us.

The broomcorn brush takes the place of the currycomb in cleaning the horse's legs. In using the currycomb it should be laid flat and carried lightly in a succession of curved strokes, until all the dust and scurf that may be in the horse's coat has been loosened. Then take the brush and with it thoroughly cleanse the hair and the skin.

After using the brush take a dampened cloth and go over the surface, following this by rubbing with a dry cloth. In cleaning and grooming the head and the legs use the stiff broomcorn brush, clean with the hairbrush, and finish the operation with the dampened and dry cloths.

ALFALFA PASTURE FOR HOGS

Care Should Be Exercised That It Is Not Pastured Too Closely Cut Occaeionally.

For "growing out" little pigs and carrying over dry sows a good pasture is a valuable asset to the hog raiser. Alfalfa makes the best pasture for hogs. In pasturing alfalfa, care should be taken that it is not pastured too heavily. If this is done, the alfalfa will be badly killed out in two or three years and it will be necessary to reseed. Pasturing should never be carried on so heavily but that one-half ton of hay per acre can be cut three times a season. The occasional cutting of the alfalfa induces new shoots to grow, and hence greatly improves the pasture for the pigs.

HANDLING ALFALFA FOR HAY

Plant Should Be Allowed to Stand Until Well in Bloom—Sprinkle With Salt and Lime.

To make the best horse hay, alfalfa should be allowed to stand until well in bloom, according to the Nebraska College of Agriculture. In curing horse hay, it is well to keep in mind that the dust which is present in so much alfalfa is largely a result of the presence of foreign moisture, such as rain or dew, at making time, rather than the presence of a little moisture within the plant. If alfalfa hay is stored in the barn for horses, it is well, while mowing it away, to sprinkle it generously with a mixture of equal parts of salt and air-slaked lime.

MAKING SUCCESS WITH HOGS

Breed and Feed Well and Give Good Care—Don't Allow Litters to Lose Growth.

1. Select large, roomy, stretchy dams.
2. Breed to boars whose ancestry shows tendency to growthiness.
3. See that sow is in prime condition every day she carries the litter.
4. Don't allow the litters to lose an hour's growth from lack of proper nourishment or exposure after farrowing.
5. Use every precaution at weaning time to see that growth is maintained.
6. Bone-making feed must predominate in first six months of pig's life.
7. Maintain balanced ration later on and be sure the pigs grow every day.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE

After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good. I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of wonderful success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

The Election.

Wednesday, 10 a m.—The New York Herald claims for Wilson 304 electoral votes. The American, anti-Wilson. New York Paper, concedes his election. McCormick, Chairman of the Democratic Committee claims 307 electoral votes for Wilson.

Congressman A. B. Rouse's majority is in right around 17,000 being the largest the district ever gave a candidate See his majority by counties given in this issue. Mr. Rouse received the returns at the sheriff's office and by 7:30 p. m. it was known that his majority would be overwhelming.

In forty minutes after the polls closed at Belleview the vote had been connted and the ballot box delivered to Sheriff Cropper in the court house in Burlington. Going some that was.

The first report that sent chills up the Democratic spine came from the State of New York.

Boone cast 1,996 Democratic and 530 Republican votes.

Grant and Gallatin counties each gave the largest Damocratic majority in its history.

The Burlington board of town trustees was reelected.

The stock law carried in the Belleview and Beaver precincts.

It was a fine day for the election and the voters turned out and Boone polled a big vote---2,526.

The Democrats reelected their nine Congressmen and the Republicans ther two in this State.

The Democratic majority in Kentucky is between 25,000 and 30,000.

Campbell county gave Congressman Rouse 1,700 and Kenton county, 4,500 majority. Campbell never gave so large a majority to anyother candidate. Rouse for Peresident next time.

It looks awfully close notwithstand the above dope, a little later dope saying Wilson lacks one vote with California, Arizona and New Mexico to hear from.

HON. A. B. ROUSE

Reelected to Congress by the Largest majority ever given a candidate.

Following are the majorities by counties in the Sixth Congressional District for Wilson:

Boone	1466
Grant	738
Gallatin	769
Campbell	1500
Carroll	1220
Trimble	1069
Pendleton	506
Kenton	4000

Will Erect New Church Building

L. C Acra was in Burlington, Monday, soliciting subscriptions of money with which to erect a new Lutheran church building at Hopeful. The first church building at that point was erected in 1812. That building was a log, after the fashion of pioneer church building. The original building was superceded in 1837 by the present large brick structure of which many of Boone county's good people have been members, and where many good seed have been sowed. The estimated cost of the new and modern building which it is proposed to erect is $5,000, which amount will, undoubtedly, be raised, as the congregation is composed largely of people able to contribute, and numbers 140 members.

Robt. Chambers Badly Hurt.

Robt. Chambers, of Walton neighborhood, was badly injured one evening last week when he was starting to attend services at Richwood church. He was thrown out of his conveyance and the left pelvis bone was broken.

Election reports have been changing too fast to be kept up with.

Last Sunday morning a big Norman horse, while walking across a cistern platform at the home of Mr Thomas Graham, on the Mackville pike, broke through and fell into the the cistern, almost completely filling it. Juge McGarvey was sent for and with a block and tackle succeeded in getting the horse out without much injury—Harrodsburg Herald.

Apple cider may be canned and be kept sweet indefinitely, according to the canning specialists of the Office of Extension work, North and West, who furnish the following recipe:

Fill fruit jars with the fresh apple cider. Add a tablespoonful of sugar to each quart. Place rubber and cap in position and partially tighten cap and tip in case of tin cans. Sterilize in the hot water bath outfit for ten minutes; in the water-seal outfit for eight minutes; in the steam pressure outfit, under five pounds of steam, for four minutes; in the aluminum pressure cooker for two minutes. Remove jars, tighten covers, invert to cool, and test joints.

The Horse Still Here.

Though the sound of the auto is heard throughout the land and the scent of gasoline is wafted over mountains, plains, ordinary fields and city streets, and, though Americans are talking and thinking in terms of the automobile, the horse somehow seems to hold his footing. At the last convention of the Carriage Builders' National Association it was said that horses are increasing in the United States and that there is little decline in the building of buggies and wagons. The same thing was said at the convention of the carriage builder's last year.

It is strong testimony of the spreading prosperity and increasing wealth and comfort of the population of the country has notwithstanding the almost magical increase in number of motor-driven private vehicles the extension of electric traction lines and the drain made by Europe's purchases of horses, the horse not only holds his own but continues to multiply.—Washington "Star"

SHOWING PROGRESSIVENESS.

More Land Being Limed for Alfalfa and Clover.

Dr. K B. Woolery has been busy the past week, having limestone crushed for his farm on the Cynthiana pike. He will spread the stone this fall and sow to clover in the spring and eventually to alfalfa. Dr Woolery and a few other progressive farmers in the county are taking the iniative in liming their soil and if every farmer, who has acid soil would follow their example the production of this county would be more than doubled. Land on the Cynthiana pike lays well and with an application of three or four tons of limestone to the acre and put in clover can be made as productive as any land in the county. The same thing applies to the ridge soil in the north end of the county and a lot of bottom land. The farmer who overlooks this is overlooking the best business proposition before him. It is no doubt cheaper to most farmers to have rock crushed on their own farm than to have it shipped in, but the farmers near the C. & O Railroad can have the crushed stone shipped from the crusher at Ivor, the only cost being the loading which will amount to 15c per ton and the freight about 30c, or you can haul it from the crusher free. Mr McAllister the manager agrees to do this in order to get the farmer started to using it.—Pendleton Outlook.

Mr. E V Duckworth, of Tanner, is the owner of a remarkable cow and doubts if there is another like her in the State. The cow is half Jersey and weighs only 445 lbs. She gave birth to her first calf at the age of 20 months and will be fresh again in the spring. She gives an average of one gallon of milk a day, and in appearance is as hearty and active as any full-grown animal. Mr Duckworth prizes her highly.—Larue Co Herald

PORTABLE HOUSE FOR NESTS

Fowls Not Permitted to Lay in Poultry House Proper—Cleaning Is Very Small Task.

"I have always had my hens' nests in the poultry house and when the mites began to trouble them it was a hard task to have to scald, disinfect or whitewash the entire building, so I planned to have portable nesthouses, not allowing hens to lay in the poultry house at all. Cleaning these houses is such a small task it need not be dreaded," writes Mrs. L. E. Armour of Pleasant Hill, La., in Progressive Farmer. "Every portion of them can be easily reached. Then they can be placed under a sheltering shed during winter and under cool, shady trees in summer.

"They are built on posts 4 feet high and are 12 feet in length and 3 feet wide. There are two rows of 12 nests, one on each side of the door. A single 12-inch plank forms the floor of the hall between the nests. Eight-inch planks form the wall behind the nests. The roof is made of four 12-inch planks, two on each side. The ones just above the rows of nests are hinged and are opened upward.

"Besides lightening the work of mite fighting, these houses have dark nests, which all hens like, and are good protection against nest-robbing dogs. A short ladder at each door is necessary for the hens to get to the nests."

TO DISCOURAGE SITTING HEN

Rocking Coop Will Force Fowl to Roost on Center Shaft—Quick Results Are Assured.

"The device consists of a coop made of lath about two feet square and swung on a shaft set a little above the center so that most of the weight will be below the shaft on the lower part of the coop. The ends of the shaft are set on posts about three feet above the ground. It is impossible for a hen to sit on the slatted bottom, and if an attempt is made, the rocking and tipping of the coop will soon make her seek a more stable support, and the only one within the coop is the shaft passing through it; and the most persistent broody hen is usually glad to roost on it the first night," writes Benjamin R. Bush of Bay Shore, N. J., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Coop for Broody Hens.

"When hen has perched two nights she may be considered cured." This coop will accommodate three or four hens without crowding and insures quick results."

FOR SUCCESS WITH CHICKENS

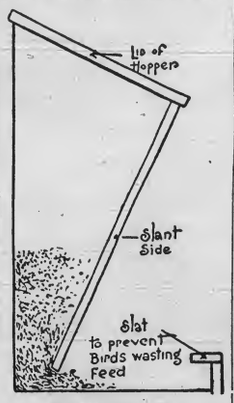
Not So Much Depends on How Many Are Hatched as Upon What Percentage Are Raised.

Success with chickens depends not so much on how many are hatched as upon what percentage is raised. The cold rains we have had recently found many early hatched chicks ready prey. An accident rather than acute reasoning once placed us in possession of what we consider the very best way to save the life of a chilled, wet chick. There were so many soaked at one time that we simply could not wrap them separately or place them in the oven. A pan of very warm water on the range prompted the man of the house to suggest dipping the chicks as he had dipped small pigs. For lack of anything better, we tried it, dipping the chicks and wrapping up several together in flannel cloths. It worked like magic. The warm water seemed to affect them much quicker than dry clothes or moderate heat would have done. Since then, we've restored young chicks so far gone we doubted they had any life left in them.

ANIMAL PROTEIN FOR FOWLS

Buttermilk Is Considered One of Best Forms—It Should Be Fed in Stoneware Vessels.

Buttermilk is one of the best forms of animal protein to be had and on account of its cheapness in the next few years it will become a very common feed in the poultry yard. You can get it at most local creameries at one cent per gallon. It should be fed in stoneware vessels.



POULTRY FACTS

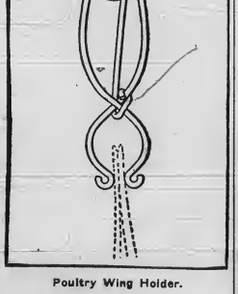
HANDY SELF-FEEDING HOPPER

Small Wooden Box, With Side Taken Out and Put Back Slanting, Will Be Satisfactory.

The simplest feed hopper can be made out of a small wooden box, taking off one side and putting it in slanting, and have the trough arrangement at the bottom similar to the drawing.

Dry mashes will make hens too fat, if they are fed exclusively, but if the rest of the ration, such as wheat and other grain is thrown in the litter or straw, making them work for that part,

Self-Feeding Hopper.



it will not make them overfat. Care must be exercised with the heavy breeds, especially the Orpingtons, in feeding any dry mash, as they are inclined to walk over to the feed hopper, fill up, and then become too lazy to scratch for any other feed. It is a good practice with such a breed to simply let them eat a small quantity, and then fix the hopper, so that they will have to scratch for their feed for the rest of the day. Exercise is one of the main things in egg production, and the entire system of feeding should be directed towards giving them plenty of exercise, and at the same time ensuring a full crop when the bird goes to roost at night time. With the lighter breeds such as Leghorns, there is no trouble, whatever, with the birds becoming too fat, but with the heavier breeds there is a tendency as above mentioned.—Nor'-West Farmer.

HOLDER FOR POULTRY WINGS

Device Restrains the Fowl So That It May Be Suitably Dusted With Insect Powder.

The Scientific American, in describing a poultry wing holder invented by R. Nyce of Lansdale, Pa., says:

This invention provides a device whereby the wings of a fowl may be held back and restrained in such position, so that the fowl may be suitably dusted with a germicide. It provides a device of the type described, in the nature of a spring clip which may be initially engaged upon the fowl's wings when they are folded back, and a locking device for locking the clip member in position.

EGGS SAVED FOR INCUBATOR

Should Be Kept in Cool, Well-Ventilated Place—Aim to Keep Germ in Good Condition.

Eggs saved for incubators, or for hatching in any manner, should be kept in a cool, well-ventilated place, and not too dry, so as to retain the moisture and keep the germ in a good, healthy condition. We keep our eggs in bran, using enough to hold the egg up on the small end, says a writer in an exchange. We do not believe eggs cared for in this manner need any turning before being incubated. Each egg must stand alone, and none should be piled on top. Eggs saved for only two or three days can be kept in a basket or flat box, but it is not well to have too many layers.

Does yours bring joy to the breakfast table?

North — East — South — West — women are solving the coffee problem.

Armies have solved it. "An army travels on its stomach" and of the army breakfast, ask any soldier what he would miss most.

One of the greatest American judges has said that unhappiness in the home commences with the first cup of poor coffee.

There is a coffee which brings a million men to breakfast "in a hurry."

Today you can introduce its rich, full flavor in your home. Serve Arbuckles' for a week and notice how much more his breakfast means to him. Bring joy to your breakfast table.

Today there are whole towns where Arbuckles is practically the only coffee used. In one State alone, in a year, four pounds of Arbuckles' Coffee was used for every man, woman and child in the State—four times as many pounds of coffee as the population of the State!

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXXXII. Established 1875. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1916. $1.50 Per Year. NO. 8

PROTECTING THE BIRDS.

The treaty ratified between the United States and Canada by which 1,022 species of migratory birds will be perpetually protected, will ultimately prove of vast importance to both countries, provided the protection which the treaty contemplates is rigidly extended, says Cincinnati Times Star. The signing and ratification of this treaty will end a long fight in behalf of the feathered tribe which does so much for public welfare. The terms of the treaty provide: First, that no bird important to agriculture, because of its insect-destroying proclivities, shall be shot at any time. Second, that no open season on any species of game bird shall extend for a period exceeding three and a half months. Third, that both countries shall so restrict open seasons on game birds as to prevent their being taken during the breeding season. As an enthusiastic worker for game protection has put it, the new international arrangement means that "every variety among our most interesting and valuable American birds will be protected from the Gulf of Mexico to the North Pole." The signing of the treaty is a triumph for public sentiment, which, under a persistent campaign of education, has been roused to the required pitch of demanding action. The mere ratification of the treaty will not, of course, alone protect the birds. Enforcement of the law backed by public opinion, however, will undoubtedly see to that. In due time the feathered tribe will enjoy an immunity from molestation and a freedom for its beneficent ministrations to mankind that it has not known for a century.

Instead of trying to do all his work by daylight in conformance with the newest continental regulation, the progressive American farmer is beginning to have a large part of it done by night. Dynamos are being utilized on some of the great western farms which supply powerful electric light by means of which plowing, cultivating and harvesting can be done in the cool of the night instead of the heat of the day. The dynamo in use can light a large field. A tractor, for instance, is fitted with two powerful lights, one in the front to show the ground to be gone over and one in the rear that shows the furrows already plowed.

Instead of using nets or the conventional hook and line, the natives of Guiana shoot the fish with bow and arrows, says the Popular Science Monthly. The arrow used is designed especially for this purpose and is about five feet in length, with no feathers. The head, which is barbed, is made from sheet iron and is provided with a socket which is slipped over the end of the shaft by a light, strong line about ten feet long.

The latest indictment against squirrels is that they eat the insulation off electric wires. If that is civilization's charge against the squirrels, those pretty little creatures have a perfectly good defense. What drove them to such unpalatable fare? It wasn't squirrels that destroyed the hazel bushes and cut down the forests.

The industries of the country continue to hammer and hum with life, never stopping to await the stupendous decisions now being made—those of choosing the names for the new autumn and winter dances.

A Chicago woman has invented a dressing table with detachable legs which can be carried like a suitcase. Imagine having to lug the suitcases and also one of those things about for your wife.

FORTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Political suspense terrible.

We hoped that in this number of the Recorder we could with a certainty, proclaim that Samuel J. Tilden will be the next President.

Presidential elections are the best lung expanders.

R. A Brady, of Carroll county, has been visiting his Boone county relatives for a few days.

The apple crop has outgrown the the supply of barrels.

J. F Blyth is decidedly the most successful shot who has been in the field hereabouts this fall.

Bachelordom will know George Hughes no more forever. Frank still holds the fort.

Married on the 12th inst., at the home of the bride, by Rev. Dr Hall, Mr. George G Hughes and Miss Hattie Dempsey, both of Burlington.

Farmers are taking advantage of the fine weather to gather their corn.

Mr. W T Smith figures that one of Woolper's extensive farmers, Hick Bruce, has actually realized $18 per barrel for his corn.

Tilden received 1802 votes and Hayes 410 at the election last Tuesday.

W. F McKim having been deputized for the purpose instituted a Masonic lodge at Petersburg last Monday night.

Reception Tendered Mrs. Riggs.

A reception was tendered in honor of Mrs. D T Riggs of Rising Sun, Indiana, by her nieces of Cincinnati, Ohio. Miss Gladys and Miss Marguerite Riggs. Their home was beautifully decorated in black and yellow and Halloween lanterns. Miss Gladys introduced her aunt to their friends who tried to make the evening an enjoyable one. A Dutch Luncheon was served at 11 o'clock. Some fifty guests enjoyed the evening.

On Monday Mrs. D T Riggs was the guest of Mrs. John Ziegen hardt (Alta Riggs,) and on Tuesday she was the guest of Mrs. C A. Breachuck, Florence Riggs. Mrs. D T Riggs was taken to all the notable places in Cincinnati during her stay.

Come Back to Tobacco.

A Hume man who chewed twenty cents worth of tobacco a week concluded to try a tobacco cure. In two weeks he ate $1.50 worth of the cure, and for the next two weeks ate five cents' worth of gum, five cents' worth of candy, five cents' worth of gumdrops a day. During the two weeks he also consumed two large rubber erasers, ate the rubber tips from fourteen lead pencils, chewed up a dozen pen holders and browsed off his mustache as far as he could reach. He is now chewing tobacco again, in the interest of economy.

Turkey Will Be Dear Eating.

Prospects of a cheap Thanksgiving turkey are becoming more meager day by day. Dealers in foodstuffs do not hold out any hope for a reduction, but say that prices may go higher still. Predictions are that prices will be 25 per cent higher at the end of this month than they were a year ago at the same time, and it is said turkeys, which sold last year at 30 cents, may go as high as 40 cents before the day of their great sacrifice. Ducks are expected to go as high as 30 cents, according to the dealers, and chickens may soar to a new level.

DON'T SHOOT.

The open season for killing game began yesterday. Hunters should exercise care not to kill any of the game birds that were liberated in this county by the State and private parties. Remember it is a heavy fine to kill them. The State Game and Fish Commission has issued the following "Dont's" for the benefit of hunters:

Don't shoot without license.

Don't buy or sell quail.

Don't hunt off your own land without license.

Don't wait until November 15th to buy your hunter's license. Do it now.

Don't kill more than twelve quail in one day.

Don't shoot squirrel after December 15th.

A fellow who hunts without a license is a CHEATER—see that he obeys.

Executive Agent Game and Fish Commission, Frankfort, Ky.

BOTH PARTIES CELEBRATE

But the Republicans Took the Count at Last—Walton Celebrated in Grand Style Saturday Night.

On Tuesday night of last week when the Democrats who were receiving election returns at the court house went home they were feeling like political down and outs, while the Republicans were feeling pretty good I thank you.

It was about two o'clock Wednesday morning when a delegation of Burlington Republicans who went to Cincinnati Tuesday night, returned, paraded the streets blowing horns and shouting "Hughes" at every breath, which increased Democratic alarm, while the lo o Democrats who went to the city slipped in home as quietly as if they had been attending a funeral.

About ten o'clock Wednesday there was a very apparent swing of the country Wilsonward and the Demies began to grow noisy, and shortly after five p. m., the news had become so favorable that a procession was formed and horns, tin pans, horse fiddles and many other instruments of noise were secured and a procession of about 100 large and small, male and female shouting Democrats was parading the streets, making the town a veritable bedlam.

Thursday morning reports were not so favorable for the Democrats and the Republicans began to thaw out and show signs of life, but having been given such a fall the day before they were afraid to become noisy, consequently the town had a quiet period of a few hours, but when night came with the Democrats claiming 272 electoral votes, certain, bedlam broke loose again and continued until the most active in the marching, blowing and shouting, were about exhausted, when it was decided that Burlington had done its share of celebrating and proceedings along that line were suspended.

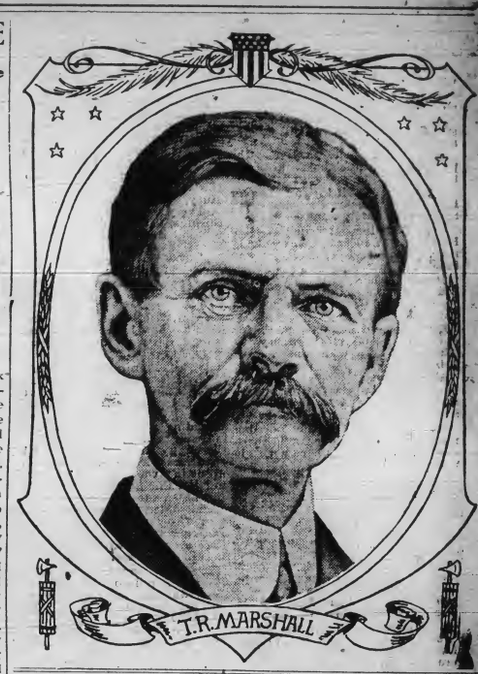
Saturday night several Burlington people went to Walton where the Democrats jollified in great style, a brass band, heading a long procession of marchers while flags were waved, horns were tooted, anvils fired and the Democratic population shouted itself hoarse. Walton never before presented such an animated appearance.

The Same Old Story.

Why is it that with the close of every exciting presidential election a sense of relief is felt thruout the country? Is it because of public disgust over the unfairness with which contending parties deal with candidates and issues?

The election is over. More than fifteen million voters have registered their choice. The decision of the ballot box is always and should always be accepted as final and the candidate chosen acknowledged as the people's choice.

Why is it that partisanship blinds the sense of perspective and leads the gullible public to swallow the crudest concoctions of political rumor-mongers just before election day?



Why is it that sane and sensible men and women permit themselves to be misled by atrocious cartoons and fiery editorials assailing men in public life, and lambasting private citizens as soon as they are nominated for public place, misrepresenting the views of candidates, distorting party platforms, and magnifying minor matters, while glossing over indictments of the most serious nature?

Why is it that political leaders on both sides fail to realize that "honesty is the best policy" in politics as in everything else and that to deceive the voter by unfair statements and unjust accusations is no better than ballot-box stuffing?

And what of the reader who has been misled by the political organ on which he has pinned his faith and perhaps on the judgment of which he has risked his money? What must he think after election of the newspaper that misled him?

And the editors of the purely political organs, how must they feel when they make their apologies to their readers as well as to the candidates for misjudgment of facts, misstatement of figures and misconception of political conditions?

The greatest need of this country is a press with a heart, soul and a conscience, and the need is never more acutely felt than during a presidential campaign.—Leslie's Weekly

What Electors Will Do.

The constitution directs each state to choose a number of "presidential electors equal to the number of its representatives in Congress," both senators and members of the house of representatives.

These electors meet in each state on the second Monday in January, and give their votes in writing for president and vice-president.

The votes are transmitted to Washington, and there opened by the president of the senate in the presence of both houses of Congress.

A majority is necessary to elect. If no person has such a majority, the president is chosen by the house of representatives voting by states, and the vice president is chosen by the senate.

The plan of creating an electoral college to select the president was expected "to secure the choice by the best citizens of each state in a tranquil and deliberate way, of the man whom they, in their unfettered discretion, should deem fittest to be the chief magistrate of the union."

In fact, however, the electors exercise no discretion, and are chosen under a pledge to vote for a particular candidate of their party. Each party, during the summer preceding a presidential election holds a national convention, which nominates candidates for president and vice-president. Candidates for elector are also nominated by party conventions.

The constitution leaves the method of choosing electors to each state, but by custom they are now everywhere elected by popular vote.

A presidential election is virtually an election by states, and the struggle usually concentrates itself in the large states where the great parties are often nearly equally divided. Thus, the party which carries New York, by even a small majority, gains in all the 45 electoral votes of that state.

It sometimes happens that a person is chosen president who has received a minority of the popular vote cast. In 1912 the popular vote for Taft and Roosevelt exceeded that for President Wilson But as the people vote for electors and not directly for presidential candidates, Wilson then won the majority of presidential electors.

COST FIFTY MILLION

Mammoth Sums Required for Getting Out the Vote, Advertising, Rallies, Etc.

The election this fall cost $50,000,000. Such is the consensus of conservative estimates by political leaders.

Only a small part of this expense went toward electing a President and a Vice-President. About 75,000 State, county city and other offices were filled. Two hundred thousand men and women ran for office.

Of the fifty millions, about half was spent by the candidates and their supporters and the other half by the State and municipal governments in preparing for and holding the elections and counting the ballots.

In New York State alone, the cost of registering voters and conducting the elections was about $2,500,000.

The $25,000,000 spent in furthering the campaigns of candidates was divided among postage, telegraph and telephone service, advertising, press agent publicity, speakers' pay and expenses, bands rent of halls, and theaters, clerical help, campaign buttons, badges and banners, rallies and conventions, printing and engraving, and sums—large in the aggregate—given to the hundreds of thousands of minor "workers."

It is estimated that the Republican National Committee spent $2,000,000 and the Democratic National Committee over $1,500,000.

In 1908 the Republican National Committee spent $76,000 in printing, $30,000 for advertising sixty thousand for campaign lithographs and $40,000 for buttons This year these items were much larger. For one reason the cost of almost everything to be bought has doubled or tripled.

EFFICIENCY OF PRAYER

In Election Held by Two Frankfort Woman and Butler Co. Man Firm In Their Convictions.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov 10.—The efficiency of prayer was revealed in at least two instances in connection with the national election. One good Democratic woman in Frankfort said when she heard the news that Hughes was ahead election night, she kneeled down and said: "Lord, I can't do anything; it's up to you to save the nation." About 3 o'clock she awoke, and she said: "I heard a neighbor's rooster crowing and I said to myself, 'my prayer is answered,' and turned over and went back to sleep."

Down in the edge of Butler county, where Attorney General Logan was speaking just before the election, an old man went up to him after the speech and said: "Judge, speakin's all right, and we ought to work for Wilson, but I believe in prayer. Every night I get down on my knees and pray to Gawd to help us beat hell out of 'em."

The Walton Loose Leaf Warehouse is now receiving the finish ing touches and will be ready in every way for business by Dec. 1st. The question now that is receiving consideration is whether the tobacco can be gotten ready by Dec. 9th when the first sale is advertised. The very dry weather that has prevailed for such a long period has deprived the growers of an opportunity to strip the tobacco and even with suitable weather at present it will take some time to get ready to make a sufficient offering on the market. Every day the prospects for the Walton market grows brighter as the growers are enthusiastically in favor of this market because it has such a strong array of buyers from the largest manufacturers in the country, which insures the best of prices, and the buyers are delighted with the excellent facilities afforded for shipping and travel to and from this market, and it is generally believed that Walton will have one of the best loose leaf markets in the State, and that means the assurance of a permanent market with a growing tendency every year. M. C Kirkpatrick, the president, enjoys the reputation of being one of the most experienced tobacco men in the trade, and he has always enjoyed the highest reputation for integrity and fair dealing.

U. S. IN NO DANGER.

There is no danger that the people of the United States will ever fail to be self-supporting in the matter of food products, notwithstanding the dire predictions made now and then.

It is popular, I know, to direct attention every now and then to the tremendous growth of our population and compare it with the increased production of foodstuffs. The fact is however, that the increase in food products has greatly exceeded the increase in our population. Statistics will show that while in the last fifty years our population has increased 200 per cent, the increase in grains has been from 200 to 2,000 per cent. Take wheat, for example; the increase in the production of this staple in 50 years has been 350 per cent. The increase in corn has been 270 per cent, in oats, 370 per cent, and so on up to 3,000 per cent increase in price. It is true that our exports of wheat and other products have greatly increased, but we still have in this country a larger net increase of food products over the increase in population.

In the matter of meats, it is entirely true that the increased production has not been in proportion to the increase in the population, but this has been only within the last few years, and there is every reason to believe that with grain products increasing the time is not very distant when cattle and hogs and other food animals will take a jump in production. In the case of hogs there has already been a marked advance.

There are some things we do not grow in this country, as, for instance, coffee, tea and cocoa principally because we have not the climate. Consequently we must import these articles, but in case of stress we could get along without them, as was the case in the South during the Civil war. —Prof. C A. Jones, of Chicago.

Don't Forget Your Horse.

There is nothing more pitiful to look upon than an animal in distress. How many times in a trip down town can we see a poor shivering horse standing patiently at the curb, waiting for his master to come out. His owner will be inside some store or house sitting beside a good warm fire and complaining about the cold, never giving a thought to his faithful servant outside. Some time a horse is made to stand the greater part of the day out in the bitter cold wind and never a thought given to his comfort, or whether he has been fed or not. And yet a horse is always expected to obey his master and do his best at all times. How long would a person stand such treatment? A horse is one of the best friends that we have and should be treated as such. If our own animals are well treated we should see that other persons' are also. A man who will let his horse stand outside in inclement weather without a blanket is just as much of a criminal as the man who neglects his children.

Almost every town, both big and little, has anumber of these kind of people, who never give a thought to their horses and as long as they are warm and comfortable themselves they are satisfied. Perhaps this is often done from carelessness and not from any desire to be cruel. If they only knew how much longer a horse would last if kept in good condition, they might sit up and take notice. A look around will show this. The best looking and strongest horses are always the ones that are covered when left standing. Take for instance the fire horses in a large city. They lead one of the most strenuous and arduous lives of any horses living, and yet they are always in good condition. Twenty years' service is no uncommon thing for a fire horse and often their time of usefulness to the community lasts much longer than that. It might be a good thing for some of the organizations around the city that are looking into welfare work to give this subject some attention.

Carlisle, Nov. 13.—The hunting season, which opens Wednesday, will find a large number of nimrods in the fields here. The game is reported very plentiful. There are more quail than known in any season in probably a dozen years. The rabbits are also plentiful.

The calendars are divided as to the date of Thanksgiving day. Some have the 23d inst., marked for that event while others have the 30th. The latter date is probably correct as the last Thursday in November is always designated by the President and Governors as the day.

Dr. Crigler, of Ludlow, was a business caller at this office Tuesday. A few evenings ago his run about was struck by an auto that was being run without lights, and the doctor was thrown out of his conveyance and shaken up pretty badly.

Franklin, Nov. 13.—Sales were made on both loose leaf floors today. The farmers' loose leaf floor sold 45,000 pounds of leaf, bring from 8 to $12.75, and lugs bringing from 7.60 to $8.75, making a general average of $9.81

Senator James Proposed For Party Leader.

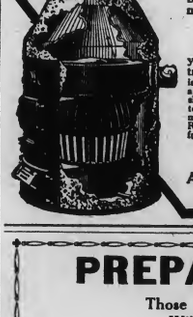
Washington, Nov. 9.—Friends of Ollie M. James at the national capital are paying him the compliment of saying that he is just the man for leader of the U. S Senate to succeed Senator John W. Kern, of Indiana, who was defeated in the election last Tuesday.

The suggestion of Senator James for the place of high party responsibility is likely to take on the character of a widespread movement among his friends, who believe not only has he unusual qualities for the place, but that he is entitled to reward for his herculean efforts for party success in many campaigns. In the campaign just ended he was recognized as the leading figure on the stump for Democrats.

There was a time when the elevation of a senator to leadership during his first term was unthinkable, but old traditions were shattered when Senator Kern was elected leader early in his first term and the election of Senator James to leadership would not be considered out of place on account of his limited senatorial service.

It is pointed out that in floor debate he is aggressive, at times militant, and that he has all the qualifications for a leader, who would put the Democratic party in the center of the senatorial map and keep it there.

Fit Your House With ONE Register



As ONE Sun Heats the Entire Earth—So ONE Register Heats Your Entire House

The Caloric way is Nature's way—most sensible, economical and healthful. No unsightly, expensive pipes and flues to cause fire danger, waste heat and clutter the cellar. The absence of pipes prevents overheating the cellar, hence produce is not spoiled. Its great heat radiation will save you at least 35% of your fuel.

PIPELESS CALORIC FURNACE

The Original Patented Pipeless Furnace

There are three reasons for this big saving. 1st, The warm air reaches your rooms by nature's direct method of circulation and there are no pipes to absorb or resist the heat. 2nd, Our double ribbed firepot and specially patented combustion chamber produce perfect combustion, thus insuring thorough burning of the fuel and a much greater heating surface. 3rd, Our specially patented triple casing, insulated with two air spaces, prevents any heat from radiating into the basement. This is the only successful, patented, one-register furnace and no other furnace can claim these three big features. This means that you get all the heat from your fuel.

Sold Under Guarantee

Put the Caloric Pipeless Furnace in your house and give it a fair trial. Its successful operation is guaranteed and we'll make right any defect in material or workmanship. Tuesday was a good winter day.

Notwithstanding the scarcity of dyestuffs, one sees a red nose here and there.

Flowers that bloom in the spring are not worrying about the shortage of German dyes.

The Sheriff's tax book discloses the fact that Carlton precinct has not a colored taxpayer.

Thieves stole several bushels of potatoes belonging to Wm. McGlasson, of Hebron neighborhood, one night last week.

A large crowd attended the sale of John W. Williams, of Gunpowder, last Saturday afternoon. The house and realestate was purchased by Newton Marksberry for $1,90c.

This is the time to grub and break the old fields for corn and double the crop and have surplus to sell. A months work now will put the farmer well up in the spring, should it be a rainy season and a bad spring for farm work.

A very nice rain fell here last Thursday but it was not as much as is needed, as all the cisterns and water courses were very low, and only a good, soaking rain can replenish them sufficiently for this part of the country to go into the winter with a good supply of water in sight.

The remains of Charles Hensley, who commited suicide in Lawrenceburg, were interred in Petersburg cemetery last Sunday. Mr. Hensley brooded over the death of his wife, which occurred a few months ago, until life became such a burden that he preferred death. He had many relatives in this county

A break in the weather came Monday afternoon and that night an inch or so of snow fell, producing a very wintry appearance for Tuesday morning, being a considerable departure from the class of weather that had prevailed so long that some had about concluded a beautiful and pleasant winter is in store for this part of the country.

Fifty years ago at this time, according to the Rising Sun Recorder, the following prices prevailed:

Hay, per ton $15; flour, 12.50 to $14.50 per barrel; wheat 2 60 to $2.75 per bushel, corn 50 to 60 cents per bushel; potatoes, 40 to 50 cents per bushel, butter, 25 cents per pound; eggs, 20 cents per dozen; beans, $1.50 per bushel

Miss Jonette Revill, who had been teaching in the Boone County High School, resigned last Friday, her health not permitting her to continue the work. Mrs G. W Tolin was selected to fill the vacancy and took up the work Monday morning. Mrs Tolin has had considerable experience as a teacher and gave excellent satisfaction at Petersburg where she taught several terms.

The Patriot, Indiana, basket ball teams played at Burlington, last Friday afternoon, the Patriot boys winning by a score of 41 to 14 while the girls lost to Burlington 8 to 0. The Patriot boys are very much the fastest aggregation that ever appeared on the Burlington court, and show that they have been given excellent coaching. The Burling on team made at least twenty efforts to throw goal none of which were successful. The team was badly off Friday in that particular.

Looking Up Revenue.

The State Revenue Agent had several Boone county property owners before him at the court house the past week, to show cause why they should not be required to pay taxes on certain property he considered delinquent. In many cases the apparent delinquency was explained to the satisfaction of the agent. By the way some accuse County Clerk Rogers with furnishing the information that caused the Revenue Agent to call them before him, but in this they are entirely mistaken as Mr. Rogers has nothing whatever to do with the matter. The agent sent his representative to the county clerk's office where she went through the Deed, Mortgage and Assessors books without any assistance on the part of Mr. Rogers or his deputy, and made up a list of persons and property founded upon her own investigation and reported them to her employe who took action thereon.

Christened Their Baby.

Congressman and Mrs. Arthur B Rouse's baby was christened last Sunday at his home in Burlington in the presence of a large number of Mr. and Mrs Rouse's relatives. Dr W W Evans, of Carlisle, Ky., a prominent Presbyterian minister, officiated at the christening. Dr. Evans was president of Hanover, Ind., College when Mr. Rouse was a student of that institution, and has always been one of the Congressman's staunchest friends and greatest admirers, while Mr. Rouse's love for Dr Evans is that of a son for a father.

It Was a Strange Experience.

We had an odd thing to happen this week. A lady collected $1 00 for charity from us a while back. Friday the party returned the money, saying they did not need it. This was the first time we ever had this to happen. We trust the same party may be selected to collect all charity funds for our city. —Carrollton Democrat.

The Thos. Rice Farm Sold.

The 150 acre farm belonging to the heirs of the late Thomas Rice, in Richwood neighborhood, was sold a few days since to A. T Rankin, of Berry, Harrison county, for $10,500. There are six of Mr. Rice's children living and one dead, who leaves four children.

Meat House Destroyed by Fire

Automobile Accident.

Tuesday an automobile carrying Ohio license crashed into a large telephone pole near the residence of O. O Dixon, on the Lexington pike, and severed the pole in two places. The machine was badly damaged but no one was seriously hurt.

Tobacco News.

In some sections of this State, tobacco is curing up light while in others it is holding its weight but not quite as heavy as was at first thought.

In Simpson county the consensus of opinion is that even higher prices will be received for tobacco than anticipated. The crop is the largest in years.

Warren county has a bumper tobacco crop this year, and every indication points to higher prices. Tobacco men say the prospects this year are better than in a number of seasons past. The acreage was large and the curing season ideal, bringing out the tobacco's texture and body.

Many crops of tobacco are now ready to strip in Clark county, and most of the men who have real early crops have stripping under way. Reports from every quarter of the county indicate quality with hardly enough weight. The later crops will weigh much heavier than the early ones, but the light color will be lacking.

The tobacco in Metcalfe county is being rapidly prepared for the market, much being stripped last season. It is an exceptionally fine quality but will be surprisingly short in weight.

The outlook for tobacco in Fayette county seems very promising. Early cured tobacco is now being stripped. While tobacco was in case stripping was going on and some few bulked down. What has been stripped seems to have good color as well as texture.

During last week a number of samples of this year's tobacco were brought into Richmond from different sections of Madison county, and it is the general belief that the tobacco crop there will be the best in quality that has ever before been raised there, no years excepted. While the leaf does not seem to have the average weight, this loss is going to be made up a good deal by the color and quality and the consensus of opinion is that the crop of this season will make the best average ever before attained. Very little stripping has been done on account of no season.

The Covington Retail Merchants Association has committees at work on the seventh annual Corn Show, which will be given by Ronona Grange of Boone county December 6th and 7th in Seventh Street Market House Covington.

The corn show committee on arrangements, appointed by the retail merchants, is composed of T. J. O'Brien, Nathan Rosenberg, R. J. Dibowski, Henry Janssen, Geo. Goode, and Robert Coppin.

The merchants of Covington are offering the usual long list of prizes. They are for the best corn and also for the best apples and vegetables and in the ladies and girls' departments, for baked goods, quilts etc.

Boys are offered many prizes, including a trip to the state corn show. All entries must be made and ribbons placed on the first day of the show, and must be left on exhibit until the show is over.

The merchants' plan an advertising campaign by bulletin boards on the roads leading to and from Covington.

It appears that less than 25 per cent of the total United States consumption of sugar is produced in continental United States, a little more than 20 per cent comes from noncontiguous territory and more than half is imported from foreign countries, of which 9s per cent comes from Cuba. Prior to the war United States exports of sugar were limited to small quantities of special trade. Since the war England has bought large quantities of sugar in the United States, chiefly re-exports of the Cuban product.

The reelection of Woodrow Wilson to the Presidency demonstrates that the people of this country have grown weary of being dominated politically by the State of New York and Wall Street. They have cast off the yoke and the politics of the country will be bettered thereby. No longer will the great political parties turn to the east for their national candidates, fearing defeat if they select them from any other section.

It may be that one hundred years hence some fellow will find a copy of the Cincinnati Enquirer of November 8th, 1916 and will read the large headlines on the first page, "Hughes Watted into the White House by an Avalanch of Ballots," and he will ask, "When was Hughes President of the U. S?" In my reading of the political history of the United States have never seen any reference to his administration. How is this?

Tennessee with several of the southern states has Kentucky beaten when it comes to cutting the high cost of living. The farmers in these states raise what they consume and almost every neighbor is the possessor of a home canning outfit with which hundreds of cans of corn beans, tomatoes, sweet potatoes and other vegetables are canned and the surplus is sold to the neighbor grocery.

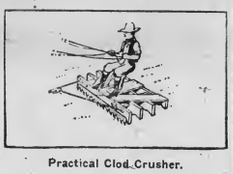
WINTER REPAIR WORK

Plan to Overhaul All Buildings and Farm Equipment.

Exercise of Little Thought at This Season Will Often Save Much Time Later on When Outdoor Work Is Impossible.

So long as good weather continues in the fall most farmers are so busy with threshing, corn and potato harvest, fall seeding, hauling, etc., that less important work is usually postponed until winter. However, the exercise of a little thought and the expenditure of a very few minutes at this season will often save not only hours but days later on, when the weather and roads get bad and outdoor work is impossible.

Then the odd jobs of overhauling the farm equipment, repairing, painting, etc., which have been put off until a slack season, will require attention; but all too often the necessary materials will not be on hand, and the work will be delayed until it is possible to make a trip to town, and not infrequently it remains undone until the busy season the following year, when necessity demands it.



A list should be made of the things that will be wanted for this work. It will only take a few minutes to jot them down as they are brought to mind, and then on the next trip to town they may be bought and set aside so they will be ready when wanted. The condition of the different machines which will, or should be, overhauled, should be noted, and the parts which will need to be replaced purchased. Then there are the odd jobs of repairing buildings, fences, gates, etc., which will require lumber and nails. There is no need to make an extra trip for them when wanted; they may be brought home the next time a load is taken to town. Likewise the lumber and hardware for the small jobs of construction which should be done before spring. Also the paints, oils, putty, and brushes which will be required in painting the various farm wagons, implements, inside woodwork, furniture, etc., and, above all, the necessary materials for the improvements planned for the house should be obtained so that they can be completed this winter and not have to wait another year.

Everyone knows how much more satisfactory it is to have the necessary equipment ready to perform a piece of work when an opportunity presents, than to get started on it and then find that it will have to be postponed until a trip can be made to town, which, even if the roads are good, and the trip can be made at once, means a loss of time and added expense. It is astonishing how much can be accomplished on rainy days or during slack times, when the tools and materials are at hand.

COLONY HOUSES FOR WINTER

Excellent Quarters for Breeding Geese and Turkeys—Chickens Require Much Fresh Air.

Colony houses make excellent winter quarters for breeding geese and turkeys. Sometimes it may be necessary to leave the front more open than for chickens. These birds need a lot of air, and the only shelter they need is enough to protect them from cold rains, snows and brisk winds.

Ducks can be handled successfully in the colony houses. Runners, kept for laying, can be broken up into small flocks and wintered in this way with better results than in large buildings.

TRYING OUT SHEEP BUSINESS

Nothing in Inferior Business to Encourage Farmer in Falling in Love With Industry.

There is no advantage in trying out the sheep business by buying the cheapest and poorest quality of sheep to learn on. This class of sheep has nothing in its favor and the owner has nothing to encourage him in falling in love with the industry; in fact, he could not embark in any live stock industry that would be more trying on his patience, lend more discouragements and have less enthusiasm in it than to become the owner of a lot of poor-quality sheep.

SUPPLY VARIETY IN WINTER

[illegible] Food, Such as Cl[illegible] Fodder, Leaves, [illegible], Are Good.

It is easy in the winter, when the farm is closely confined, that the ration is apt to be deficient in containing a variety of these foods is met. Variety in green food is better than one kind. The term "green food" does not apply to grass or cabbages only, but includes any kind of bulky, succulent food, such as clover, corn fodder, leaves, cabbage, beets, ensilage, potatoes, turnips, carrots, etc. The object is to give bulk in order to dilute (if it can be so expressed) the concentrated grains. These foods are the cheapest that can be used, and lessen the cost of production of eggs, not only by promoting the health of the fowls but also because such foods assist in the digestion of the more costly kinds.

In feeding green food, variety may be attained by giving cabbage one day, beets the next, potatoes the next, and so on. The object should be to lay in a supply of such articles and have them ready for use when winter comes. Grass is the cheapest of all foods for poultry in summer, and the farmer who feeds grain at that season is not only increasing the cost of eggs, but taking the risk of causing indigestion. On a range the birds get seeds, insects and a variety of grasses, including young weeds. Ducks and geese are grass feeders, and can easily secure more than they require, while turkeys and guineas are the best insect destroyers.

PROPER CARE OF FARM TEAM

Grooming Combined With Feeding Will Go Far Toward Putting Horse in Good Condition.

(By DR. H. HAVNER, Pennsylvania Experiment Station.)

The old saying that "grooming is half the feeding," as applied to the farm work horses, still holds true. The sweat glands of the horse eliminate from the body in a 24-hour period, an amount of waste material equal to that excreted from the digestive tract.

Splendid Farm Team.

If those glands become clogged by sweat particles and dirt a very important waste channel is closed.

In addition to keeping the sweat glands open and the body in good working order, grooming improves the quality of the hair and the general condition of the coat. Feeding alone will not put a team in proper shape, but proper grooming combined with feeding will go far toward it.

CORN VALUABLE IN THE SILO

Where Used for Feeding Silo Is Most Economical Place to Store the Entire Plant.

An acre of corn ensiled with ears and stalks will produce as much, if not more, milk or beef than the same acre of corn with the stalks ensiled and the ears fed as ground corn. The extra expense and labor of husking and storing the ear corn is very largely wasted unless the desire is to market the ear corn.

If there is sufficient feed on the farm and the ear corn will cure out properly when snapped off in the manner described, then it might be profitable to follow this practice; but if the corn is not to be sold as ear corn and is to be used for feeding on the farm, then the silo is the most economical place in which to store the entire corn plant.

CLEANING UP FENCE CORNERS

Profitable Job for Some Winter Days —Scatter Rotted Material on the Fields.

Good wages can be made during some of the winter days by cutting the small bushes in the fields and cleaning up fence corners.

The rotted material in the fence corners is rich, and should be scattered on the fields.

Then the cleaning up of these corners and cutting of the bushes makes the place neat and attractive.

MOST IMPLEMENTS RUST OUT

Proper Housing Will Offset Injury to Large Extent—Coating of Oil Is Recommended.

Most farm implements rust out before they wear out. Proper housing will offset rust and corrosion to a large extent, but in damp weather the best method of preventing rust is to coat all unpainted parts of the machinery with a heavy oil, thick enough so it will not run off. This coating keeps air and moisture away and prevents rust from starting.

HARMFUL CHINCH BUG

Evident That Pest Is Threatening Next Year's Crop.

One Plan of Eradication Is to Burn Over Fields, Woods and Other Favorable Winter Quarters—Heat Will Kill Many.

(By L. HASEMAN, Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station.)

Judging from the numerous complaints being received by the Missouri agricultural experiment station, it seems evident that the chinch bug is threatening next year's crops. Over the state generally the chinch bug's day was brought to a close by the heavy rains of 1915, but as usual, there were enough "for seed" this last spring, and with the unusually dry summer just passed these increased abundantly.

They seem to be most abundant in the central part of the state. Throughout most of the corn and wheat belts of the state there are probably enough bugs to cause severe outbreaks next year, if weather conditions should be especially favorable for them. A dry fall, mild winter, with but little snow and rain, followed by a dry spring and summer are the conditions which will favor the pest. The chinch bug is abundant now, due to the favorable summer just passed, but with plenty of rainfall and snow during the fall, winter, and spring, the chances will be decidedly against outbreaks next summer.

Since it is not possible to know what the fall, winter, and spring may have in store in the way of favorable or unfavorable weather, every farmer should do everything possible to reduce the chance of chinch-bug injuries next summer by getting rid of favorable winter quarters. They winter in dry, protected places, such as meadows, pastures, and waste lands, in woods, neglected fence rows, and similar places. Very few winter in corn fields or in wheat fields. After killing frosts have come, select a dry day when there is not too much wind and burn over fields, woods, and other favorable winter quarters. The heat will kill many of the bugs and expose the rest to the winter and to natural enemies. This pest can be fought successfully at only two times during the year, namely: while clustered in winter quarters, and while migrating from wheat to corn in the summer. Now is the time to get ready to fight the pest while in winter quarters and prevent it from proving destructive next year. A recurrence of this pest like the outbreaks of 1912, 1913, and 1914, which damaged Missouri crops at least $5,000,000, should be prevented if possible.

HOLDING WOOD IN SAWBUCK

Spikes are driven through the crosspieces so that their protruding ends will gouge into the stick of wood being sawed. The stirrup is easily thrown back for laying a piece of wood in the crotch.

BEWARE OF THE CROWN-GALL

Considerable Danger in Using Raspberries as Fillers Among Fruit Trees in Orchard.

There has come to be considerable danger in using raspberries as fillers among fruit trees.

The crown-gall disease now frequently attacks the different varieties of raspberries and will be communicated from raspberries to the fruit trees growing in their vicinity.

It is therefore now considered the safer plan to use the blackberries for fillers among fruit trees rather than raspberries.

HOME MEN FOR HOME POSITIONS.

No other proverb of man' eoinage is so true as the old saying that "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country." But for the life of us we can see no earthly reason why no should be without honor in his own country. Yet, sad to state, that seems to be almost invariably the case.

We have puzzled much over this peculiarity of mankind. Why can not a young man succeed in life just as well at home as away from home? It is really a fact that he cannot, and has this basic fact of human nature given rise to the proverb? Or has the endless repetition of the proverb worked to create the condition? We believe the latter supposition to be correct. We can see no good reason why, all things else being equal, a young man should not succeed just as well at home as abroad.

And this suggests another phase of the question. Why is is that many communities have gotten into the habit of seeking applicants for responsible positions among the citizens of other communities? Go where you will, you will find the greater number of responsible positions in any community filled by people from a distance. Rarely is a home man found in such a position.

Our young men and young women grow up, study and secure good educations, only to scatter out in the world in search of good positions; while the good positions in their home town are turned over to strangers. Go into almost any town, and you will find the same conditions prevailing there—home boys leaving home in search of employment, while their fathers importing their assistants from a distance.

Now we submit that this condition of things is all wrong. People argue themselves into the belief that a young man can not succeed where he is known of everybody and where he knows everybody else, and so a stranger fills the place that should be his, while he roams the world in search of a position in lieu of the one that by rights he should fill.

"Home men for home positions" is the just and sensible view to take. In the first place, the home man is well known, and we run no such risk of picking an incompetent or untrustworthy man in selecting him as when we employ a stranger.

If we are loyal to our own community we must stick to our home people. We must see to it that no stranger fills a position which a home man is capable of filling and will accept. This is not only the sane and sensible rule to adopt, but it is only justice. No man should be forced to seek employment from strangers while there are positions to be filled among his home people for which he is fully qualified.

Keeping Good Roads Good.

Keeping good roads good in the most important task in connection with an improved highway system, once the construction work is completed. In the United States in the past this task usually has been neglected, the improved roads in many instance being allowed to deteriorate until they became almost impassable, when they were at heavy cost, rebuilt. That States and counties are now coming to recognize the need of careful and thorough ong maintenance, however is indicated by studies of county road systems in different sections of the country, recently made by the Office of Public Roads and Rural Engineering of the Department.

While some of the eighty counties in which intensive studies were made were found to have no provisions for maintenance and others were found to pay for upkeep of the roads out of bond issue funds thus creating a glob that would outlive the temporary improvement by many years. Two counties in widely separated States were found in which maintenance conditions were practically all that could be desired, in Mississippi it was found, there is a State law requiring that a special annual tax of at least 1 mil shall be levied for the upkeep of all roads constructed by means of bond issues, the fund to be kept separate from all other funds and to be used for maintenance only. Instead of the roads of some of the counties in other States on which examinations were made, it was found that in Lauderdale County, Miss., roads built several years ago and maintained from the special fund have actually improved since their completion.

The county roads of Franklin County, N. Y., it was found are maintained with a contribution of 50 per cent by the State and under direct State supervision. As a result of this system the roads have been kept up to their condition of completion. Where provisions for maintenance were on the whole not satisfactory in the counties of the other States in which studies were made, this condition since has been remedied in Virginia by the passage of a State law providing that an annual tax of not less than 3 percent of the amount of bonds issued shall be levied to provide a maintenance found for bond-built roads.

The existence of a regulation tending to lessen damage to roads and so to reduce maintenance costs was revealed by the studies in Spotsylvania County, Va., where the county supervisors had passed an ordinance placing a relatively low limit on roads that may be haulgi in wagon tires with narrow tires and a considerably higher limit on loads for wide-tired wagons. As a result, most of the wagons using the roads of the county have been fitted with tires ranging from 3 to 6 inches wid.—Weekly News-Letter.

Catalogue Houses Will Have Stiff Competition.

If the plans of the Retailers' Factory Catalogue Co. of Chicago, Ill., does not fall short of its mark it will puncture a large hole in the mail order business of the country. This corporation acts as a clearing house for over 700 concerns, manufacturing complete lines of farm tools, heavy hardware, furniture, and in fact every thing used on the farm. The goods produced are the first quality, guaranteed satisfactory in every case, and in every instance, the prices are as low, if not lower, than those quoted by any of the large mail order houses.

The Fischer Bros., Co, Newport and Covington, Ky., have been appointed by the clearing house as their representative at Newport and Covington, and will in the next week send out catalogues. The prices in their catalogues will "meet and beat" every price made by the large mail order houses, with this advantage: If the goods are not as represented and are not satisfactory in every respect, they can be returned and all moneys paid, plus any transportation charges, will be returned to the purchaser. This new co-operative plan on the part of the large manufacturers who make standard merchandise promises to draw the trade away from the catalogue houses.

When it is known that practically $600,000 was sent from Kenton, Campbell and Boone counties to the large catalogue houses in 1915, it is time something is done.

It is apparent that by our local people sending their money away to the large mail order houses it effects an injury to the local community by taking money from it, yet knowing that those patronizing the mail order houses do so in good faith as a result of their belief that they are enjoying an appreciable saving, it is the intention of The Fischer Bros., Co to ELIMINATE these former practices by placing in the hands of their customers a very high class comprehensive catalogue which affords the same convenience of buying as afforded by other catalogues and it is believed that the people of Covington, Newport and Kenton, Campbell and Boone counties will see the advantage of making their purchases at home, thus enjoying better service and buying their goods at a saving under the same guarantee as given by others, as well as to trade with someone they know personally and in whom we believe they are interested."—Advertisement.

Higher Prices for Land.

With the rise in prices of farm products there surely will follow a rise in values of farm lands, and that rise in values will be expressed through an advance in the prices of such lands.

There may be extreme prices upon many classes of farm products prevalent in the markets at the present time but conditions in this country and in foreign countries all make for a long period of prices for such products far higher than those prevailing but twelve months ago.

There is no depression in sight for our industrial districts, we are pleased to say, and active work there brings good times and an enormous demand from populations of industrial districts and of urban districts for the commodities that are produced by the agriculturists of the nation.

Every person that is able to work and desires to work can today secure employment in the U. S. This is true of both unskilled and skilled labor to a degree never before known in our history, and it is true in agricultural districts, mining districts, manufacturing districts, commercial districts and in all other districts that are classified in the business transactions of the United States.

Never before were there so many people in our own country dependent upon the products of the farms; never so many endowed with such great purchasing power; never so many ready and willing to use that purchasing power to so great an extent as now.

Our own people have within the last two years more than doubled this purchasing power, and their consumption of farm products has vastly increased, and will not be curtailed to any great extent so long as good times prevail and the increased purchasing power continues.

Foreign countries are absolutely bare of many of the most important products of the farms of the United States, and their populations are in urgent need of them and will be for many years to come.

These home conditions and these foreign conditions combine to keep up the high prices for the products of the farms, and will inevitably cause an advance in the prices of agricultural lands. All foreign writers predict an exodus from Europe to this country when the war closes. Many of those who leave that continent will seek lands here to cultivate, and that will serve to advance prices, and those immigrants who seek the cities, the shops and the factories, the mines, the coke fields and the public works will all be additional consumers and thus add to the calls for the products of the acres tilled by the farmers.

Real estate of all classes is due for a large advance in price, but the agricultural lands have a certainty of immediate advance and an advance that is already justified by the existing facts, and that make of these lands a sound investment.—Enquirer

EVEN PERIODS FOR MILKING

Cows Thus Milked Gave More Milk in Evening Than in Morning—Effect of Phosphates.

An English experiment station has definitely determined that the total quantity of milk is not influenced by equal or unequal periods of milking, but that the fat percentage is materially altered by the length of time between morning and evening milkings. Cows milked at even periods gave more milk in the evening than in the morning. The evening's milk was slightly the poorer in quality.

In an experiment to determine the effected of feeding phosphates directly to cows, precipitated bone phosphate was fed at the rate of one ounce per day. No appreciable effect was obtained either on the quantity or quality of the milk produced. Apparently this material had no effect on the stimulation of the nervous system; if anything, it had a depressing effect. The weight of cows receiving the precipitated bone ash showed a slight increase.

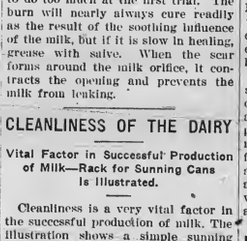
Experiments showed no advantage in milking three times a day was compared with twice a day.

Cows fed palm-nut cake did not increase in weight as did those fed cotton cake, but they showed a looser skin with a glossier look. The palm-nut cake gave a higher percentage of fat in the milk.

TREATMENT FOR LEAKY TEAT

Forty-Penny Spike, Rounded Off to Point and Applied While Hot Will Prove Effective.

Many good cows are butchered because they milk so easily that the pressure in the udder during a big milk flow causes the teats to leak.



Leaking teats can usually be identified by the concave depression at the milk opening. Hard milkers have a convex surface around the orifice. To stop a cow's teat from leaking, the best method I have found is to file a 40-penny spike, round off the point, heat the end hot enough to sear, and press it gently into the milk orifice, says a writer.

Hold in place till the cow informs you that you have done enough. It is better to repeat the operation than to do too much at the first trial. The burn will nearly always cure readily as the result of the soothing influence of the milk, but if it is slow in healing, grease with salve. When the scar forms around the milk orifice, it contracts the opening and prevents the milk from leaking.

CLEANLINESS OF THE DAIRY

Vital Factor in Successful Production of Milk—Rack for Sunning Cans Is Illustrated.

Cleanliness is a very vital factor in the successful production of milk. The illustration shows a simple sunning rack for milk cans and utensils. Any farmer can quickly construct this rack. All you need is a few 2-by-4s and 1-by-4s. The framework is of 2-by-4s and the braces are 1-by-4s. The cut shows an end view and the length will depend on the number of cans and utensils to be sunned. The rack should be adjustable to the direct rays of the sun. This is accomplished by the use of an iron bolt in securing the horizontal pieces at their intersection, with the upright 2-by-4s forming the pedestal. For clean milk cans, wash first in cold water, then steam (or scald, if steam is not available), then use the sun rack.

THOROUGH COOLING OF MILK

One of Most Important Steps in Its Care—Strain Immediately and Place in Cold Room.

Prompt and thorough cooling is one of the important steps in the care of milk.

Milk should never be left in the milking pail for several minutes in a warm place. It should be strained at once and put in the coolest place possible.

LIVE STOCK

HOG IS PROFITABLE ANIMAL

Disadvantages of Low Market Prices May Be Overcome by Timely Breeding and Care.

The hog should be a profitable animal. He requires less labor, less equipment, less capital, makes greater gains on 100 pounds of concentrates, reproduces himself faster and in greater numbers, and returns the money faster than any other farm animal. The fact, remains, however, that prices paid for hogs during recent months have been low and discouraging. In spite of these prices the animal that possesses the above advantages can still lift mortgages for his owner if the latter will study and apply some of the fundamental principles underlying the business.

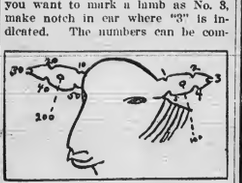
On the average farm there should be radical improvement in breeding and the care of details during farrowing, weaning, etc. There are many complaints throughout the country either of small litters or else a great mortality in pigs. By keeping the production records of sows and selecting from those that produce and raise large average litters a breeder can raise to its most efficient point the size of his litters. This probably runs between seven and eight to the litter. The hog raiser can prevent losses, other than those caused by disease, by providing proper shelter for the sow at farrowing time. The raiser should always cultivate the confidence of his animals by quiet and humane handling; this care and attention in times of necessity will pay big returns.

SHEEP KILLED BY MAGGOTS

Parasites Develop in Clotted Filth in Wool and Work Well Over the Hind Quarters.



Much injury from maggots on sheep is reported this season. In ordinary years these maggots bother only the lambs, especially following docking and castration, when sores are exposed. The maggots develop in the clotted filth in the wool and work well over the hind quarters if not checked. If undisturbed they become so bad that serious injury and death frequently result. Under favorable conditions the maggots develop in 24 hours.

Each sheep should be carefully examined, and enough lysol or some other dip of practically full strength at the first application should be poured on the maggots. Apply as many times as is necessary to be effective. Then examine frequently, and when the maggots are all killed apply a healing salve so that the skin will keep soft and the wool will grow again.

bined, as for instance in marking No. 9 where "5" and "4" are marked on the left ear, as shown in the diagram. Supposing the lamb is No. 22, then the right ear is notched at "20" and the left ear at "2."

PROPER CARE OF BROOD SOW

Start Feeding Little Grain About Month Before Breeding Time—Give Oats and Alfalfa.

About a month before breeding time brood sows that have been living on pasture since their pigs were weaned may be started on a little grain.

Oats and finely cut alfalfa fed twice a day in amounts which the sow will readily clean up will put them in good condition for breeding.

Larger and more vigorous litters will be obtained if the sow is in a vigorous condition when bred. She should be gaining in flesh at the time, not fat, but just starting to get fat.

Shoes $20 In Russia.

Twenty dollars for a pair of shoes, 50 cents for a cigar of the lowest grade—these are samples of the advance in prices in Russia since the war began, according to J. E. Steurwald, who has just returned from that country.

"Of course, all the larger Russian cities are under military restrictions concerning the supply of food," said Mr. Steurwald "In Petrograd, at the present time there is restriction on meat as well as on many other articles of food. One is allowed to have meat three days a week—Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. It is impossible to buy meat on other days, and it is then sold only in quantities of so much for each individual in the family.

"Everything has advanced from 200 per cent to 600 per cent in price since the war began. Not only does this apply to foodstuffs but it also affects clothing, tobacco and many other things. For instance, you pay 40 rubles about $20 for a pair of shoes, and they are very poor ones, even at that price. Cigars cost from one ruble up; pipe tobacco is very high, a ten-cent can of smoking tobacco costing at the very minimum 2 rubles and 70 kopecks, about $1.40 The reason for all of these high prices reverts back directly to the matter of transportation, as Russia has plenty of food and grain, but no way of transporting it.

"There is one thing which impresses every American traveler in Russia most forcibly. That is the great respect which the Russians have for American bank notes. The official exchange for the American dollar, as controlled by the Russian Minister of Finance, is at the rate of 3.13, or in other words, 3 rubles and 13 kopecks for $1. Our country's bank notes are preferable to the Russians, inasmuch as they are not allowed to take any gold out of the country."—N. Y. Times.

The Independent Voter And His Work.

The voting of Tuesday marks a great transformation in the political conditions throughout the country.

Party lines were broken in millions of instances by the voters and the South alone of all the sections seems under the sway of party spirit.

New England, from Maine to Connecticut, exhibits the crumbling of Republicanism, as do all the states west of the Mississippi River.

New York City, the Gibraltar of the Democratic party in the East, cuts its former great majorities down almost to one-third.

Ohio stands out before the nation, redeemed from Republicanism in a national contest in a straight-out struggle, and the result cannot fail to have most pronounced influence upon the political future of the state.

Indiana, though maintaining its reputation as a close state in political contests was the scene of as numerous instances of cutting away from the directing influence of former party association as almost any other state in the Union and no state has greater claims than it has to a free and independent electorate.

The prediction of the great masses of the Republican party for the protective policy has kept Pennsylvania well up to its party record, although many thousands of former Republicans in that state undoubtedly supported Mr. Wilson Tuesday in preference to the protective champion, Mr. Hughes.

The trend of sentiment in both parties has, for the past two years, been toward protection of our industries, and the enactment of the Tariff Commission law by the Democratic Administration served to render it easier for friends of a reasonable tariff to vote the Democratic ticket throughout the states of the Union.

The feature of the campaign is the extension of Democratic sentiment, influence and power thru the states beyond the Mississippi River, the capture of Ohio and the grinding away through constant attrition of Republican supremacy in New England.

The old lines of battle have been greatly changed by the results of Tuesday, and the contest of 1920 will be fought under conditions far different from those of the past half century.—Enquirer.

Carloads of Autos.

Freight carload shipments of automobiles during October made a new high record for that month, according to reports made to the meeting of the Board of Directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in this city yesterday. The number of carloads for October of this year was 19,510, the best previous October was last year, when 17,181 carloads were sent out.

Figures just issued by the Department of Commerce show that 80,658 motor vehicles valued at $100,258,230 were shipped from the United States during the twelve months ended June 30, 1916. This represented one-fifteenth of all the motor vehicles produced in this country in the last fiscal year and one-tenth of their gross value. Great Britain was the best customer, buying 43 per cent of the total. France came next with 20 per cent.—New York Times

The United States Senate will remain Democratic by a reduced majority, but the Republicans have captured the House of Representatives by a small majority, which is a very striking illustration of the inconsistency of politics—elect a President because his policy in the past is approved but at the same election tie his hands so that after the fourth of next March he can do nothing.

Raising Dairy Cattle.

Many of the most thoughtful breeders are asking agricultural experiment stations if it is possible to follow any method of feeding and management of dairy heifers that will make it more certain that the heifers will be good producers. It is another application of the question as to the relative importance of heredity and environment. Does a good dairy cow or an inferior one derive her special dairy characteristics by inheritance, or is it a result of her treatment from birth to maturity? Is a good dairy cow born that way or made what she is by her owner?

It is a well-known fact that there is considerable difference in practice among cattlemen in regard to the feeding and handling of dairy heifers. We find radically different views on some points. Some hold that a cow should be fresh at a very early age to insure the best development of the milking functions. Others take a directly opposite view and prefer a cow to be quite well-matured and state that only in such animals are the milk-producing functions the most highly developed. Some who raise dairy cattle feed their calves only bulky feed and in rather scant quantities. Others feed largely with grain and grow them as rapidly as possible. Some hold that it a heifer of a dairy breed is allowed to get fat when young she develops a tendency to use her food for body fat all her life rather than to produce milk. Others hold that the dairy qualities of a cow are not influenced in any way by the method of feeding when young and that no harm comes from a heifer being fat. Some desire to develop the largest animals possible for the breed. Others prefer cows medium-sized or small for the breed.

There must be some general law or laws in regard to these points that can be found by experimental work. Apparently there are a number of questions along this line which cannot be answered definitely as a result of common observations or there would not be this wide difference of opinion. Having these facts in mind, the Missouri agricultural experiment station in 1906 undertook an investigation for the purpose of determining, if possible, some of the principles upon which practical methods of raising dairy cows should be based. It was thought that by raising dairy heifers in the University of Missouri herd under different conditions and keeping full records from birth until the cow had been in milk two years it would be possible to come to some more definite conclusion regarding the possible influence of the treatment when young upon the future usefulness of the animal for dairy purposes.

The general conclusion from the work of the Missouri agricultural experiment station investigations is that "it is possible to influence the rate of growth, size when mature and type to some extent, by the liberality of the ration during the growing period, and the age at first calving. Within limits of variation, even far beyond the normal, the character of the ration with reference to amount of nutrients supplied does not exert any appreciable effect upon the milking functions of the cow when mature."

Rural Prosperity.

The report from Versailles telling of the sale of a farm seven miles from town for $170 an acre indicates the stiffness of farm land value in Central Kentucky. In other sections the gradual, but continuous advance of land values during the last decade has been as marked as it has in the Bluegrass.

Farm land in Kentucky hardly can be said to fluctuate. It is dormant in the market during periods of business depression, but little of it changes hands at figures lower than the same land would have commanded when business was active. And when business activity begins again farm land prices advance.

It has not been long since $100 an acre was considered about the top for farms bought by practical farmers, and to be used as money making enterprises. Nowadays there is no rule of the kind and $170 for a Woodford county farm seven miles from the county seat excites no great amount of interest. Nor would a sale at $200 an acre.

The year 1916, has been a good year for Kentucky farmers. It has been a good one for business. The demand for farming properties reflects the circulation of money due to business activity. The demand for good places reflects the prosperity and independence of landholders. The farmers are getting such prices for their products, in the sack and on the hoof, that they are punished less than city folk by the increased cost of the necessities that are not produced on the farm. And many of the necessities that are at prices vexing the city house keepers are produced at reasonable cost on the farm.

It has long been contended in Kentucky that anyone who is intelligent and industrious and sticks to legitimate farming, without speculating in town or making speculative investments in fancy stock of unstable value, will make a living. That never was nearer the truth than it is today. Farmers are not shoving their land on the market to get rid of it.—Courier-Journal.

The teachers meeting of Constance and Florence precincts will be held at Florence, beginning at 1 p. m. on the 24th inst., at which time the school in these precincts will spell for the District Banner. Each teacher is requested to have three spellers in the contest.

PREVENT RUPTURE IN COLTS

Best Time for Treatment Is When Animals Are Young—Directions Given by an Expert.

(By W. P. SHULER, Department of Veterinary Medicine, Oklahoma A. and M. College, Stillwater.)

The time to treat colts for rupture in the region of the navel is when they are young and before the ruptured structures have become large enough to permit the passage out of the abdominal cavity of any portion of the intestines. It should be done at the time of birth or soon after the navel begins to close up. This should take place naturally and completely, and the wall of the abdomen closed together firmly. However, this does not always happen, and hence we have a little pouchlike enlargement forming that has a direct connection with the abdominal cavity. This may close up of its own accord, and then again it may become larger until finally structures like a loop of intestines will be able to work their way into it.

You will find the following to be all that is probably necessary: Clip off the hair around the enlargement and back two inches from the base; grease the skin thoroughly around the edge of the slipped area; take a glass rod and some concentrated nitric acid and, dipping the glass rod into the acid, draw three or four lines across this enlargement. It may be necessary to repeat this treatment once or twice more.

The acid will cauterize it and cause sear tissues to form, which will ultimately fill up the opening in the abdominal cavity and the rupture will be obliterated.

GUESSING AT COLT'S COLOR

No One Can Make Safe Prediction Except in Suffolk Breed—Colors Come in Series.

If one knows the ancestry and breeding performance of both the mare and horse, a fairly safe prediction can be made as to the color of your colt, says Dr. O. Lloyd-Jones of the animal husbandry department of Iowa State college. No one can be sure in most cases, however.

Colors in horses come in series, and with parents in any series, of one below the other in the series, colors may be expected from any one of the series from the highest down. Chestnut is the simplest color and the lowest in the series. Hence it is the only one that can be absolutely predicted. As far as known, there is no case on record where a chestnut horse and chestnut mare have not brought a colt of the same color. The Suffolk is the only breed that is absolutely true to color.

Black is the next in series, followed in order by bay, gray and roan. Gray parents may have a colt that is gray, bay, black or chestnut. A gray mare and black horse might have a colt gray, bay, black or chestnut, but never a roan.

PASTURE IS VALUABLE ASSET

In Pasturing Alfalfa Care Must Be Taken That It Is Not Cut Too Heavily—Best for Hogs.

For "growing out" little pigs and carrying over dry sows, a good pasture is a valuable asset. Alfalfa makes the best pasture for hogs. In pasturing alfalfa, care should be taken that it is not pastured too heavily. If this is done, the alfalfa will be badly killed out in two or three years, and it will be necessary to reseed.

Pasturing should never be carried on so heavily but that one-half ton of hay per acre can be cut three times a season. The occasional cutting of the alfalfa induces new shoots to grow, and hence greatly improves the pasture for the pigs.

IMPROPER FEEDING OF CALF

Indigestion Is Most Common Affliction Attacking Growing Animal—Causes of Condition.

The most common affliction which may attack the growing calf is indigestion. The causes of this condition are numerous; the most important ones are overfeeding, feeding of cold or sour milk, feeding dirty milk, feeding milk that is high in fat, improper housing and frequent or sudden changes in temperature. Frequent attacks of indigestion are an indication of improper feeding practice.

MEANS OF FIGHTING BORERS

Dig Away Soil Around Base of Tree and Destroy Larva—Mounding Is Also Recommended.

(From the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station.)

The methods of fighting both Round and Flat-Headed Borers are much the same. The most important means of combating the borer is by going through the orchard in late August or early October and digging away the soil around the base of the tree and finding the larva burrows and pushing a sharpened wire in them until the larva is reached and killed. If the worm does not make paths straight enough that the wire can be pushed in, it will be necessary to cut part way in with a knife.

Two or three methods are available for making the control of borers more easy. In case of older trees, probably the most important method is by mounding, that is, heaping up a little mound of earth around the base of the tree. This forces the insect to deposit its egg higher on the tree, so that the worm will be located higher. It is much easier to level this mound of earth down around the tree to find the borer than to have to dig away the soil when it is left level. However, mounding may not be practicable in very stony land. In case of younger trees, the best method is to wrap them with a wood veneer wrapper, and mound a very small amount of earth around these wrappers. This makes it very difficult for the parent of the borer to get its eggs deposited in the trunk of the tree.

PRUNING TIME IN ORCHARDS

Work Should Be Done Before Buds Begin to Swell—Make Cuts Close, Leaving No Stubs.

(By W. G. BRIERLY.)

The orchard trees should be pruned before the buds begin to swell. Trees can be put into fairly good shape by careful work, but this must not be done all at once if it means the removal of a considerable quantity of wood. If properly done there will be no evil results and the work of spraying, thinning, and harvesting will be made easier.

Make all cuts close up so that no stubs are left to die and start decay in the heart of the tree. After the wound is made, if it is more than three-quarters of an inch across be sure to give it a good coat of paint, or of melted grafting wax.

Cut all dead or injured wood for a start and then remove some of the tangled crossing branches in the center. This will open up the center and give fruit of better color on the shady side of the tree. Some heading-back may be needed, but it will be best to leave that for another year if much wood has been removed. Following this plan will give moderate pruning, which will give best results.

FALL SPRAYING IS FAVORED

After Leaves Have Fallen Application of Fungicide Will Destroy Many Fungus Spores.

Too much emphasis cannot be laid on the importance of thorough fall spraying. After the trees have dropped their foliage, the trees drenched in a strong fungicide will destroy thousands of fungus spores which otherwise would find a resting place during winter and work serious damage to the tree or fruit the following year. And then there are the scale insects which incidentally may be killed while giving this dormant application for fungus spores. Fall spraying will certainly go far toward minimizing the troubles of the fruit grower the coming year.

OUTLAY FOR SMALL ORCHARD

Twenty Trees, Well Chosen and Cared for, Is Good Investment—Unkempt Patch a Nuisance.

A small orchard of 20 trees on every farm, well-chosen and well-cared for, is the best investment of its kind, unless it be the outlay for the strawberry bed and the small bush fruits. The big, unkempt farm orchard is a nuisance.

WHAT GYPSY MOTH LIVES ON

Caterpillars Must Have Some Deciduous Foliage for Food—They Are Partial to Fruit Trees.

(By W. E. BRITTON, State Entomologist, Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station.)

The damage caused by the gypsy moth consists in stripping trees, shrubs and other plants of their leaves by the caterpillars. Formerly it was supposed that the caterpillars would attack almost any kind of foliage, ash being, perhaps, the most nearly immune of any of our broad-leaved deciduous trees. But more recent investigations at the parasite laboratory, Melrose Highlands, Mass., conducted under the direction of Mr. A. F. Burgess, show that the caterpillars in their first and second stages are not able to live on some of these plants even though they may feed on them in later stages of development. For instance, though the caterpillars in their later stages will feed upon pine, and have killed large areas of pine mixed with hard wood in Massachusetts, they must have some deciduous foliage for food in their first and second larval stages. Considering the matter from this standpoint it seems quite possible to cut out all other growth, leaving solid stands of pine or other conifers which, with only slight protection, may escape destruction. By the use of tanglefoot on the trunks of the trees around the margins of such an area, little damage will result.

In slight infestations the insects are nearly always found on old apple trees. They are partial to fruit trees, willow, oak, poplar and rose, but when the caterpillars are abundant, food becomes increasingly scarce and they will feed upon a great many different trees and plants.

OVERCOME PEACH-LEAF CURL

Scourge Checked by Application of Lime—Sulphur, Preferable in November or December.

That scourge of peach culture, peach-leaf curl, has been overcome by lime-sulphur solution applied when the trees are dormant, preferably in November or December. Experiments carried on by the Cornell experiment station have proved that applications of lime-sulphur solution used for control of San Jose scale and other scale insects will also prevent the development of the peach-leaf curl. Where no scale exists, a weaker application of the lime-sulphur solution will answer the purpose.

The usual strength for the San Jose scale is one part of the concentrated lime-sulphur solution to eight parts of water, and when used for the control of peach-leaf curl a proportion of one part to fifteen of water will be found sufficiently strong.

SPRAY FOR SAN JOSE SCALE

Apply Lime-Sulphur Solution in November—Get Busy Now on Next Season's Fruit Crop.

When an orchard is badly infected with San Jose scale it will be necessary to spray it during November with the concentrated lime-sulphur solution. Look up the methods of making the spray materials and all such things. If you cannot find the formula, etc., drop a postal to your state experiment station.

The time to start making the next crop of fruit is right now. Don't put things off; it will be too late in the spring, and when the proper time for a particular orchard practice is past the opportunity is lost. Get busy now on next year's fruit crop.

NEW PLANTS OF BLACKBERRY

Obtained by Digging Larger, Vigorous Roots and Cutting in Pieces Four Inches Long.

New plants of the red raspberry and blackberry are obtained by digging the larger, vigorous roots and cutting in pieces about four inches long, and sowing in drills in the fall or early spring. Keep well hoed and they are ready to set the following year. Suckers or sprouts, coming up between the rows, are fairly good if carefully dug and a portion of the cross root secured with them. Many plants are spoiled in digging.

SELF-DENIAL.

As times move on the virtue of self-denial is more and more needed. The social fascinations, the alluring fashions, the varied amusements, the fun and fiction in reading, the gadd'ng mania, the every-day gossip and all the glitter and hum of this materialistic age strongly demand the exercise of the virtue of self-denial, says Ohio State Journal. In fact, there is no safety in any other way. Anyone who lets himself go loose among the blandishments of the day runs straight into the face of ruin. What is making these wayward influences so powerful is the fact that society, education, religion, business are giving them so much latitude. About the only line of restraint these days is the criminal line. About everything else goes up to that before it stops. The only safeguard now is an intelligent self-denial, which is one of the very highest of civic virtues. It is the very basis of citizenship, the main ingredient of personal character. The times have so changed in the past 50 years that individuality has to assert itself and maintain its manhood and womanhood against the contaminating influences that crowd about it on every side. It is a risky thing to live these days, unless one has control of himself, and that control is under the sway of the spirit.

A Massachusetts jurist, who really deserves that title, has decreed that a pedestrian's clothes, as well as his person, are valuable and must be reckoned with by motorists who insist on speeding over muddy roads, says Christian Science Monitor. That is to say, damages may be collected in his court for raiment that has been bespattered. The decree says that mud "is a circumstance to be considered as well as other traffic conditions," and mud-slinging is unlawful. Would that bitter political partisans could be interdicted in a similar way. Mud is apt to soil both the target and the thrower.

The bureau of fisheries' steamer Fish Hawk recently made a trip down Chesapeake bay to ascertain the source of a supply of a form of hybrid growths which promise to prove valuable. It had been ascertained before that the bay contained large quantities of this growth, which can be used in making artificial flowers. The manufacturers claim it will have a commercial value of $250 per ton. Fishing for this sea moss is a new industry which promises to be less hazardous and more remunerative than catching fish.

Of course it was only humorously that a French general pretended to defend the edict against beards in the army by saying that the object was to relieve the troops from carrying unnecessary weight and that the beards which will be taken off under the order weigh 120 tons. If soldiers must be shaved they must carry razors, and what soldier ever saw a razor that weighed less than his beard?

"If the old letters tied with ribbons were brought from their hiding places in the homes and sold they would bring thousands of dollars," says a lecturer on domestic economy. But what if those who wrote them haven't paid all the installments on their automobiles?

Esq. Benj. Allphin, of Big Bone, is "next" the luckiest man we know of, or, at least is generally on the winning side. His last adventure of which we have any knowledge was with a Patriot dry goods merchant. Just previous to the October election he and his wife were in Patriot trading, when a merchant proposed to sell him goods he to pay double price for them if Harrison was elected Governor of Indiana and if Blue Jeans was elected he was to have them for nothing. Mr. Allphin accepted the proposition and commenced selecting clothing, light material for warm weather, heavy goods for cool weather and goods to suit all degrees of temperature. He took all he could carry, all his wife could carry, and all two hired hands could carry to the river, and went home to await the political dope from Hoosier, which gave Allphin the goods without cost.

At the End of the Good Road.

To see what really happens at the end of the good road, a public road specialist of the department recently had observations made in different sections of the country. The observers noted many country bound teamsters who drove two loaded wagons, hitched one behind the other, to the end of the good road, and then found it necessary to leave one wagon by the roadside to be returned for later, while all the power of their teams was devoted to hauling a single wagon over the unimproved road.

Farmers bound for the market frequently were seen to haul wood and similar products to the beginning of the good road, there dumping them, and returning for a second load. When this arrived, the two loads were consolidated and easily hauled by a single team the remaining distance to market over the improved highway.

In one section of the country where oxen are still used teamsters were observed to bring their loads over the dirt roads with two or three yokes of oxen. When the beginning of the good roads was reached, the teamsters would unhitch the extra animals and finish their journey with a single yoke.

In a speech welcoming the convention of the National Grange to Washington, President Wilson blamed the middle men for the high cost of foodstuffs, and urged the farmers to increase their crops, and stated that it would be necessary to bring more of the area of the United States under cultivation than is now under cultivation, and that we must increase the product at every point where it is susceptible of being increased.

Hurt at Ratification.

Marion Pennington was seriously injured at a ratification being held at Jennings, in Trimble co., near the Oldham county line last Friday night. Although Mr. Pennington is a Republican he was helping the Democrats to celebrate the election of President Wilson. An anvil was being fired and a spark flew from the anvil to a box of powder he was holding in his hand. The explosion burned his face severely and injured one eye so that he may lose the sight. Before the election the Republicans raised a flag and held a big rally but since Mr. Wilson's election all have agreed to let the flag float and celebrate for Wilson.—Oldham Era

BUILDING PLANS FREE

Agricultural Department Offers Aid to Farmers.

Any farmer in the U. S who is thinking about building a house, barn, silo, corncrib or other farm structure and wants to get drawings and blue prints for a model structure can now write to the office of public roads and rural engineering of the department of agriculture at Washington and get them free.

The agricultural department has prepared designs, including various types of farm houses, barns, silos, a hay shed, sheep shed, a corncrib, a combined wagon shed, machinery shed and shop and a poultry house. Soon the designs of various types of hog houses will be finished.

Farmers who want this assistance must tell the department where they live, just what kind of a structure they are contemplating, how much they want to spend, and so on, and the department will then do its best to furnish a suitable set of plans and drawings. These have been designed with a view of meeting the needs of farmers in all sections of the country.

FISHING HORSES.

How These Wild Animals on North Carolina Cost Do Their Angling.

Along Albermarle Sound, on the North Carolina coast, there is mile after mile of low, sandy shore, where nothing grows except a coarse grass, a few salt-water weeds and wild parsley. On these banks lives a strange breed of half-wild horses, known as "banker ponies." These creatures are generally about twice the size of Shetland ponies.

Every year the herd-owners drive the "bankers" into pens, brand the foals with the proper mark and catch some of the older animals to sell to the dealers. North Carolinians say that the beasts must be starved into eating grain, hay or grass, for they have always lived on the rank marsh grass of the marshes and on fish.

They catch the fish themselves at low tide; with their hoofs they dig deep holes in the sand below high-water mark; when the tide falls they greedily devour the fish that are stranded in these holes. Often they fight briskly over an especially tempting morsel.

In captivity these strange horses are intelligent, but seldom are even in temper. Once tamed they make excellent draft animals, for they have a strength that is disproportionate to their size. Foals that are bred from "bankers" in captivity make valuable animals—strong, healthy intelligent and far less vicious than their parents.—Los Angeles Times

World's Largest Freight Piece.

A Pennsylvania steel factory recently completed a rotary kiln for a cement plant in California. It is a tube 125 feet long, 12 feet in diameter and weighing more than 150,000 pounds. It had to be shipped by rail across the continent. Special cars were prepared for it which were provided with swivels to allow for the necessary movement as the big pipe was swung around curves. It required four of the largest sized flat cars to carry it and is said to be the largest single piece of freight ever handled in the world.

Fish that Build Nests.

The stickleback is one of the most interesting members of the finny tribe. It constructs a home for its prospective mate and then mounts guard over it until the mate comes along. The home is built from sea weed, twigs and aquatic plants which are ingeniously woven together. There are two entrances to the home, which are never left unguarded by the master of the house until the lady of his choice signifies her willingness to enter.

Farmers who have been gathering their corn report a large per cent of damaged ears found, and many of them are assorting close ly in order to have a good quality of food for horses and hogs, while the imperfect and damaged portion will be fed to cattle.

Next Thursday has been set apart as Thanksgiving day.

TRACTION LINE

Between Aurora and Madison, Ind., Projected by Syndicate

A project for the construction of a traction line from Aurora to Madison a distance of not quite sixty mines has been revived by a Cincinnati syndicate, representatives of which recently visited Rising Sun, Patriot, Vevay and Madison.

The syndicate unlike some former promoters ask for no stock subscriptions nor for a bonus or subsidy. All that it asks is the right of way through counties and franchises in cities and towns.

It is estimated that he line can be built fro $18,000 to 25,000 dollars a mile, the amount varying according to places along the route. Arrangements to finance the construction have already been made, so it is reported.

According to present plans the syndicate will have an operating connection over the C. L. and A by which cars will be run into the new Dixie terminal station in Cincinnati. From Madison the syndicate will either build to Louisville or make connection with the proposed Madison and Scottsburg traction line.

Information gathered from Madison and Vevay papers make the project appear more likely to become a realization than any of the numerous schemes that have been exploited in the past fifty years.—Lawrenceburg Press.

Roosevelt's Part in The Campaign.

Much speculation has been indulged in by many citizens as to the part Mr. Roosevelt played in the campaign just closed. That the illustrious citizen of Oyster Bay gave Mr. Hughes his wholehearted support there is no doubt in the world; that Mr. Roosevelt warmed up as he progressed in his support of Mr. Hughes until his whole fiery nature, with all its impetuosity, was involved, there can be just as little doubt.

But the main thing is, did he make votes for Mr. Hughes?

The record would appear to answer in the negative. This is a general proposition, however. No doubt many of Mr. Roosevelt's loyal followers went with him to the Hughes camp, while many more were driven from the candidacy of Mr. Hughes by the frequently bitter language employed by the Rough Rider in his attacks on President Wilson.

In writing to the New York Evening Post in reply to one of Mr. Roosevelt's attacks on President Wilson, Herbert Westcott Fisher, a well-known and quite reputable practicing lawyer of New Haven, Conn., and a brother of Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale, said:

"If what Mr. Roosevelt doesn't like is simply Mr. Wilson's method of delivering the goods, he is wasting his breath on the American public, who have already got the goods. And if what Mr. Roosevelt doesn't like is the goods themselves, it must be that he would prefer the other goods—namely, war.

The Messenger is inclined to the belief that many voters throughout the country took this view of the situation, and, after all, it is doubtful if Mr. Roosevelt's support added much to the cause of Mr. Hughes.

In any event, big man he is, and a few years ago the most popular living American, this campaign and the events leading up to it teach the lesson that Mr. Roosevelt is a dead duck in the political life of our country.—Messenger.

Kentncky Petroleum.

Kentucky petroleum operations are proceeding in a very satisfactory way. Attempts are being made to open new pools in all sections of Eastern and Southern Kentucky, drills in operation at the beginning of the month being the largest in number since the industry started, totaling 436 The approach of the winter season is having little effect on the industry. Operators who have been leasing and doing developments, and they constitute the larger portion of the trade, are anxious to test out their holdings, and many hundreds of companies are represented in the advance movement of the drill. About 10 counties of the State are now centers of drilling operations.

Big Doings in Rising Sun.

Rising Sun literally heeded the ancient admiition to "eat, drink and be merry" Saturday night when one of the most enthusiastic and good natured demonstrations in behalf of the election of presidents in the history of the city was pulled off as men, women and children of varied political hues united in an uproarous testimony of faith in the judgment of the American people, who on election day chose Woodrow Wilson as the leader of all Americans for another presidential term. It is estimated that about 4000 persons took part in the affair, and Republicans as well as Democrats contributed to the defraying of the financial expenses of the occasion.—Ohio County News.

GOOD PRICES FOR TOBACCO.

Crops In Vicinity of Greensburg Finest In Quality and Color Ever Grown There.

Greensburg.—More than 200,000 pounds of tobacco have been sold on the loose leaf floors here and farmers have received the highest price ever given on the loose leaf market here. About an equal amount of Burley and dark tobacco has been offered. The Burley sold as high as $27 the hundred, while dark sold as high as $15. Farmers have been dazed by the flattering offers of buyers at their barns, and fully 60 per cent. of them have sold. A number have recently received 10, 12, and $13 per hundred for their crops. The crop to be marketed this time is the finest in quality and color ever grown in this section, although it does not reach the standard in weight.

THE HIGH SCHOOLS

Settle the Ownership of the Banner for Another Year.

Union Won It in a Close Contest

The High School Spelling Contest at Walton, last Friday afternoon, resulted in a victory for Union, the score being missed words Union 5, Burlington 6, Walton 6. It was a close contest, Burlington falling down on two words that were hard to miss, "disagreable" and "potatoe." The banner which Union now has was taken in the first contest by the Florence school, which held it one year, when Burlington captured it from Florence and held it against all comers for two years, when Walton took it from Burlington last year to lose it to Union this year. The Burlington team came home from the Walton contest thoroughly disgusted with itself.

Varying Politics of Sex.

If one concedes that ultimately there will be equal suffrage throughout the United States prospective party leaders and politicians must prepare themselves for a great change in their methods. Men and women will divide in politics on fundamental lines because in our scheme of things they occupy different niches. Man is essentially a manufacturer of and a worker amid things. Women's activities are almost exclusively with persons, and this is the governing reason for her preference for personal government rather than community government. For precisely the same reason she is more religious than man, which is merely another way of saying that she is more human. Her vote will tend to make the Government more and more sumptuary. She will be for prohibition of the liquor traffic because of her feeling that it will injure the persons with whom she is intimately connected, and she will favor pensions, regulation of food purveying and of hours of labor for the same cause, i. e., the betterment or protection of those dear to her.

In the West women supported President Wilson because they believed he would keep their beloved members of the male sex out of war; because he had helped to enact the child labor law, and because he seemed to favor a shorter work day for toilers. The agitation about the protective tariff carried no appeal to their bosoms, nor were they concerned about the other material things which men appreciate. In a contest as between things and persons they were instinctively for the human side of the controversy. This frame of mind will remain with womankind as long as the present social system is maintained. It will change only when women and men are on an equality in the world of labor, when the home becomes merely a rest house and no longer remains a temple, and when the family is abolished as a social unit.—Enquirer.

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.

R. B. Huey Escapes Being Killed By an Infuriated Jersey Bull.

Last Thursday about 3:30 p. m., R. B. Huey, a leading farmer of Clover Lane neighborhood, had a miraculous escape from being killed by a large, three year old Jersey bull which heads his dairy herd, and, which, up to that time had been regarded as a well disposed animal.

Mr. Huey was the only man at home that afternoon, his son Howard and wife having gone to the city. About the usual or may be a little earlier, Mr. Huey went to the barn to look after his cows of which he milks quite a number. The bull was being kept in a box stall, and as had been his habit, Mr. Huey entered the stall and fastened the door behind him, and when he undertook to snap a chain in the ring in the bull's nose the bull threw its head around, striking Mr. Huey a heavy blow. The attack was followed up by the bull, which from that time on displayed a furious disposition, and Mr. Huey was butted against the side of the stall repeatedly until he fell. The bull continued the attack and while Mr. Huey lay flat on his back, warding off as best he could the butting of the bull he succeeded in getting the chain, which he had held to, snapped in the ring in the bulls nose, and had strength enough to hold him at bay. During the struggle and while Mr. Huey was lying in the stall the bull had placed one of its feet on his coat, and although he could hold the bull off he was pinioned to the ground, and it was inch by inch that he managed to get his coat from beneath the bull's foot. This done Mr. Huey managed to control the beast until he got to the door and passed out, being badly exhausted and hardly able to reach the house 300 or 400 yards distant. Dr. Duncan was summoned and was soon at the side of the injured man whom he found suffering considerably and a mass of bruises, while one rib on his right side was fractured. Mr. Huey has been in a bad condition ever since the attack upon him, but is now on the road to recovery.

Mr. Huey's experience was a successful struggle for life with all the odds against him, and shows that it is risky to put to much confidence in the docility of a bull.

Everything at the warehouse will be in readiness, and a good season coming within a short time may enable the growers to get the tobacco in shape for the opening sale. AUTOMATIC EXERCISE.

A man may be lazy and inactive, yet his vitality is maintained and life is kept in his fabric by muscular movements that might lift mountains, says the New York Sun.

If you were as still as a stone the vital flames in your anatomy would die down and go out. Life thrives in motion. Metaphorically, the muscles may be said to be the life. Happily, it is impossible to be quiet. If you are soundly asleep, nearly unconscious in fact, the muscle of the heart moves and has its being. The heart muscle, or even fragments of it, so long as it is kept warm and receives sugar, water, milk blood or other moisture with some food in it, will continue the athletic exercises for which it was created.

Moreover, the muscles of the arteries, veins and digestive tube squirm and worm, expand and contract as long as heat and food der are furnished them. No living thing can be so lazy or so soundly asleep that muscular motion in these structures ceases.

Perhaps one of the most violent and most indisputable of automatic physical exercises is winking the eye. Twenty thousand winks or thereabouts each day is the allotment by nature to the muscles of the eyelids. You wink your eye usually once in every three seconds, and the complete wink, the closure and opening of the eyelid, occupies only one fiftieth of a second. Twelve thousand winks an hour means that the upper and the lower eyelids open and shut just that often. The muscles of those parts receive an immense amount of practice.

The muscles of mastication also play a large role in the athletics of the inactive. Though a man were toothless and chewed no more than does an infant, he cannot swallow a mouthful of water without muscle motion. The oesphagus is a muscular tube. As food or drink is gulped down muscle waves worm their way along this channel to propel the pabulum into the gastric pounch further on.

The tongue is a muscle loose at one end and tenaciously attached at the other. Whenever you breathe, eatory muscles work. Roll of the eyeballs a look heavenward or indeed, any motion of vision is to the eyes and their outer and three interior muscles what swimming, tennis, dancing, skating, running and other sports are to the leg, arm and skeleton muscles.

No man can be alive and be wholly without athletics.

DON'T DISPISE BEAUTY.

A very "practical" writer condemned the American custom of planting purely ornamental trees and shrubs, says the Chicago Journal. Such things, he contented, performed no useful work and ought to be discarded. The redbud and flowering almond should give place to cherry and peach trees; and roses and spireas, currants and gooseberries. Only thus could we have a garden scheme worthy of a "practical" people.

There are elements of truth in such a doctrine. Too many people fail to recognize the beauty inherited in plants, trees and shrubs cultivated for food—in a cherry or peach orchard, in a field of blossoming clover, or rippening wheat. But the central idea of this "practical" creature is false altogether, for he fails to recognize that beauty is worth while in and of itself, and needs no indorsement from either stomach or pocketbook.

Mahomet knew what he was about when he uttered his famous adhge: "He that hath two loaves of bread, let him sell one and buy narcissus; for bread is food for the soul." The onion is a very "useful" plant, the lily, according to that "practical" magazinist, is no use at all; yet if the world had to choose which one of these it would part with, it had better keep the lilies.

This planet would be a poor place in which to rear human beings if everything were weighed in the scales of money or food.

Plant fruit-bearing trees and shrubs, by all means and learn to appreciate their beauty and symmetry. But plant also something purely as a food for the eye, a sanctuary of beauty into which no mere dollar-hunters can enter.

Large Tobacco Crop.

Hopkinsville, Nov. 16—The farmers of the dark tobacco district are happy over the prospect of high prices for tobacco this season. The crop is the largest ever grown in this region, and the quality was never better. Notwithstanding the British embargo, there is a general feeling that the market will be bullish. More than thirty million pounds of tobacco were handled in Hopkinsville last season, and the dealers now are greatly increasing their facilities. The loose floors, eight in number, will open on December 5. Several new plants have been built during the past summer. The Weyman-Bruton Snuff Company has had an enormous rehandling plant erected. Several new prizing plants will be in operation.

Buyers have been riding thru the country for more than a month, looking at crops, and stiff prices are being offered growers at the barn doors. As high as $10 a hundred has been offered, and average quotations range from $7 to $9. In few instances have sales been made. In spite of the situation growing out of the war, 50 per cent. of the crop being export types, the farmers are disposed to wait till the market opens before setting a price on their product.

We heartily coincide with the sentiment someone expressed in a recent talk on advertising—"watch the goods, the service and the reputation behind your ad." Briefly this means that eternal vigilance is the price of success and that truth will prevail.

Truthful advertising is our aim, every ad is censored before going to press, for instance if copy is handed in reading, One Dollar gloves reduced to 89c. The glove has to be produced showing to the censor that the glove is really a dollar glove.

The several bank statements appear in this issue. They show that this county is pretty well supplied with money, the deposits in the nine Boone county banks amounting to $1,039,530. 17 The two Erlanger banks are carrying deposits to the amount of $295,591.19.

The cold weather caused a suspension of the work on the Covington and Lexington pike, the concrete work being finished to within fifteen hundred feet of the railroad crossing at Erlanger. The work would have been completed before the break in the weather came had the contractor not been overtaken with two or three delays on account of break downs and the failure of material to arrive on time. When the frost gets into the ground in the fall the building of concrete roads has to be discontinued.

When a horse comes in wet with rain or snow scrape him all over quickly. A regular scraper which comes for the purpose can be used, but a piece of barrel hoop is just as good. Then throw a blanket over him and rub his head, neck, legs and loins as dry as possible. If the stable is cold put on a second blanket, and when he is dry change to his stable blanket. Never, under any circumstances, leave a damp blanket on a horse over night. This attention will take only a few minutes, and by it you pretty surely save a doctor's bill, and possibly your horse.

TO THE TRAVELING PUBLIC:

You are urgently requested to use the entire road and not drive in the same track all the time as such a procedure will cause the road to rut and, even though it might be only for a small depth, water will run down in the ruts and cause the road to deteriorate. A rut is very hard to repair especially until it gets to be three or four inches deep.

The people should realize the fact that they are paying for the road themselves and should try to preserve same because it is their property.

R. WILEY,
Commissioner of Public Roads.

KENTUCKY REPUBLICANS

Urged By Caleb Powers To Take Stand For Prohibition.

Washington, Nov. 19.—In a statement given out here today Representative Caleb Powers, of Kentucky, who was re-elected to Congress Nocv. 7th, calls upon the Republicans of that state to make statewide prohibition their rallying cry in next year's campaign.

The statement is as follows: "There is a fight to the death in the Democratic party in Kentucky between the wet and the dry forces. The Republicans cannot afford to take the immoral side of a moral issue. The race for United States Senator takes place in Kentucky next year. If the Republicans next spring, in their State convention, will take a stand for statewide prohibition, and if a United States Senator is nominated thereon, the Republicans ought to carry the State next fall. I base this conclusion on the idea that the machinery of the Democratic party in the state is controlled by the wet forces, and they doubtless will nominate a wet candidate for the United States Senate."

E. P. Morrow, of Somerset, who made the race for Governor against A. O Stanley, is being mentioned for the Senatorial nomination, but it is probable he will run again for Governor, as the general opinion among Kentucky Republican leaders is that he is best available for that race.

SELF-FEEDING PLAN

Value Demonstrated in Recent Experiments at Beltsville.

PLAN IS VERY PRACTICABLE

Grade Berkshires, Uniform in Size, Averaging 93 Pounds Were Used—Ample Room for Exercise Was Given Animals.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The value of the self-feeder method of fattening pigs was demonstrated in an experiment recently carried out at the experimental farm of the bureau of animal industry at Beltsville, Md. The object was to determine the value of this system as compared with the ordinary method of hand feeding.

The pigs used in the experiment were grade Berkshires farrowed in the fall of 1915. They averaged 93 pounds per head when the experiment started.

The hand-fed lot were fed three times daily, the amount being governed by the appetites. The ration given the hand-fed hogs was composed of 5 parts cornmeal, 4 parts middlings and 1 part tankage. The cornmeal and supplements were mixed dry. Just before feeding, the amount to be fed was weighed and then mixed into a thick slop, enough water being used to make the slop pour out of the bucket without sticking. The feeding was done at 7 and 11:30 o'clock in the forenoon and 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

The self-fed lot had free access at all times to cornmeal, middlings and tankage in separate compartments of a self-feeder. Close watch was kept on the feeder, and a supply of each feed maintained.

Both lots of pigs were kept in dry lots a quarter of an acre in size. The pigs were given ample room for exercise and sufficient shelter. The pigs in both lots had access to a mineral mixture composed of:

Charcoal, bushel	1
Hardwood ashes, bushel	1
Salt, pounds	5
Air-slaker lime, pounds	5
Sulphur, pounds	4
Pulverized copperas, pounds	2

Summary of Results.

	Hand-fed lot.*	Self-feeder lot.x
Number of pigs	9	9
Average initial weight pounds	94.00	92.00
Average final weight, pounds	167.50	205.00
Average gain per pig, pounds	73.50	112.00
Average daily gain, pounds	1.04	1.61
Feed eaten daily by pig:
Corn meal, pounds	2.13	5.46
Middlings, pounds	1.70	.81
Tankage, pounds	.42	.28
Average daily ration, pounds	4.25	6.55
Pounds of feed per 100 pounds gain	410.00	405.00
Cost of 100 pounds gain.	$6.24	$5.67

*Ration: 5 parts corn meal, 4 parts middlings, 1 part tankage.
xRation: Cornmeal, middlings, tankage.

The cost per ton of feed used in the experiments was as follows: Cornmeal, $27; middlings, $30; tankage, $50.

All the pigs in the self-feeder lot maintained keen appetites during the 70 days of feeding. The hand-fed pigs averaged 94 pounds per head and the self-fed pigs 92 pounds per head at the beginning of the test. At the end of 70 days the hand-fed pigs averaged 167.5 pounds and the self-fed pigs 205 pounds, 37.5 pounds more than the hand-fed pigs. The self-fed pigs consumed a greater quantity of feed per head during the test than the hand-fed pigs, but it took only 405 pounds of feed to produce 100 pounds at a cost of $5.67, while the hand-fed pigs produced 100 pounds of gain at a cost of $6.24.

The self-fed pigs made a better showing, surpassing the hand-fed lot in both rate and economy of gains. The results of the experiment clearly show that for quick fattening the self-feeder is very practicable.

ANNOYING HABIT OF HORSES

Practice of Continually Switching Tail Over Lines May Be Stopped by Use of Crupper.

It is annoying to have a horse continually switching his tail over the lines. Try putting a thick crupper under the tail, or tie strands of the tail to the harness on each side, or use leather straps for the purpose until he discontinues the practice.

CONCRETE ... AWAY RATS

Rats are among the worst pests about the poultry house. They not only steal a large amount of grain, but frequently developa a taste for young chicks and eggs which seems to be insatiable. A well-made concrete floor and foundation makes an almost perfect protection against rats. A concrete floor itself is not sufficient, for the rats may burrow under it and thus find a perfectly protected breeding place.

A concrete foundation for poultry houses need not be heavy or expensive, if properly made. A trench may be dug below the frost line and forms set up six inches apart. A mixture of one part portland cement, three parts sand and six parts gravel will prove plenty strong enough for this purpose.

After it is well set forms can be removed, the floor leveled up and covered with concrete three inches deep, mixed in the same proportions. The floor can be made smooth and level by a straight edge board. Frequently a finishing coat of three-quarters of an inch is put on of a richer mixture and troweled to a smooth finish. Beginning the day after the floor is laid it should be sprinkled two or three times daily for a week so as to prevent the concrete from drying out too rapidly and cracking.

FATTEN CATTLE FOR PROFIT

Baby Beeves Weighing 800 to 1,100 Pounds Are Most Economical for Market to Handle.

(By W. H. PEW, Iowa Experiment Station.)

Although it is nip and tuck whether the farmer who ships in range cattle to feed will make a satisfactory profit, it is quite certain that the man who produces his own cattle and fattens them and markets them when they are from 15 to 20 months old, will make money.

At that age the baby beef will weigh from 800 to 1,100 pounds. The carcass will be the most economical for the market to handle and its production will insure profit for the farmer. Baby beeves will gain about as rapidly in the feed lot as older cattle, and the cost of gain will be less, as much as 3 or 4 cents a pound. If the market is not just right when the baby beef is ready, it may be held and fed until the market is right and it will keep on gaining and gaining economically.

There are a number of notable successes with baby beef production.

SPECIAL ATTENTION TO OIL

In Getting Farm Machinery Ready for Work Look Carefully to Lubrication of Wearing Parts.

In getting the machinery ready for farm operations, Prof. H. C. Ramsower of the agricultural engineering department, Ohio State university, urges that special attention be given to the lubrication of all wearing parts. "A full oil can to every machine" is the way he states it. Especially on new machinery and the farm tractor does the use of oil become important. Make sure that all oil holes, well, pumps, grease cups and bearings are thoroughly cleaned of dirt, grit, paint, and foreign matter before the holes are filled, so that waste matter can not be carried into the bearings. Clean wool or cotton placed in cups will keep out sand and grit. It is a good practice to use a mixture of equal parts machine oil and kerosene in the bearings for the first few hours of operation of a tractor.

CARING FOR ASPARAGUS BEDS

It Should Receive Liberal Application of Manure—Keep Grass From Crowding It Out.

Cultivate the asparagus bed and keep the grass from crowding it out. It should receive a liberal application of well-rotted manure. Some authorities contend that salt is a good fertilizer to be applied at this season, but that is an open question, and its use is not advised if there is any other fertilizer known to be good, available.

CAREFUL HANDLING OF FRUIT

Necessity for Avoiding Bruising and Mechanical Injuries More Urgent Than Is Realized.

Small bruises and breaks in the skin of fruits are large enough to afford entrance to the sports of fungi, and the necessity for the utmost care in all operations connected with the handling of the fruit, to avoid bruising and mechanical injuries, is more urgent than most growers realize.

FARM STOCK

EASIEST INCOME FROM SHEEP

Small Sum of Money Required in Establishing Flock—Demand for Them Growing Stronger.

It has never been disputed that sheep are of great value on the farm. Some men who have had years of practical experience with sheep and have raised a flock in connection with other classes of live stock, declare that they have derived the largest and easiest income from sheep. From the standpoint of profit they consider: First, the small sum of money required for the establishment of a flock; second, the small expense incurred in building suitable shelter for sheep; third, the little care sheep require in the summer, during the farmer's busiest time; fourth, the extermination of weeds on the farm by the sheep; fifth, the enrichment of the soil on which the sheep graze by the even distribution of their manure, which is of much value to the land; sixth, that with present prices of wool a breeding ewe ought to pay for more than her keep and that her lamb or lambs are their net profit; and, seventh, that since the demand for them is ever growing stronger, mutton and wool are constantly increasing in value.—Wisconsin Bulletin 263.

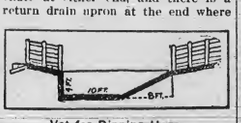
BE CAUTIOUS WITH ALFALFA

Not Advisable to Feed Hay in Large Quantities to Brood Mares—Great Danger of Bloat.



It is not well to feed alfalfa hay in too large quantities to brood mares, and this is a matter in which precaution should be taken. Horses tend to become bloated if allowed to overfeed on alfalfa hay, especially if the hay is in a more or less green stage. It is always advisable when alfalfa hay is to be fed to horses to allow the alfalfa to remain in the field until well matured.

The danger of bloating in horses is especially great in the case of mares in foal, which are likely to overeat. These precautions are not necessary in feeding alfalfa to cattle and, in fact, the green alfalfa hay is very desirable for dairy cattle. Good results have been obtained in feeding brood mares by limiting their alfalfa to one-third of the total amount of roughage fed to them.

This is the cement constructed hog-dipping vat recommended by the Wisconsin experiment station. It has a chute at either end, and there is a return drain apron at the end where the hogs come up out of the dip. By holding them on this incline for a few minutes a great deal of the dip is saved by running off them and into the tank. The vat proper is 16 inches wide at the bottom, 24 inches wide at the top and 4 feet deep. It is 10 feet long.

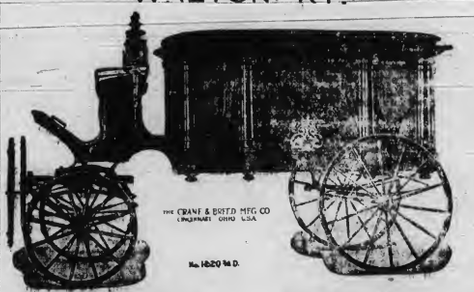
COLONY HOUSES NOT COSTLY



Material May Be Bought for Price Ranging From $7.35 to $17.43—Much Depends on Type.

According to the practical experience of the agricultural experiment station at Ames, a very satisfactory colony of movable hoghouses may be built at a cost, for material, ranging from $7.35 to $17.43, depending upon the type. In no case does the cost of labor add more than $3.75 to the total cost. These movable houses have been used for a good many years at Ames. They are declared successful by John M. Evvard, who is in charge of the experimental work in animal husbandry. With Prof. J. B. Davidson, Mr. Evvard has recently completed a bulletin which gives complete plans and specifications for six different types of movable houses. The publication may be secured without cost by writing to the Bulletin editor, Ames, Iowa, for it.

Without the Aid of New York.

The fact that this country has just elected its President without the aid or consent of New York and the particular interests which center around New York; that, indeed, it has elected him despite the desperate opposition of those interests with all the powerful resources that they control ought to impress upon the people of this republic that it is time to quit consulting the geography when they put forth their national tickets; time to quit catering especially to the Empire State; time to rid themselves of the fear that they dare not attempt to elect a President without offering a candidate who is either a New Yorker or is the distinct selection of New York politicians.

So long and so severely has New York been kotowed to in this way that she has come to regard such servility as a matter of course, due to her on account of her pre-eminence of position and power, and has she forgotten that it is possible, or desirable, at any time, to elevate to the Chief Magistracy of the nation any man who may not be her choice.

That is why on the night of the election, when it was known in the city of New York that the State of New York and the adjacent territory had votes for Mr Hughes, it was taken for granted that Hughes was elected and why the New York papers, Democratic as well as Republican, went to press proclaiming the definite news of Hughes' election, accompanied with long editorials in commendation and explanation of the result, in some instances even in advice of "President-elect" Hughes as to the formation of his Cabinet. And these papers went to press, be it noted, before the canvass of the election returns had hardly begun in millions of square leagues of the country outside of New York.

But New York has now been shown that this country can elect a President without her knowledge or consent. It is well. It is better so. And both New York and the country should learn a lesson which they both need to learn: The lesson that New York and what in politics New York represents, cannot dictate our policies and our Government; that the country is not dependent on New York in shaping its policies and selecting its governors.

One result of this lesson is that the people of the U. S.—certainly those who constitute the Democratic party—should abandon their longfixed habit of primarily consulting New York in the nomination of their presidential tickets. So slavishly have they followed this habit that our presidential campaigns since the close of the war half a century ago present but one instance in which one or both of the two contending political parties did not cater to New York by placing New Yorkers on their tickets.

Look back over the records.

In 1868 the Democratic nominee for President was Horatio Seymour, of New York.

In 1872 it was Horace Greeley, of New York, with Chas. O'Conor, of New York, on the side.

In 1876 it was Samuel J. Tilden, of New York, while the Republicans offered Wheeler, of New York, as their candidate for Vice President.

In 1880 the Democrats no nearer New York than Pennslyvania, but the Republicans elected Arthur, of New York, Vice President.

In 1884 the Democrats elected Grover Cleveland, of New York.

In 1888 they tried to elect Cleveland again, while the Republicans did elect to the vice-presidency Levi P. Morton, of New York.

In 1892 the Democrats again elected Cleveland, while the Republicans tried to elect Whitelaw Reid, of New York, Vice President.

In 1896 for once neither party took a candidate from New York, the nearest approach being the Republicans' selection of Hobart, of New Jersey, for Vice President.

In 1900 the Republicans, at the dictation of the New York boss, Platt, put on their ticket for Vice President Theo. Roosevelt, of New York.

In 1904 the Republicans ran New Yorker Roosevelt for President, while the Democrats opposed him with another New Yorker, Alton B. Parker.

In 1908 the Republicans elected Sherman, of New York, Vice President.

In 1912 the Republicans again took the vice presidential candidate from New York. (Do you remember his name?)

In 1916 the Republicans settled on Hughes, of New York, for President, and New York, voting for him, assumed that she had elected him, without thinking it worth while to hear from the rest of the country.

If nominating conventions are wise in the future—Democratic conventions at any rate—they will make their nominations for President and Vice President without first assuring themselves that the nominees are branded "New York."

It is time to realize that while no man should be tabooed in making up a national ticket because he is a New Yorker none should be favored solely because he is a New Yorker.

It is time that New York learned that there is considerably more to this country than "up-State" and Wall Street.

And she knows today, if she did not suspect Tuesday night, that we can elect our Presidents without accepting her dictation or consulting her pleasure.

The Vindication of Democracy.

For the re-election of Woodrow Wilson the Democratic party is rejoicing today, as assuredly it has every reason to rejoice. It has broken a precedent, a prejudice which it had not been able to overcome since the war, and which had denied it heretofore two successive terms in power. When intrusted with the administration of the National Government it had been more as a party of opposition than as a party of principle, more as a bludgeon with which to punish the offending Republicans than as a trusted instrument to do what the Republicans had failed to do; and invariably it had been turned out of office after it had served that temporary purpose.

It is a different story today. Four years ago the Democrats came in not because the country had any more confidence in the Democratic party than it had four years before, but because the Republicans, boss-ridden and spoils-sodden, split among themselves, the more independent and less hidebound among them rebelling against her old order, and under the lead of one inordinately ambitious freebooter, making a Democratic victory inevitable.

But that victory meant something more than the substitution of one set of officeholders for another set. The Democrats succeeded to the control of the executive and legislative functions of the Government with a far worthier programme than merely to draw official salaries until the next elections. They had promised to do a great work, a work which the Republicans many times had promised in vain to do, a work which the country needed, but which it did not believe the Democratic party could or would do. But the new Democratic President and the new Democratic Congress lost no time in setting about to make good their word. Together they went to work in earnest. They stayed at home in earnest. Patiently, persistently they kept at it, accomplishing in the end what even the most sanguine Democrats themselves had thought impossible and making a record of vital constructive and reformatory legislation unequaled by any preceding Administration of our Government.

On that record they went before the people, to whom they appealed for the verdict of approval and confidence that was their due. Their reunited opponents did all that ingenuity, desperation and money could do to prevent such a vote on the merits of the issue. They did all that old and cunning hands at the game could do to becloud and displace the issue. That against such opposition the Democrats have triumphed means not only that they have made good, but that the country recognizes that they have made good. It means that the Democratic party is no longer regarded as merely a stick with which to chastise the Republicans; that it is no longer distrusted and disbelieved in its pretentions to principles and purposes of its own; that it is measured at last by what it is and what it does.

For this the Democratic party is to be felicitated. But beyond that and better than that the country is to be felicitated because in coming to deal fairly by the Democratic party it has done itself a service which it could have done in no other way; it has saved itself from the misfortune of confusion by the fanfare of the motley opposition and plunging into the dark at this critical period of the world's history, dismissing an Administration whose adequacy, safety and aims have been demonstrated, for one totally untried, inexperienced, unknown in its purposes and methods and presenting no claims to public confidence except rabid denunciation of those it sought to replace.

Under Wilson the country knows what it has had; it knows what to expect. That it has not allowed itself to be swayed by the clamor of officeseekers and the convulsions of partisans into flying from the tried and the known to the unknown which was all that was offered by Hughes means that the country is more to be congratulated on the outcome of the recent election than the Democratic party itself.

America never better vindicated the right of self-government than by Tuesday's verdict at the polls. —C.-J.

Caution Parent of Safety.

Caution is the parent of safety. It is better to use caution in time than regrets too late. It is better to give the mind some exercise in considerations before beginning a new thing, remarks the Milwaukee Journal. It is wise to make friends slowly. Some people like to boast of being "so impulsive," and think that this should be an acceptable excuse for many failings. Impulse is often a good thing, but it needs a long course of careful training before it can be safely indulged. First impressions are often deceiving. One may not at first be attractive in appearance, but on further acquaintance, prove to be admirable in character. Those who are impulsive in making professions of friendship are not entirely to be depended on to be permanent or reliable. In giving way to a strong liking or aversion one often does injustice. Acquaintance is quite as likely to show admirable as unlikable qualities. Often an aversion has been changed to a deep and true friendship. And, on the other hand, some who appear admirable on first meeting, prove otherwise. Do not judge hastily on the impulse of a moment. Acts done on the impulse of the moment may cause repentance for many a year.

DAIRY FACTS

BETTER QUALITY OF BUTTER

Article Sells on Its Merits as to Flavor, Taste and Color—Control Flavors and Odors.

Butter is used primarily to improve the palatability of foods for human consumption. It sells on its merits as to taste, flavor and color, though some are influenced by its texture. Color may be produced artificially in a way to please the most particular person and it therefore becomes of secondary importance to the producer; it does not imply quality, but oftimes a rich color will compensate for a lack of other qualities.

Flavors and odors in butter may be controlled to a certain extent by care in feeding and handling cows. The volatile fats in milk are quick to absorb odors, either from feeds during the process of digestion and assimilation in the cow or from strong odors coming in contact with the milk after it has been drawn. The latter may be obviated by keeping the stable and utensils sweet and clean, free from dust and all objectionable odors. When disinfectants are used about the stables care must be exercised to air the stables thoroughly, for the milk will absorb the odor of disinfectants in a remarkably brief time. The most effective plan is to disinfect as soon as the cows are turned out, then air the stables well for at least three or four hours.

AGE OF USEFULNESS OF COWS

Twenty-Two-Year-Old Jersey in Wisconsin Produced Forty Pounds of Butterfat in Month.

Wisconsin has a twenty-two-year-old Jersey cow in one of her cow-testing associations that recently made 40 pounds of butterfat in one month. Sweet Briar, a Guernsey cow, did profitable work at the Minnesota experiment station up to her seventeenth year, and Cylene, a Holstein cow in the same institution and at the same age, will this year produce over 400 pounds of butterfat. The age of usefulness of the majority of dairy cows that meet with no accident, is probably between twelve and fourteen years, but frequently dairy cows give splendid profit beyond these years, as the above cases illustrate.

Excellent Dairy Type.

GRADE OF AMERICAN BUTTER

Quality Is Poor on Account of Poor Cream Used in Manufacture—Foreign Make Is Better.

Imported butter does not reach our markets in as fresh condition as our own butter, consequently the majority of it sells as second-grade. In many cases it leaves the point of production as a first-class article, but is so long in transit that it deteriorates and arrives as second-grade butter. Unfortunately the majority of American-made butters are also second-grade. This is not because it cannot reach the market at once, but because it is made from a poor quality of cream. The American farmer is not producing as good quality of cream as his foreign brother.

HIGH GRADE BUTTER PRICES

Producers of First-Class Articles Are Realizing Nice Margin Over Inferior Product.

First-grade butter is still in big demand in this country and the producers of good butter are realizing a nice margin in price over the producers of second grade butter. Because of foreign competition with our second-grade butter the difference in price between first-grade and second-grade is wide. Foreign competition has not materially increased the supply of first-grades, while the supply of seconds has been increased tremendously.

REPAIRS FOR WOODEN SILOS

Huge Receptacle Is Liable to Be Wrenched by Wind—Best to Tighten Up Loose Staves.

The wooden silo in summer is liable to be wrecked or wrenched by the wind, especially if it has no roof. Spend a little time in tightening the hoops after the staves become dry.

As a precaution against high winds run two or three stays of heavy wire to some permanent objects—a tree, barn or heavy post set firmly in the ground. Give it a coat of paint on the outside and creosote on the inside.

WHY HUGHES IS SILENT

Congratulatory Message Held Up Pending Status of Banker Electors Is Determined, Report Says.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Charles E. Hughes' congratulatory message to President Wilson is being withheld, according to a report current here today, until the lawyers comprising Chairman Willcox's legal cabinet determine whether a national banker is a "person holding an office of trust or profit under the U. S." The application of an opinion on this question to the result of the election is that several Democratic Electors are national bankers.

According to this report, which is given for what it may be worth, the lawyers are advising the National Committee are not quite determined about the status of national bankers and, in common with the political managers who are not quite such keen lawyers, are dubious about the advisability of attempting to invalidate the election of some of the Wilson Electors on technical grounds.

If the recount in California showed that the state had given its electoral vote to Hughes he would have a majority. If the California vote stands as first reported, as present figures appear to portend, the result of the election might again be jeopardized, it is stated, if all the national bankers who are Electors were subtracted from the Wilson total.

Famine Conditions in Europe.

Food supplies in Europe are daily becoming less, and with the war demanding more soldiers, transforming more producers into consumers and destroyers, and the munition factories calling constantly for increased numbers of workers, the crops of 1917 will be even less in Europe than the exceedingly small yields of the present year.

All through the summer and the autumn The Enquirer gave its readers the true conditions of European supplies and of European, Australian and Indian crops.

The systematic concealment by European Government agencies of the actual conditions was for the purpose of securing supplies in America at less prices than would have been possible if the farmers of the United States had been fully acquainted with the facts.

The allies cruelly placed the people of Holland, Denmark and Sweden on short rations, and now their Governments are forced to place their own populations on war bread and to cut down the food of the people in potatoes, sugar, milk and other articles necessary for existence.

The recent discussion of this food question in the Parliament of Great Britain discloses the seriousness of this shortage of food at home, and with the steadily increasing activities of the German submarines in the Atlantic and the Mediterranean and their admitted success in the cutting off of these supplies, it will soon be known to the world that the armies are short of provisions, as well as the civilian populations.

The fighting, however, will go on, even with half the usual supplies of food. The soldiers will combat even on the short rations, so long as the civilians will not riot nor take food by force.

The shortage of food abroad but emphasizes the need of large crops in this country during the months of 1917.

The high prices existing here at the present time are evidences of our great home needs, but the conditions abroad call for such quantities of farm products that lower prices here are impossible while famine faces hundreds of millions of people abroad. Every pound of food from the far Southlands that the early months of 1917 bring to the North is a direct help to our own people and indirectly an aid to the suffering people of Europe. Every ton of food supplies produced by the Gulf States coming into market in the spring and early summer will not only bring good returns to the producers, but be a welcome addition to the supplies of the nation and the world.

No humanitarian but pitied the peaceful Hollanders, condemned by Great Britain to the very point of starvation through cutting off our shipments of food, and now no humanitarian but regrets that the people of Great Britain are rapidly reaching the point where hunger will strike their own homes.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Wilson's Next Message.

Washington, Nov. 20.—President Wilson practically completed his next annual message to Congress today, and plans to put the finishing touches on it tomorrow. It will be devoted almost entirely to domestic matters and will deal primarily with legislative questions recommended to Congress previously, and not finally settled.

The principal items in the message are understood to be railroad legislation to meet the situation created by the threatened railroad strike last August; a measure to allow American exporters to form common selling agencies abroad; conservation bills; a corrupt practice measures, and the Porto Rico bill.

Mt. Sterling, Nov 20.—There were 1,200 head of cattle of fair quality here today and the trade was heavy, there being many buyers from all over the State present. Yearlings sold at 6 cents to 7 cents, with feeders at 6½ to 7¼ cents. Market on heifers $1 higher than month ago and 50 cents higher on steers. Big run of mules with good ones in demand and sales were good at from $65 to $215. The day was one of the best for stock in many months. There was a large crowd on the pens all day.

CLARK'S CHANCES BRIGHTER.

Washington, Nov. 19.—The outlook for the Democrats to re-elect Champ Clark as speaker and to organize the next House became brighter today than it has been since the election, when definite word reached Washington that Zebulon Weaver, Democrat has defeated Representative Britt, Republican, in the Tenth North Carolina district, according to the official canvass.

The loss of Britt reduces the maximum strength, according to the Democratic leaders, to 216, two short of a majority. Chairman Wood, of the Republican Congressional Committee, has never claimed more than 217 seats, and in his list was the Britt seat. The Democratic leaders have reason to believe that of the six Independents elected to the next House five will co-operate with them in organizing the House. If they do these five will give the Democrats, on the face of the present figures, 218 votes, one more than a majority. The Democrats have no hope that Representative Schall, the blind Progressive from Minnesota, will vote with them, and have conceded him to the Republicans. They do believe, however, that Representative Martin, of Louisiana, and Representative Kelly, of Pennsylvania, the two other Progressives, will vote with them in organizing the House.

The situation, however, is regarded as too close for either side to make any definite claims at this time. It will probably be a year before the 65th Congress meets, and in that time death may play an important hand in the personnel of the next House. Should one or two members on either side die upon the eve of the assembling of Congress, whichever party loses them may lose control of the House. This possibility is one which impels both the Democratic and Republican leaders in Congress to assert that none really knows who will organize the next House until that body is called into session.

FALL GARDEN CLEANING.

Garden cleaning in the fall is as important in its way as house-cleaning in the spring, whether flowers or vegetables make up the garden plat. The achievement of garden cleanliness at this season will count do much toward insuring healthiness and thriftness of plants during the next growing season. The foliage and branches of plants which have been attacked by disease or badly infested by insect pests should be cleaned up especially well and burned.

If it is possible or desirable to clean away plants from some portions of the garden before frost, such areas may well be sown to rye as a cover crop, the growth to be turned under in early spring incidentally, also, the patches of green will give the otherwise bare garden a cleanly and more cheerful appearance during the winter.

It is after frost that cleaning is most needed in the garden. When annual plants have been nipped, those that may harbor disease or insect pests should be cut down or dug up and burned. If the soft-leaved plants which will rot easily are free from disease and insects they may be turned under advantageously at this time. It is not well, however, to turn under tree leaves, especially such tough leaves as those from oaks. These make valuable compost when rotted, but usually require two years for proper decomposition. They should be collected and placed in a compost pile or pit maintained in a convenient location. Soil wood ashes, lime and fresh manure should be mixed in the compost heap.

The fall is the time also to cut down asparagus bushes. This should be done after the foliage dies. The old canes of black raspberries also should be cut out at this time. If there is reason to believe that the trimmings harbor disease spores or insects, they should be burned. Rhubarb leaves should be removed in late fall and the crowns mulched with straw or manure.

Give the Horse Steady Job.

A horse eats more than a hired man. You don't have to pay him, the horse, wages, but you have to buy his shoes and harness and pay his doctor bills when he gets sick. At present prices of grain and hay it costs at least a hundred dollars a year to keep a horse. The expense of keeping four horses is about the same as that of keeping a good farm hand. On every farm the hired hand, On every farm the hired man is expected to work every day. On too many farms the horse lonfs about half the time. In North Dakota, for instance, the Experiment Station figures that horses are busy only about five months out of twelve. The rest of the time they are not earning anything, but eat the profits right out of the owners pocket. The remedy lies in diversification. The more different kind of crops you raise—the more industries you will have on the farm—the better the horse labor as well as the man labor is distributed. As Director Thos. Cooper says: "There is less work for the horses in the seasons that are the busiest on all grain farms, and there is work for the horses when there is no grain farm." An idle team is just as much loss to the farmer as to the city teamster, who drives his rig at so much per day. —Farm Life.

Perhaps the oldest man in this section of the State at the recent election was Uncle Dave Erwin, aged 97, of Beech Grove. He cast his first vote for William Henry Harrison for President in 1840.—Sebree Banner.

TOBACCO NOTES.

The quality of Kentucky's crop argues for high prices.

Dry weather this fall has greatly retarded stripping.

C. M. Cooper, of Fleming county, sold his crop of about 20,000 pounds at 10 cents.

Tobacco reached $18.50 at Clarksville, Tenn., last week, the highest paid there in years.

Several crops have been sold in Nicholas county at prices ranging from 15 to 22 cents per pound.

Reports from all the Burley district of Kentucky indicate high quality but lighter weight than at first anticipated.

Tobacco men in Bourbon were made happy by the rain and enjoyed a splendid season and much tobacco was stripped.

Taken as a whole, few sales of the new crop have been made, growers generally holding for a better price than buyers are offering.

Despite the fact that there is a record-breaking crop, both in quantity and quality, that ocean shipping is a decidedly uncertain proposition and foreign trade suffers thereby, and other things which tend to unsettle the dark tobacco market in Christian county, the present indications are that the season now about to open will be the most active and probably marked by the highest prices which have been known in years.

E. T. Fleming, the local wholesale poultry dealer, has already shipped three carloads of turkeys to Boston for the Thanksgiving market. Each car contained about 1,500 or 1,700 dressed turkeys. Surely the housewives of this section have been exceedingly busy this year raising these delicious birds and with present high prices prevailing they should be well remunerated for their time. Turkeys are selling at 20 cents per pound on foot.—Georgetown News.

The War Waste And Its Significance.

There exists in Copenhagen a society for the study of the social consequences of the war. The Evening Post republished yesterday from the August bulletin of this society the figures relating to the direct losses of human life during two years of war: 15,876,800 dead and wounded; 3,373,700 invalids.

It is a startling story, but it is a compilation made from the official documents of different nations. These figures are staggering. They are almost unbelievable.

There has been marked advance made in the sanitation of camps, marked advance made in the hospitals where the wounded are treated, but there is something about trench warfare that we have not known before, and the effect is marked in the number of invalids.

It is believed that many of these wounded are counted twice; that is, that the men are returned to the firing line after having recovered from their wounds and are wounded or killed. This is doubtless true, but it does not detract from the impressiveness of this record.

These figures relate only to losses on land. They do not take into account the losses at sea or the civilian losses from raids and bombardments and airships.

Manifestly, these nations cannot much longer maintain this struggle. The average loss now is 30,000 daily, and in these drives it must be far more. The average cost is 105 millions daily. This will exhaust not only the treasury but the credit of these nations.

These losses give a new aspect to the deportation of the men from Belgium to Germany against which Cardinal Mercier and the Belgian bishops protest.

It is admitted that the military authorities are daily deporting thousands of inoffensive citizens in order to set them to forced labor in Germany.

There has been some dispute concerning the facts as to the ravages of war in different fields, and some difficulty in determining the nature of the acts and the responsibility for the acts. All war is marked by many forms of inhumanity. Brutal passions are free and they exhaust themselves in expression. In such cases the crime is personal.

But when a population is deported; when, as from Lille, France, the men and women are taken in bodies of hundreds of thousands into Germany, and when as from Belgium, thousands of men are deported into Germany, the responsibility rests upon the military authorities of the German Empire.

It is an official act. It is the application of Bernhardi's theory of war. It is the living expression of Treitschke's philosophy. It brings civilization face to face with the greatest problem of centuries. The awful story told in the record of nearly 20 millions of men destroyed.—Louisville Post.

WHEAT FOR HOGS.

The Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station has obtained information of value to pork-producers especially in seasons when the corn crop is short, by carrying on experimental work with other crops grown on the farm. By conducting feeding trials with wheat it has been shown that under some conditions wheat may well be used for hog feeding instead of corn. Results obtained show that when corn is worth 70 cents or more a bushel, wheat may be profitably substituted for corn, if the wheat is worth 90 cents or less. Likewise if corn is worth 80 cents per bushel, wheat is worth $1.03 a bushel as hog feed.

It has been further shown that pork may be produced more cheaply by adding a small amount of tankage to a mixture of corn and wheat than by feeding these feeds without such a supplement.

For example, the cost of producing 100 pounds of pork with corn and tankage was 60 cents less than when corn alone was used. This would mean an additional profit to the producer of $100 or more on each car load of hogs fed.

The results of these tests are reported in full in Bulletin 136 entitled Feeding Wheat to Fattening Hogs, published by the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station.

Fight to Elect Dry Legislature.

Princeton, Nov. 20.—In keeping with a concerted movement thru out the State looking to the election of the Democratic members of the Legislature next year favorable to submitting to the vote of the people an amendment to the State constituion prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors, an organization is being perfected among Democrats here for that purpose. Prominent Democrats, who are also recognized as dry leaders, are connected with the movement, and every county in this section will be organized and a determined effort made to nominate and elect Democratic Senators and Representatives favorable to the prohibition amendment measure. Dry leaders here are elated at the prospects and it is generally believed here that such an amendment to the State constiution would carry.

Farmers Have Prosperous Time

Owingsville, Nov. 20.—Agents for the American Tobacco Co., are fast buying up all the better grades of Bath county's 1916 crop at 12½ cents to 22 cents a pound the highest prices ever paid here at this time of year. The crop is said to be an unusually fine one, but there is complaint that it is weighing out light. Corn is selling at $4 a barrel in the field, and, taken altogether, farmers of Bath county were never so prosperous as now.

Record Price for Turkeys.

Owingsville, Nov. 20.—Turkey buyers have agents in every part of the county eagerly buying all of these fowls they can get at 20 cents a pound on foot. This is the highest price ever paid here. The crop is said to be rather shorter than usual, but the birds are unusually large and are in fine condition. Some of the gobblers bring over $6 apiece. The two poultry dealers ship thousands of turkeys daily for the Thanksgiving market.

High School Bazaar.

Burlington High School will give its third annual bazaar Wednesday afternoon and evening November 29, 1916.

From 5 to 8 at the school house, a supper will be served. The menu will consist of soup, chicken, ham, potatoes peas, celery, pickels, pumpkin pie, cake, ice cream.

At eight o'clock at Library Hall, the Junior Class will present the comedy, "Higbee of Harvard." Come prepared to take in everything. Come with your friends and enjoy the event.

Paris, Nov. 20—A number of Bourbon county young men who have been employed on the wheat ranch of E. They will return in the spring.

CAULIFLOWER IN FAVOR

Vegetable Is Closely Related to the Cabbage Tribe.

Very Rich Soil Required, and It Must Be Given Most Particular Treatment—Market Demands Snowy White Heads.

Cauliflower is closely related to the cabbage tribe, but much more refined in its habits and more difficult to cultivate. It requires a very rich soil and the most particular treatment, and no farmer or gardener would be justified in attempting its cultivation on a large scale, or to depend upon it as a market crop without first having thoroughly studied its peculiarities and requirements.

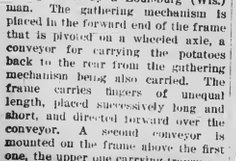
The market desires snowy white heads, so that protection is universally practiced to accomplish this purpose. Three methods are used: (1) the breaking of half a dozen or more leaves over the top of the cauliflower head. The stems of the leaves are not severed entirely, so that the leaves remain green. (2) Breaking or bending over the leaves as just explained, and pinning with toothpicks or small pins. This is a very satisfactory method for all sections. (3) Bringing the leaves together over the head and tying. This is an excellent plan, but requires more time than securing with the toothpicks. The protection should begin when the heads are about an inch and a half in diameter.

Cauliflower is considered a delicacy on most tables, and it pays to exercise special care in the marketing. Although barrels are often used, crates or baskets are better. A package which will not hold more than a dozen or at most two dozen heads certainly has an advantage over the barrels.

If the heads are of good size, snowy white, wrapped in fancy paper, and marketed in new, clean packages they cannot fail to attract attention, and command good prices.

AUTUMN DEMAND FOR CELERY

Tendency to Rush Product to Market Before It Is Well Blanched—Loss in Trimming.



The bracing fall weather will stimulate the demand for celery. At this season when it is selling readily at good prices, there is a tendency to rush celery to market before it is well blanched. This is a mistake, because it necessitates severe trimming at the market end, and the product goes to the cheaper trade. To catch the best grade, celery must be fully blanched, clean and well trimmed.

"Handling" celery should be finished promptly and the rows ridged as fast as possible. If the soil is allowed to get into the hearts of the plants it will cause rot. Celery intended for storage should not be ridged. In some quarters there is a prejudice against blanching celery with boards. It is claimed that blanching with earth makes it crisper and gives it a better flavor. Just the same, much of the product grown in various parts of the country is blanched with boards, and it sells for top prices, too.

POTATO GATHERER IS HANDY

Mechanism Is Placed on Forward End of Frame of Device—Conveyor Carries Potatoes.

Wisconsin is coming to the front as a potato state, and as a standardized variety potato state that uses pedigreed seed it leads them all. Naturally, potato interests are receiving the attention of inventors more or less in that state. Here we are showing a drawing of a recent patent of a potato gatherer by a Louisburg (Wis.) man. The gathering mechanism is placed in the forward end of the frame that is pivoted on a wheeled axle, a conveyor for carrying the potatoes back to the rear from the gathering mechanism being also carried. The frame carries fingers of unequal length, placed successively long and short, and directed forward over the conveyor. A second conveyor is mounted on the frame above the first one, the upper one carrying transverse rake bars.—Farming Business.

Potato Gatherer.

MANURE APPLIED IN GARDEN

Fresh Fertilizer Induces Rank Growth of Stem and Leaf—Yield Is Greatly Reduced.

Barnyard manure is good for the garden if applied at the right time, but there are times when its application is harmful. Fresh manure, when applied immediately before planting, cannot be thoroughly incorporated with the soil. As a result the land is hard to work and the ground is loose instead of compact. Fresh manure also induces a rank growth of stem and leaf, and, as a result of these factors, the yield of most vegetables is greatly reduced.

GRADING AND SHIPPING EGGS TO MARKET

CARTON FOR SELLING SELECT MARKET EGGS.

It is necessary to exercise care in gathering, grading, and shipping eggs to market in order to obtain the top market price. Where the production is large, it is sometimes preferable to sell the selected eggs, and those of inferior quality (making two grades) through a commission house in New York city. The price obtained in this way after deducting the cost of the case, fillers, express and commission is generally higher than the local price, unless you are shipping to a nearby city trade. There is no object in shipping eggs to New York in the attractive pasteboard cartons holding one dozen eggs each. These are to be used for supplying local druggists (for soda fountains) grocers and retail trade, and it requires only a short time to establish a reputation in your cartoned eggs and obtain a premium of several cents per dozen above the local price of store eggs.—Clemson College Bulletin.

REMEDY FOR STUNTED FOWLS

Ax Is Best Thing, as They Are Absolutely Worthless—Only Cure Is That of Prevention.

Questions are often received asking what can be done with stunted chicks, and what is the reason for their being stunted.

Stunted chicks are almost invariably the result of poor care on the part of the owner. Sometimes the fault can be traced directly to the parent stock being low in vitality, but it is usually caused by the attendant being lax in his care of the stock.

The reason why late hatched chicks are often stunted and good for nothing is that the owners fail to give them the necessary shade and protection from lice. Badly ventilated sleeping quarters are a very productive source of stunted chicks.

There can be no remedy for stunted fowls, unless it be the ax. They are absolutely worthless. The only cure is that of prevention. Give the fowls plenty of the right kind of nourishing food, pure water, abundant shade and afford the means of sufficient exercise.

Occasionally a chick becomes stunted because it is placed in a brooder or run with larger chicks which trample it so much that it is given a serious setback. Never mix broods of chicks of different ages.

Good strong breeding stock and proper care will eliminate stunted chicks from any flock.

COLD DOESN'T DESTROY LICE

Parasites Come Out of Cracks and Crevices In Winter and Take Nourishment From Hens.

Remember that cold does not kill lice. They lie dormant if away from the fowls, but they can be active if warmed up on the roost. They come out of cracks and crevices even in winter and take their share of nourishment from the hens, especially if boxes of ashes or earth are not furnished for them.

The big lice are always extremely active in winter. Watch the fluffs of the fowls for these and fill them thick with a good insect powder. Nothing finishes off the big blood and oil suckers so quickly as a good insect powder. Get them killed off before chick hatching time.

SOLUTION FOR KILLING LICE

Air-Slaked Lime, Carbolic Acid and Finely Ground Tobacco Will Make Efficient Killer.

A very strong lice killer is made by taking one pint of air-slaked lime, one ounce of carbolic acid, and three pounds of finely ground tobacco or tobacco dust.

Common soil if very dry and clean, mixed with carbolic acid, will make an efficient lice powder. The secret of killing mites or lice is to keep everlastingly at it.

YOUNG CHICKS RELISH MILK

Has Most Favorable Influence on Growth and Tends to Greatly Reduce Death Rate.

The feeding of milk to young chicks has a most favorable influence on the growth and on lessening the mortality.

It tends to prevent mortality from all causes, and if fed soon enough and for a sufficiently long period greatly reduces the death rate caused by bacillary white diarrhea.

VALUE OF OVERGROWN FOWLS

No Better In Any Particular Than Those of Normal Size—Better to Develop Laying Qualities.

Overgrown fowls are no better in any particular than those of normal size. The breeding, care and selection designed for increasing size, and better be devoted to the development of laying qualities and table quality instead of quantity.

PREPARE FOWLS FOR MARKET

Attractive Appearance of Bird Makes It Sell Well—Fattening Ration of Nebraska Station.

A little time and feed spent in putting extra weight on the fowls to be marketed not only means that many more pounds to be sold, but it adds to the quality and salableness of the fowls. Watch a customer in a meat market selecting a fowl for the Sunday dinner and the fact will be demonstrated. A plump, well-rounded bird may have too much fat on its carcass—that is, more than the average housewife cares to have on the fowl in preparing it for the table—but a certain amount of grease is wanted, and this fact, together with the more attractive appearance of the fowl, makes that particular bird sell first, even though the price may be considerably higher than that of its bony neighbor.

For quick fattening just prior to marketing the poultrymen at the Nebraska Agricultural college recommend a ration of 60 per cent cornmeal, 20 per cent low-grade flour and 20 per cent middling. This is mixed with skim milk to the consistency of a batter and fed morning and night.

It is a good plan to starve the birds for 12 hours before giving them the first of this feed. This will sharpen their appetites and give them a good start. They should be fattened for about two weeks in a small pen or crate until ready for market or for killing.

RAPE FOR WINTER PASTURES

Farmer Who Expects to Carry Over Few Hogs Should Have Patch—Do Not Buy Feed.

A circular from the extension department of the college of agriculture of the University of Arkansas says about rape:

Every farmer who expects to carry over a few pigs for the winter should plant a patch of rape for winter pasture. "Do not buy feed when it can be grown," should be the motto of every farmer. Arkansas buys too much pork when we can grow pork cheaper here than can the farmers of any of the northern states.

CULL CHICKEN FLOCK CLOSE

Retain Nothing but Well-Matured Pullets and Husky Males—Fatten and Market Surplus.

Cull your flocks, and cull closely. A chicken that has not commenced to lay at present had better be disposed of rather than kept over through the long winter months.

You cannot cull too closely. Keep nothing but well-matured pullets and husky, well-matured males. Send all else to market at once.

Pen them up in closely constructed coops and fatten, giving them the finishing touches for market, same as a steer or a hog.

CABBAGE GOOD FOR POULTRY

One of Most Easily Provided of Green Feeds—Rig Up a Rack for Sprouting Oats.

All the green stuff the chickens get you will have to furnish them. Cabbage is one of the most easily provided foods in this line. You can, if you are handy, make a little place for sprouting oats, and these are fine. There are regular sprouting racks, but they are not necessary. If you once see one you can rig up a rack that will answer every purpose.

CHEAP FEEDS ARE EXPENSIVE

Low-Priced Grains Possess Very Little Food Value—Better Give First-Class Grains.

Cheap foods and spoiled grain are often sold as poultry food at comparatively low prices, but the food value is so low in most of these that they are actually more expensive to feed than are first-class grains.

What would he give for the coffee you serve?

Like a million other women, you can serve coffee that he would give most anything to have—coffee which starts the day "right" for all.

Everyone loves the rich flavor of Arbuckles' Coffee. Of all the coffees in America today, it is by far the most popular!

One woman says: "My husband used to swallow his coffee and hurry off. Now we have Arbuckles' and you'd think it was Sunday the way he lingers over his breakfast."

Until you try Arbuckles' you will never know what a difference good coffee can make in your home.

Today there are whole towns where Arbuckles is practically the only coffee used. In one State, alone, in a year, four pounds of Arbuckles' Coffee was used for every man, woman and child in the State—four times as many pounds of coffee as the population of the State! Arbuckle Bros., New York.

OLD MAIL BAGS.

The repair and proper maintenance of mail bags is in an establishment at Wasbington, and the number repaired and placed in good condition in the last year was 1,000,000. One of the difficulties connected with this repairing process was the accumulated dirt and dust which attached to these bags when returned from the service. A system was finally adopted consisting of large tumbling barrels, each having a capacity of several hundred bags. Driven rapidly by electric power, the dust confined to a tightly constructed room and carried off by blowers and lodged in immense canvas receptacles, resembling a dirigible balloon when inflated, this process was found thoroughly suitable. Four thousand a day are treated by this process. The life of a mail bag is about six years, but the rough nsage to which it is exposed makes many of them unfit for repair. Such bags as still have good material make what is known as "pieced bags." Many are thus reclaimed and returned to service. The advent of the parcel post has made it necessary to enlarge the repair shop, because at times it was found impossible to obtain bags from the contractor in quantities sufficient to meet the demand. A manufacturing feature was therefore added, and in the last two years more than 250,000 bags have been produced.

The little geranium patch that has been causing so much bother may become a money maker, in the opinion of J. H. Koss, San Francisco, Cal., a chemist, who has discovered that a certain type of acid will turn the pulp of flowers into almost any color of dye. Koss declares that bis discovery will not only answer the problem of the aniline dye scarcity, but will make every man his own dyer. The geranium is the best subject for dye making, he explains, because of the quantity of oil it contains. The colors of green, purple, red, yellow and two shades of brown may be made from the geranium. After the color has been secured Koss bas a cbemical for making it fast.

They will not only carry you along in their own atmosphere, but they will inspire you to do unfortunate things you probably would not have thought of without them. Have faith in unfortunate happenings. Remember that every streak of good luck is bound to end. Look downward, not upward; sideways, not straigbt ahead. Have a grouch.

The gold supply of the United States is now within $50,000,000 of the combined holdings of the four great central banks of Europe—the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Bank of Germany and the Bank of Russia. Four years ago these banks had $608,000,000 more gold than the American stock. To put the situation in another way, the amount of gold money in the United States is now 30 per cent of the world's total stock, whereas in 1914 it was only 22 per cent.

There are still 254,945,589 acres of public land in the country, that is, land that may be taken up by settlers. That is a whole lot of land—more than two acres for every man, woman and child of us; but it is feared that some of it, especially in some western states, is so oblique that it almost stands on edge.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT

Train Hits Automabile at Crossing, Killing One Occupant Another Fatally Injured

Both Victims Grant County Men

Last Friday morning, a horrible accident occurred at the crossing on the Q. & C Railroad at the farm of Geo. W Sleet near Crittenden, Grant county. W Perry Ammerman and Jack Peebles were coming from Crittenden in Ammerman's automobil, and noticing the approach of the fast southbound passenger train stopped to let it go by, and after it had passed started to cross the track, not noticing the approach of the local northbound passenger train, and as the auto reacehd the middle of the track it was struck by the swift running locomotive and carried some distance, a wreck ed mass. The train was stopped and it was found that Peebles had been instantly killed, his head being mashed in a horrible manner. Ammerman was in an unconscious condition and apparently fatally injured. Both men were taken aboard the train and brought to Walton where they laid in the depot until about noon when the remains of Peebles were taken to the home of his parents in Crittenden and Ammerman was taken to the Good Samaritan hospital by A. R Edwards, where he died Saturday. Ammerman was about fifty years old and had a wife and five children, four children by his first wife and one by his present wife. Peebles was a son of Mr. and Mrs. W Ed. Peebles and was about twenty years old. Both men were highly esteemed for their good citizenship.

Dry Up Persistent Milke.

Occasionally it is desirable to dry up a cow in order to fatten her for beef. The safe and simple process is—don't milk her.

More often the question is asked whether it is wise to dry up a persistent milker a few weeks before calving, and if so, what is the safe and simple process.

It is generally believed that a short vacation period is good for heavy yielders. There are cows that will give several quarts of milk a day up to the time of calving. In the long run these cows will prove to be the profitable members of the herd, even if they do not always start off with a big flow when fresh.

If for any reason it is desired to dry off a cow that is soon to calve, it is safe to milk her once a day, taking about half of her milk. When she drops to a quart a day she can be turned loose with safety and not milked at all, simply watching her to see that no inflammation sets in.

With this treatment should go limited feeding. With a maintenance ration of dry feed only lactation will ordinarily cease altogether without any injurious results.

Coal Famine Threatened.

J. P Strother, coal dealer of this place, went to Cincinnati the first of the week and while there contracted for two barges of coal to be delivered here on the first high water rise. The coal famine here has become alarming—coal air stoves have taken the place of ranges, and heating stoves are being heated with wood. Woodpiles and woodchoppers are numerous in Milton.—Milton News

New Organization of Trappers

Burlington boasts of a trapping club composed entirely of young ladies. They have secured the exclusive privilege to trap on a farm near town, and have entered into the sport with a determination to make a success of collecting furs if the varmints will patronize their traps and dead falls. There is a slump in the prices of native furns the responsibility for same can be attributed to the success of these young lady "trappers."

WRITE THE DEPARTMENT

Directory of Kentucky Breeders of Pure Bred Live Stock.

The State Department of Agriculture is preparing a revised edition of a "Directory of Kentucky Breeders of Pure Bred Live Stock," and would appreciate any one who desires his name to appear in same write the Department direct.

This little bulletin has proven a popular one and is mailed not only throughout Kentucky but to other States as many requests are continually coming to the Department for same. It has served to bring before the public where the best foundation stock can be found in this State, hence the necessity of being accurate as possible in its compilation and it is the Department's desire to omit no name in this revised edition of any breeder of pure bred live stock in the State. If any breeder who has not already been in communication with the Department of Agriculture in regard to this will notify Mat S. Cohen, Commissioner of Agriculture, Frankfort, Ky., giving name, address and kind of pure bred stock he raises, his name will be included in this directory thus enabling the Department to make a complete and up-to-date revision of same.

The State of Kentucky is said to owe an ink bill of $200,000. That must be a great game of boodle or graft, for had that amount of printers' ink ever been used in the Bluegrass State there would not be so many voters down that way who do not know how to either read or write.—Austin American.

Returned Home After Spending a Vacation at Petersburg.

G. G Hughes returned last Friday afternoon from Earl Walton's, of Petersburg, where he had sojourned since the day following the recent election. He was assisting Mr. Walton in the re construction of a large barn that was dumaged considerably by wind some several months since. He walked the ten miles and was not the least fagged when he arrived at home.

LIVE-STOCK BREEDING

Success of Cooperative Effort Demonstrated by 136 Community Associations in Wisconsin.

There are some sections of the country that have become noted for the quality of live stock they produce. In most instances this is found to be the result of concentrated effort. The State of Wisconsin offers a splendid illustration of what can be accomplish ed through community breeding associations. Here are to be found 136 organizations devoted to the breeding of high class live stock. Of this number, 108 are promoting cattle, of the different dairy breeds; 2 beef cattle; 10 horses; 2 swine; and 14, general live stock. These associations have met with marked success and prove conclusively that community livestock breeding is not an experiment; when thoroughly organized and properly conducted. Livingston county, Mich., and a considerable section of New York, particularly the region adjacent to Syracuse, are famous for their dairy cattle. In Iowa prominence has been gain ed in swine raising. The bluegrass region of Kentucky, noted as the center of American saddle horse breeding, affords a further example of the success resulting from unity of effort and purpose. There are still other sections where attention is being given to the production of the different classes of live stock. Each is noted as a breeding center, and buyers who pay the highest prices are attracted from other states and even foreign countries

BIG SALE OF DAIRY STOCK.

James W. Cleek and Son Closing Out Their Fine Herd.

Stock Was Carefully Selected.

In this issue appears the sale of James W. Cleek and son near Walton. They are going out of the dairy business and will dispose of a well bred herd of dairy cattle which they have brought together at a cost of considerable labor and the expenditure of a large amount of money. They would have none other than the best of cattle.

Tribute to the Cow.

Most potent of all single influence in the building of this the mightiest nation in history, is the cow. Her sons drew the plows which first cultivated the land of the new world, hauled to the markets the products of the field, and with slow energy moved the chattles and household goods beyond the mountains to new homes in the farther West.

They supplied the beef which is the food of the Anglo-Saxon, a race that was never conquered since history began. They furnished the shoes of pioneers who trod the unknown wilds and made of them the farmsteads and cities of our present enlightment. They gave the clothes and robes to protect the pioneer against the destroying blasts of winter and made commerce possible before the railroad was. They covered the chair upon which he sat, filled the mattress upon which he slept and glued together the furniture he used.

The old cow is mother of the whole bovine race. From the road side weed she manufactures the most nourishing foods. She is the ready aid of the farmer, the pet of the rich man and the help of the poor. She is the economist of the people and the conservator of their resources. She partakes of the grass of field and leaves the farm richer for her presence.

As she helped to develop the farm from the wilderness and as she ate of its first fruits so she will renew the life of the soil and make a still greater agriculture possible.

In all our history the cow has been man's closest friend and benefactor. Upon her products are built the great business interests which center in the stock yards the creamery, the shoe factories, the harness shops and the mills.

Take away the cow and our banks would close, and the wheels of commerce would cease to turn. Foster and care for her and business flourishes, the fertility of the soil is conserved and she becomes the custodian of the Nations prosperity.

Bestowing Honors.

Caddie Maurer made a business trip to Belleview, last Saturday, and in his absence the Democrats held a meeting in his office in the court house and elected him Democratic committeeman for Burlington precinct. A better choice could not have been made as he will give the duties of the position proper attention.

Bnsy With Race Horses.

Fred Morris, near town, is now a pretty busy man looking after the several race horses he has taken to winter. He will spare no efforts to have them go thru the winter in good condition.

Has Quit Fishing.

Ed. Rice went fishing one day last week alone. Shortly after his arrival at the fishing grounds he slipped and fell in the creek receiving a pretty good wetting. He lost no time in getting back home when he took an oath to go fishing no more this year. His angling efforts this year have not proven a very considerable success, and he suspends operations fish hungry.

IT WILL BE A BIG SHOW.

Corn, Cakes and Pies From Every Direction Will Be On Exhibition.

This week the Recorder gives its readers the premium list of Boone and Kenton counties' Corn Show which will be held in Seventh Street Market House, Covington, December 6th and 7th. The retail merchants of Covington donate the prices, and a reference to the list will convince you of their liberality, and the people of Boone county should testify to an appreciation of the interest they are taking in the exhibition by a liberal patronage in the way of attendance and the placing on exhibition a long list of articles. Expert judges have been secured to decide the many contests which insures every exhibitor to get all that is coming to him or her in way of prizes. Look over the list and send in your entries at an early date.

Pork Production Not Receiving Due Attention.

Pork production is not receiving the attention within our state that the industry merits and farmers are slow in utilizing the pig to convert their crop into a concentrated, readily marketed product.

Corn is advancing in price, so much so that the farmer must look to some more economical crop with which to fatten his swine.

Experiments in feeding have been made on many cheaper feeding stuffs with varying degrees of success. Among the feeds that may be produced on almost any Kentucky farm peas and alfalfa have been found the most efficient.

There is nothing to indicate that prices for pork will decrease within the next year or two, and it will be to every farmers' advantage to look to the raising of hogs. A few brood sows can be carried through the winter at a small expense by supplementing alfalfa hay or pea hay with a small amount of corn.

There need be no fear of overproduction, for when the war is over the larders and sties of Europe mmust be replenished and they must look to this country to do it. Be prepared.

Owing to Mr Sandford's great age his friends are uneasy about him.

PREMATURE ELECTION.

Democratic Committeemen Selected Out of Time.

The Work Will Be Done Over Next Saturday Afternoon.

The election of Democratic committeemen in this county, last Saturday, was premature, next Saturday afternoon being the time the powers that be had set for the choosing of county committeemen. The boys got balled up in some manner and had the precinct meetings called for last Saturday afternoon. Bevarly, of Walton; Wilson, of Beaver; Berkshire, of Petersburg; Brown, of Belleview, and Maurer, of Burlington, who were elected in their precincts last Saturday, were on hand last Monday afternoon to organize but discovered that their election was irregular, and nothing towards organizing was done.

Victory For Farmers.

Broadly speaking, the line-up was between town and country, between industry and agriculture. Mr. Hughes carried the East and the Middle West, Mr. Wilson the South and the Far West. In the case of every important industrial community except Ohio, Hughes was victorious, although by Widely different margins. The Democrats had expected to obtain a large measure of support from the wage-earners in the big industries of the country. It looks now as if they had received less than usual. The Republicans were apparently successful during the last two weeks of the campaign in holding a sufficient proportion of the votes of the laborers in the protected manufactures. But they lost much of their grip on the agrarian communities of the Mississippi Valley and the mountain States. The Democrats were saved from a severe defeat only by their success in making inroads on the normal support received by the Republicans from the farmers in the newer parts of the country. More than any election which has taken place since the Civil War, the old American territorial Democracy, the Democracy of Jackson and Douglas has reasserted itself.

Mr. Wilson has done what Mr. Bryan failed to do. He has recovered for the Democratic party the support of a great majority of the predominantly agricultural States. This support has not the same economic meaning as it had during the pioneer period, when the farmers in the newer parts of the country were in debt and though themselves oppressed by the money power. The Far West is not aggrieved and rebellious as it was at the time of the "greenback" and "Populist" movements. But it still has a mind of its own, sharply defined from that of the rest of the country. In a combination with the solid South and with one or two other industrial States of the Middle West, it is strong enough barely to swing a national victory.—The New Republic.

Some Will Say, Turn Them Out

When we speak of the misdoings of some officer, some politician will say turn him out and put in some one else. This has been the song for many years and has become worn and thread bare without success. Now it is time to take a different step. It has often been asked why are you a Republican and why are you a Democrat? Why any one would ask such a question, while there are many reasons. I will make the answer short by saying, I am a Democrat not because some one else is and not because my father was, but because I believed the Democrats servants would protect us from the opposite parties in taking the rights and privileges of the people in anarchist is one who will steal the rights, privileges and the dollar, at the point of a gun. Then what is he who will take the rights, privileges and the dollar at the point of an unfair and unjust law. We ought not to vote for a Democrat county Representative as long as the resident hunting license law is in force under a Democratic administration. J. E. HALL.

The Public Watering Trough.

The public watering trough is a nuisance that should be abolished. It is easy to comprehend the necessity which compels the doing away with the public roller towel, the bar of soap and public drinking cup, and the same argu ments for abolishing the public watering trough are applicable, save that they apply to horse and not man.

It is common knowledge that some of the worst diseases of horses, such as glanders and strangles, are transmitted in this way. Some of the transportation companies place notices in their establishments to the effect that teamsters are not to water at public watering troughs, under penalty of dismissal. It is quite certain that this is the most common means of spreading strangles (distemper) among horses and the public watering trough should be legally abolished.

Prince Albert gives smokers such delight, because —its flavor is so different and so delightfully good;

—it can't bite your tongue;
—it can't parch your throat;
—you can smoke it as long and as hard as you like without any comeback but real tobacco happiness!

On the reverse side of every Prince Albert package you will read:

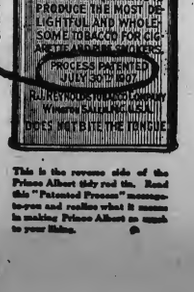
"PROCESS PATENTED JULY 30TH, 1907"

That means to you a lot of tobacco enjoyment. Prince Albert has always been sold without coupons or premiums. We prefer to give quality!

PRINCE ALBERT

the national joy smoke

Copyright 1916 by R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.



YOU'LL find a cheery howdy-do on tap no matter how much of a stranger you are in the neck of the woods you drop into. For, Prince Albert is right there—at the first place you pass that sells tobacco! The toppy red bag sells for a nickel and the tidy red tin for a dime; then there's the handsome pound and half-pound tin humidors and the pound crystal-glass humidor with sponge-moistener top that keeps the tobacco in such hand-up trim all the time!

In goodness and in pipe satisfaction is all we or its enthusiastic friends ever claimed for it!

It answers every smoke desire you or any other man ever had! It is so cool and fragrant and appealing to your smokeappetite that you will get chummy with it in a mighty short time!

Will you invest 5c or 10c to prove out our say-so on the national joy smoke?

Price of Sand Advancing

The other day a lady in Cincinnati went to a store to buy some sand for her canary bird, and was surprised when the clerk told her that the price had advanced from five to fifteen cents per package on account of the great demand for sand to make sandbags in the European war. The combinations of wealth are certainly running the boosting of prices in the clouds. It seems that the people can get no relief through the channel of law, and some of these days they will take it in their own hands and there will be some big doings.

THANKSGIVING DAY PROCLAMATION

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 27.—Gov. Stanley issued his first Thanksgiving proclamation tonight. The proclamation follows:

While in half the world-shattered households watch and pray in the midst of hunger and desolation for the dead and maimed upon the fields of battle, or for the preservation of dear ones who yet endure the perils and the privations of pitiless war, here, happy and unbroken families about bright firesides, in the midst of peace and plenty, thank Him whose loving kindness endureth forever, for the seed time and the harvest, for industrial prosperity, for domestic tranquility and for national security.

We are indeed, a chosen people, cherishing, not without cause, the fond hope that under the magnificent providence of God and the wise guidance of patriotic and patient statesmen, these United States are destined to forge from the tragedy of all the ages with national honor unsullied and with out the loss of one precious life, It is peculiarly appropriate that we should, with reverent hearts, devoutly thank the Giver of all good and perfect gifts, for the multiplied blessings of peace, happiness and prosperity.

Now, Therefore, I, A. O. Stanley, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, November 30, as a day of thanksgiving in the Commonwealth of Kentucky for the year 1916, and recommend its appropriate observance.

Done at Frankfort, November 27, 1916, and in the hundred and 25th year of the Commonwealth.

Panther or Something.

Residents of the back part of Switzerland county are experiencing a scare on account of reports of a panther roaming around. It is surmised that the panther, if there be one, is the same animal which is alleged to have escaped from a circus train while passing thru Elizabethtown about three weeks ago.—Lawrenceburg Press

Belief that oil in paying quantities will be found in McCreary county has grown to such an extent that a number of local men are backing their judgment with cash. Large numbers of leases, covering a block of several thousand acres in the Marsh Creek section, have been secured and other parties are signing up a big acreage of the Wayne side of the county. It is expecting holes will be put down in the near future in both these sections. The recent drilling of a producer at Williamsburi, and the high price of the crude products are stimulants which are helping to push the developments more. —McCreary County Advocate.

Town vs. Country.

One serious obstacle to the cordial relations that should exist between all classes of American life is the unwelcoming antagonism that so often exists between the town and the country.

Why this shold exist is hard to see, in view of the fact that each is largely dependent upon the other in many of the relations of life. Unfortunately, however, it is a fact with which we have to deal when considering any matter of import to the people of any given section.

This prejudice shows itself in political life, in church life, in social life and even in business. It frequently manifests itself in a conviction on the country man that the town man is always watching for an opportunity to "do" him. He is convinced that all existant evil has its origin in the town. The town man to his mind, exists for no other purpose than to prey on the farmers.

On the other hand it frequently occurs that the people of the town become imbued with the belief that the country people "have it in for them."

Thus are the relations between the two in a strained condition, and in many cases on the most ordinary business relations are hindered and blocked by this unreasoning and unreasonable jealousy.

Perhaps you say the picture is over-drawn. It is not. The writer has lived and is familiar with just such communities. And, unfortunately, in many instances the prejudice is well founded.

It is a fact that the clannish spirit is the last to die of all the savage instincts of man. "My clan and my class mean everything to me, and your clan and your class are my natural enemies." That is the sub-conscious reasoning of many men even yet—and of many in whom we would least expect it.

Is there any such a remedy? Yes, there is one, but it is an individual remedy. That is charity—that charity which "Covereth a multitude of sins" that charity which "thinketh no evil." Like many other causes of friction between people, this condition grows from slight causes, and a little tolerance toward remedying matters. And bear in fact that the two elements are mutually dependent upon each other—their interests one. Let each say to himself, as did another of old, "We be brethren."

Ever be a genuine booster. Charity toward the neighbor! Try it. You will be surprised how rapidly he will grow in your estimation.—Oldham Era.

Why We Have an Electoral College.

The founders of the Republic had an idea that they would insure the best men from the different States, and let the latter sit as a kind of jury in passing upon the rights of distinguished Americans to be considered for the great office of President. It was a beautiful theory, but in practice the idea is a real "liver," as the men who constitute the electoral college are composed prinsipally of citizens belonging to the class designated as the "illustrious unknown." The electors receive a positive mandate from the voters, and automatically register the choice of their State. If an elector was supposed to use an initiative of judgment the political parties would now be engaged in hunting about among the 531 electors to see whether they might not "pisk up a few". But that is not the system.

The electoral college has never met the expectations of the country. There were no candidates when the first President was chosen, but the country has settled down to the practical unanimous agreement that Washington was to be selected—and he was. The early electoral college voted for two men, it being understood that the one receiving the greatest number of votes should be the choice for President, while the second choice should be for Vice-President. In the college of 1800-1801 Jefferson and Burr each received 73 votes, and in consequence Jefferson came very near missing out as the "father of democracy." The muddle ultimately resolved in favor of Jefferson and the House of Representatives ended the business of the electors voting for two person on the same ballot, and ever aftowards the two offices of President and Vice-President, has been considerd separately. The inconsistencies and eccentricities of the system have evidenced themselves in many elections.

Shipping Cream.

The chief advantage of shipping cream to a creamery instead of making butter are: It lessens the hard work of making and marketing butter; a year-round market for all cream produced is assured and money spent for better cattle is safely invested since there is a market for the envtire product. A farmer may safely keep more cattle than he could without this market.

The income from cows is found not only in the monthly check received for cream, but also in calves, pigs, and chickens raised on the skim-milk, and in the manure for the improvement of the farm.

A Time of Unusual Prosperity.

We are passing through what is perhaps the greatest business boom of history. It is a time of unusual opportunities for the making of money—but it is a time also of unusual dangers, when people need to show even more than ordinary intelligence and caution in making an investment.—Editorial Cincinnati Times-Star.

Sunday Closing Laws.

A friend of the Recorder at Big Bone requested the publication of the Sunday Closing Law, and the following is supposed to be the laws to which he referred:

KENTUCKY STATUTES.

Any person who shall, on Sunday, keep open a barroom or other place for the sale of spirituous vinous or malt liquors, or who shall sell or otherwise dispose of such liquors, or any of them, on Sunday, shall be fined not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars for each offense.

ACTS 1910.

If any person holding a license to retail spirituous, vinous or malt liquors shall violate such provisions of his declaration to or on oath as the time such license is granted, or shall violate any of the provisions of this or any other act prohibiting the sale of such liquors on Sunday or at unauthorized times, and any citizen of the county shall make affidavit showing such violation, it shall be the duty of the Commonwealth's Attorney immediately on receiving said affidavit to file a petition in equity in the name of the Commonwealth in the circuit court of the county asking that the license be forfeited, which suit shall be tried by the court as other equity cases, and the Commonwealth or the defendant shall have the right to appeal as in other equity cases. But before any citizen shall be prepared to file any such action for the forfeiture of such license he shall be required to file his own affidavit and the affidavit of some other citizen of said county that the provision of the law as above indicated have been violated. Upon the trial of any such action instituted by the Commonwealth's Attorney or by any citizen as herein provided, if the evidence discloses that the holder of any such license has been guilty of any such violation of the acts or any other law as to the sale of liquor on Sunday, for the first offense the court shall enter judgment forfeiting the license issued by the Commonwealth of Kentucky through the court or county clerk. After judgment for the first offense has been entered as herein provided against the defendant, if he again violates the law, he shall in like manner be proceeded against and if it again be adjudged that he has violated the law judgment shall be entered forfeiting the license issued to the Commonwealth as aforesaid and by the municipality. If after such conviction he again violates the law, he shall in like manner as for the first two offenses be proceeded against, and if judgment be rendered against him for the third offense entered against him all license issued or held by him shall be forfeited and no license shall thereafter be granted or transferred to him for a period of one year, and no such license shall be granted or transferred to any person authorizing such person to transact or carry on such business in the building occupied by the defendant at the time the judgment for the third offense was entered against him for a period of one year thereafter.

A room where intoxicating liquors are sold by virtue of a license issued under laws of this State for selling spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, or any of them, shall be so arranged either with window or glass doors as that the whole of said room may be in view from the street or highway or any public passway, hall or means of approach passing such room, and no blinds, screens or other obstructions shall be arranged, erected or placed so as to prevent the entire view of said room from the street or high way or such public passway, hall or means of approach upon which the same is situated during such days and hours when the sale of such liquors is prohibited by law. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding thirty days; and in case of conviction for the second offense the court shall porvide in the judgment that the license granted to such person shall be forfeited, and such person shall not be granted any such license within a period of one year.

Fine Crop of Tobacco.

Tobacco men say that the crop this year is the finest in a decade. High prices are expected when the loose leaf markets open. Statistics issued by the U. S. government show a shortage of over fifty million pounds of tobacco in the nation as compared to last year's statistics. This shortage combined with the high quality, indicates that growers will get high prices this winter. Speculators are out in the field paying good prices for the weed and must think the prices are going to be good. The American Tobacco Trust buys ninety-five per cent. of the tobacco and they set the price, and who can tell at this distance what that price will be. Last year the better grades brought good prices, but they were scarce. This year when the crop is an extra good one, the announcement comes that it is low grades that will be in demand. It is always something the farmers haven't got.

DAIRY FACTS

MORE BUTTERFAT IN CREAM

Shorthorns, Jerseys and Guernseys Give Milk With Larger Fat Globules Than Other Cows.

Toughness no more indicates richness in cream than it does in pastry. The more shortening in the pie-crust, up to a reasonable amount, the crisper and mellower it will be. The less butterfat in the cream, the less tough it will be as a general rule.

Milk of Holstein and Ayrshire cows usually has small fat globules, and their cream layer is generally quite thin. Accordingly it often tests much better than one would suppose from the depth of the cream layer. Jerseys, Guernseys and Shorthorns give milk with larger fat globules, and therefore their cream separates and churns more thoroughly than that of the Holstein and Ayrshire.

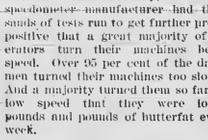
BEST SPEED FOR SEPARATORS

Appalling Loss of Cream Due to Universal Tendency of Operator to Work Machine Slowly.



At Purdue university the experiment station collected and published a lot of data showing the appalling loss in cream due to the universal tendency of separator operators to turn the machine too slowly. Their bulletin No. 116, volume 13, was a revelation to many, many dairymen, who had been losing anywhere up to $100 per year worth of butterfat, simply by turning their separators below speed.

At the fairs recently, a leading speedometer manufacturer had thousands of tests run to get further proofs positive that a great majority of operators turn their machines below speed. Over 95 per cent of the dairymen turned their machines too slowly. And a majority turned them so far below speed that they were losing pounds and pounds of butterfat every week.

DRY PASTURES RAISE PRICES

More General Use of Silo on Dairy Farm Would Have Saved Many Babies In Large Cities.

Dry pastures have raised the price of milk in many cities this year, which means that many a poor little city baby has starved for lack of this life-giving fluid.

It is a long way from a slum baby to a silo, but the more general use of the silo on the dairy farm would have saved many little lives. Pastures are poor things to depend on in dry years.

Sweet Clover Is Rich In Nutritive Qualities and Does Not Bloat—Watch for Frosts.

Sweet clover has been found to be a good feed for dairy cows, not only in respect to its nutritive qualities but because it is said not to bloat. There have, however, been cases recorded of bloating from eating sweet clover that has been frosted. Watch for this condition.

THE ART OF DOING WITHOUT

As time goes on the virtue of self denial is more and more apparent, and the art of doing without more needful. The social sensations of today, the craze for dress, amusements, recreations, automobiling—all the glitter and attractions of a materialistic age—call loudly for self control, self-denial and careful living. And those who try to keep pace with the crowd set a pace that kills.

No man ever succeeds who does not learn to do without. The very basis of religion, of good conduct, or good character lies in the virtue of self mastery and business success.

Did you ever stop to watch a crowd around a street fakir, selling some article of household use—a potato peeler, for instance? How he pursuaded the men that their wives could not peel potatoes without it, found ready purchasers, who laid down their quarters, marched home and presented the article with pride and a right-rous feeling of "helping wife in her daily labor," only to find her peeling potatoes the same old way the next day?

We listen to argument. We persuade ourselves. We are easily convinced that we need, in fact must have, many things that we might well do without. We see things in the shop windows that appeal. We read alluring ads until our resisting power breaks down. We go bargain hunting until we are loaded down with things we cannot use. "I like to go shopping," said a woman one day, "I see so many things I do not need." And that is a finer art than buying a lot of things you will be sorry for.

Doing without may be difficult at times, but it gets you somewhere. All successful careers are built upon it. Saving money and doing without it is a painful process, but the results are mighty pleasant. Sacrifice was never easy and self denial never popular. But you can't have the big things of life if you insist upon having thousands of little things all the time. The boy who wants a bicycle must do without candy and soda and the like, but he knows his wheel will give him lasting pleasures that overbalance the little sacrifices. Saving for a purpose is not difficult, and self denial for larger pleasures become a joy. It is easy to follow the line of least resistance—to do the easy thing; to follow the crowd. But following crowds brings you to no desirable goal.

It is a splendid achievement—this doing without, and few learn it. But the structure it builds is a lasting one and beautiful. And the pitiful fact is that if you do not learn to do without now, there may come a time when you have to do without, and then it will be too late. That is the lesson of the poorhouse and the bread line. And as sure as you practice the sin of self gratification and ignore the virtue of self-control, listen to the lure of the show window, the amusement column, the appeal that is on every hand to spend, and let yourself go you too will join a crowd that is sliding down hill to nowhere, only to get a hard bump at the bottom, when it is too late to amend and wake up to vain regrets. Get thrift habit now—and thrift is just doing without until doing without becomes a habit that has untold blessings in store for those who practice it.

The L. G. Smith & Co., have slaughtered for their firm, 9,000 turkeys for the Thanksgiving market. In addition they have killed and dressed 2,100 turkeys for other parties. They have distributed from this point to the turkey growers $25,000 or six thousand dollars more than any year heretofore at this season. For the dressing they paid out to the pickers $2,500. The price the growers received this year for his turkey is 20 cents per pound, the highest by long odds ever paid for these birds on foot. The supply is in quantity to meet the demand and possibly more so, but the condition of this rare bird is reported poor. The Christmas market will double that of the Thanksgiving so it can be readily seen that teh turkey grower will receive at this point for the years 1913 a sum total of about $60,000. There is no business in Shelbyville, tobacco excepted, this time of the season, that equals our turkey business, this year, giving a double emphasis to that fact.—Shelby Sentinel.

Bonds to raise money for improvement of country roads should not be sold until the funds are actually needed. In one county where the system of financing roads was studied recently by road specialists, it was found that the premature sale of bonds involved a loss aggregating as much as $5,000. The county got the money before it could use it in building the roads and had to pay interest on this money much in excess of what it could obtain on its cash balances in the bank.

It was a sad sight Tuesday to a large crowd, many of whom like "a nip" when they saw the police pouring about forty half-pints of liquor, several bottles of wine and beer into the sewer that had been taken from bootleggers. Not a few turned their backs to keep from witness sing what they termed as "willful waste."—Shelbyville Record.

With the assistance of one dog, Mr. Montgomery caught in ten hours hunting, 36 'possums, four Coons and four skunks. This is some catch.—Mt. Olivet Tri-rates sheerat.

Horticultural Points

HARM BY BLACKBERRY BORER

Spraying Is of No Avail—Cutting and Burning at Time of Regular Pruning Is Favored.

The blackberry cane borer has been seriously troublesome in many parts of the country recently, killing the canes and thus ruining the chances of the crop. No spraying is of any use, but I find cutting and burning does the trick, says a writer in an exchange. There are two ways of doing this work. One is to look for, cut off and burn all the swelled parts of the blackberry canes at the time of the regular winter or early spring pruning. There is no mistaking these swellings, because they are fully double the diameter of the cane itself. It is not necessary to bother with the whole cane—just the swelled part with an inch or two above or below the swelling. The cut pieces may be easily carried in a basket.

Where a very serious attack has occurred, and where other blackberries are growing in the neighborhood, I have found it a good plan to cut off all the young shoots produced before the end of June, so as to destroy the young grubs in them. By that time all the adult beetles will have died, so the canes produced during July will be free from the borers. There is no use saving a "galled" cane, for it can't produce a decent stand of berries. The sooner it is burned the better. It is not necessary to burn the green shoots, because the borers, being footless, cannot crawl to new canes, and are also unable to live on dead wood.

LEAF BLIGHT WORKS INJURY

With Some Varieties of Strawberries It Seriously Weakens Plants—Spray Is Favored.

(From the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station.)

Leaf blight causes spots on the leaves of the strawberry plants, such as are shown in the illustration. With some varieties it very seriously weakens the plants. Varieties like Aroma and Gandy very largely resist it.

Spray with Bordeaux mixture after the crop is harvested, probably after renewing has been done, and give three or four more sprayings at intervals of two weeks. On badly infested beds after the crop is off, mow everything down and let it dry and burn off when there is a brisk wind and follow with a spraying.

AFTER THE PRUNING IS DONE

Carefully Gather Up and Burn All Branches and Twigs — Cover Wounds to Prevent Decay.

It is best, after the pruning operations are over, to:

1. Gather up and remove from the orchard all branches and twigs that have been cut off. Burn them. They afford homes for the diseases and the insects that will attack your trees if the rubbish is left on the ground.

2. Cover the wounds with a coat of good lead paint. This helps to keep out the water and prevent disease and decay.

3. Spray the trees with a solution of one gallon commercial lime-sulphur to nine gallons of water. Spraying just after pruning reduces the cost of applying the material, as there is less brush to cover than at other times. Moreover, it is just the right season for the lime-sulphur spray.

PEAR NEEDS GOOD DRAINAGE

Surplus or Stagnant Water Detrimental to Health of Tree—Underground Ditches Favored.

It is essential to the health of the pear that no surplus or stagnant water be allowed to remain on the surface or in the soil.

If the natural formation of the land does not afford good drainage it should be provided artificially either by underground drains or by surface ditches. The subdrainage method is preferable, because it is more thorough, and if accomplished by well-laid tile, is far more satisfactory.

Breaking up stiff clay land by double-plow subsoiling will in a measure afford temporary subdrainage, but in time the soil will again become compacted and the subsoiling will need to be repeated.

The Future of Labor.

The friends of labor may well be concerned because of recent inflammatory deliverances which seemed to be made by authority. The American Federation of Labor declares that they will resist any injunction that, in their judgment, is contrary to their rights. Mr. Lee declares that they are for eight hour labor for all men, and if they cannot get it they will fight.

This may be rhetorical language or hyperbolical language; but this is the time for the friends of labor, for the laboring men themselves to consider the meaning of these utterances.

You cannot better the condition of laboring men by invoking civil war. We must leave all disputed points to the courts, we must leave all law-making to Congress and the legislative bodies, we must abide by the law as passed until it is declared null and void by the courts. We must abide by the decision of the courts, until through the due process of law, the people of America, including the laboring men, but not composed entirely of the organized labor element, get their decrees written on the statute books.

It is with individuals in America as it is with the nations of Europe, with this difference, that here in America we have a permanent system of arbitration called the court system. The nations of Europe have no such organization, so when they disagree they fight. The result is that the interests of labor are set back fifty years in three years of conflict.

The interests of labor would be set back fifty years in six months of conflict such as Mr. Lee invites and such as the unbalanced declaration of the American Federation of Labor favors.

The Evening Post believes that the laboring men will get the eight-hour law in the course of a reasonable time and it believes moreover, that those eight hours of labor will secure for the laboring men better conditions of life, more of the comforts of life, freedom from fear of the loss of a job or the radical reduction of the purchasing power of wages.

These conditions cannot be obtained through conflict; they must come thru discussion and intelligent action. You cannot possibly increase the purchasing power of eight hours of work by limiting production through force or thru a misconception of the laws of life. You can only get more for eight hours' work by producing more, by being more efficient individually and collectively.

When men, therefore, in America talk about resisting the decrees of the courts, talk about fighting if they cannot get what they want; they are preaching a doctrine the cost of which is to be like unto the cost of war in Europe, and the price in that cost will come more largely from the working classes than from any other class.

We are not blind to the lawlessness of the rich; to their cunning, to their greed, to their love thy neighbor as thyself.—through public discussion and political action that we can shackle cunning; that we can bring great combinations in restraint of trade to the recognition of their obligations to obey all law, even the Sherman anti-trust law.

But the cunning of the rich does not justify the violence of the poor. In this Republic the voice of the people finally controls the courts and Congress and commerce; but it must be a voice like that from Sinai, establishing justice, condemning violence: "Thou shalt not kill;" condemning cunning: "Thou shalt not lie," condemning forcible seizure of other men's goods: "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house;" promoting domestic comfort and happiness: "Honor thy father and mother;" establishing religion and morality: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," and promoting good fellowship among all men; with the new commandment that thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Louisville Post.

Predicts a Mild Winter.

After a few timid approaches winter leaves us wondering what we are to expect. The editor of the Montgomery Illinois News has a pretty fair notion. He has made a survey of the prospect, and ventures the opinion that we are to have a mild winter. Here are his reasons:

Migratory birds were a month late in starting southward flight.

Bark on the trees is thin and light and the outside bark of the soft maples is curling up and scaling on. When a hard, cold winter is in prospect this outside bark lies close and clings to the tree.

Crickets and grasshoppers remained active this fall later than usual.

The covering on the buds of trees and bushes is unusually light.

Moles, up to a week or 10 days ago, were moving around under the sod, while earth worms showed that they had not yet sought winter quarters by coming to the surface after rains.

The shucks on the corn are unusually light and loose this fall.

The U. S Weather Bureau has no opinion. Wedded to science, it is denied all those delightful speculations which engage the humor of folklore. The bureau only knows that it should be cold. If it isn't cold it shall have to leave it to the goosebone philosophers to explain why it wasn't.—St Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Automobile.

The automobile is a pop-eyed, mechnical quadruped found in almost all parts of the earth. They are of various sizes, shapes and colors, and feed on oils and gasoline. Some of them live to be five years old.

They are largely nocturnal in their habits seeming to delight in tearing over the country by night and leaving a lot of mortuary matter in their wake. The eyes of an automobile are so bright that when they look upon a person at night he is absolutely blinded. They seem to enjoy the annoyance they are able to inflict upon people in this way, but a monkey-wrench or two piloted into their face generally breaks them of this nasty habit.

The speed of an automobile is unknown. Lovers of racing have paid enormous sums for well-bred cars and driven them for what they thought sure would prove to be a world's record. Then another car would whiz by the first one and make it feel like a hearse in a funeral procession. No, the speed possibilities of the automobile are not known. But next to gossip, it is said to be the fastest thing on earth.

$38,000,000 Think of It.

An exchange says: "Thirty-eight million dollars—$38,000 000! This is a big sum of money. But all of this will be paid to the farmers of Kentucky during the next few months in cash for the present crop of tobacco. The Government estimate of the crop in the State on Nov. 8 is 436,000,000 lbs, nearly 1,000,000 pounds more than last season, and then the quality is so much better. More than this, the price will be far above one year ago, because the big manufacturers and exporters are ready to take it all, so they say, and pay good values. What will this mean to Kentucky farmers?"

There will be 7,660,000 tons of sugar beets this year, 1916, against 6,510,000 tons last year.

The Bereaved Family.

VERONA.

The handsome groom was dressed in a suit of dark blue.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Dempsey and is an intelligent and very lovable young lady.

Mr. and Mrs. Maddin have a host of friends who wish them many long years of happiness and prosperity.

The attendants were Miss Josephine Maddin, sister of the groom, and Jerry Dempsey, brother of the bride.

The bride was tastefully attired in a gown of white embroidered net and wore a white picture hat and white shoes.

The happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful and yal usble presents. They will reside on their farm near here.

After the ceremony a sumptuous and elaborate wedding feast was served to about sixty relatives and close friends at the home of the bride.

As the wedding party entered the church the choir softly chant ed a hymn begging God to give the contracting parties grace always to know and do the will of their Heavenly Father.

The most important event that has taken place in St. Patrick's parish for a long time occurred last Saturday morning when Miss Katherine M. Dempsey was united in matrimony to Edward J. Maddin.

Before the simple Altar, which had been artistically decorated for the occasion they knelt, while the pastor, the Rev. Hubert Schmitz, pronounced the solemn and impressive words which made them man and wife forever.

The groom is a most popular and highly respected young man. He has for the past few years been chief warden of the parish and the work accomplished during that time has been due partly to his earnest and untiring efforts in behalf of the church.

Among those present at the wedding from a distance were Mrs. Mary Foley and little son, William, and Patrick J. Dempsey, of Lebanon, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. M K. Maddin and Patrick Riley, of Sparta, Ky., Mrs. John Powell and Mrs. James Conner, of Chevio, O., Miss Mamye Powell, of Bridgeport, Ohio; Mrs. Jas. Cavey, of Cincinnati.

WANTS ASANITORIUM.

To the People of Boone County:

Several times in the past I have claimed and persisted in having the attention of the people of Boone county upon certain public questions, particularly upon the public schools and the road question. Those two questions are now settled in Boone county, except to carry them forward No one need expect to ever see Boone county recede from either of them I now appeal to Boone county upon another question of equal importance to either of the other questions, and which has hitherto received little consideration from us as individuals, and none at all collectively I refer to the great White Plague, the scourage of the age—Tuberculosis

Boone county, neither more nor less than all Kentucky, and all the country, but in common with the whole civilized world, has for many years lost, and unless something is done, will continue to lose one out of every seven of its inhabitants from tuberculosis in some for, or other

We now know that tubercolosis is contagious; that it is preventable, and that it is curable if treated properly We also know that it is preeminently a poor peoples' disease, though no class escapes it Yet up to this moment Boone county has not spent one cent, nor performed a single act, as a people, calculated to limit the contagion, alleviate the suffering, or to protect the rising generation from its ravages All over Boone county, every year, tuberculosis takes its toll, —several most distressing cases having come under my observation The longer we neglect the subject the more the disease will spread, and the harder it will be to eradicate it

The purpose of this article is to call your attention to the subject, and to the fact that under a recent law seventeen counties in northern Kentucky are permitted to organize as Group I, for the purpose of building and maintaining a sanitorium by each county paying its proportion, according to the population and taxable wealth

This organization is well under way, thirteen of the 17 counties having signified their willingness to do their part Boone county is one of the four which has not signified its willingness, although it is one of the richest counties in the district, per capita Now, I ask those in the county who have suffered from tuberculosis in the loss of relatives, friends and neighbors to ask your members of the Fiscal Court to vote in favor of Boone county joining the organization

In the next week's RECORDER with its kind permission. I will give you some facts and figures which are truly alarming, and which affect materially the interest of every person in Boone county

What Wears Out a President.

My sustained mental work in the presidency was not equal in amount or in time consumed to that which I was obliged to devote to my judicial duties, or indeed to that which I have done in my university lectures at Yale and elsewhere since I left the White House I had many assistants in my Cabinet officers and their subordinates, who investigated and reviewed the reasons for and against an issue, and thus reduced the labor of the President to that of making the decision; but the strain of the work was, nevertheless, greater than any I have undertaken

The President daily consumes a greater amount of vital energy in meeting persons who present him questions that he must decide promptly and yet wisely, and in resisting pressure from those whose motives are mixed I soon came to understand that there is something besides the exercise of mental processes, something besides the investigation of facts and the arrangement of arguments, that can exhaust you physically and mentally A President will feel as limp as a rag after a long day; yet during that day he may not have done any real intellectual work —Ex-President Taft in Youth's Companion

Owensboro, Nov. 28.—War prices prevailed for tobacco at the opening of the Owensboro market today, the highest prices in the history of the Green River district being paid. While only a small amount of the weed was offered for sale, on account of a poor season, the buyers almost fought for what was offered on the five loose-leaf floors. A total of 54,055 pounds sold at a general average of $12.16 the 100 pounds. The top price for pryor leaf was $20.25. What was described as "dirty and inferior trash" sold at $6.10 the 100 pounds.

The Republican National Committee spent $19.275 in the closing days of the campaign in Kentucky according to a supplementary statement filed in Washington. The total acknowledged expenditure in the effort to carry Kentucky was more than $64,000.

Turkeys are off several cents a pound, while flour dropped seventy-five cents on the barrel the past week. Cheese has gone to 38 cents a pound. Wheat has descended from one dollar and seventy-three cents to one dollar sixty cents a bushel.

A very bad automobile accident happened near Dry Ridge, Grant county, last Sunday. Two machines were racing and when one undertook to pass the other it turned turtle. Probably the loss of two lives will be the result.

Thos. Hafer, of Hebron, was in Burlington, yesterday. He is awaiting a recovery from a cold to have his whiskers shaved off as one of the result's of President Wilson's reelection.

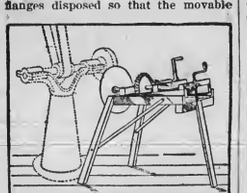
PLOW WHEAT GROUND EARLY

Buries Hessian Fly and Gives Soil Time to Become Moist and Compact Underneath.

Early plowing of wheat is beneficial in more ways than one. Not only does it bury the Hessian fly, but it also gives time for the plowed soil to become moist and compact underneath. Such a condition of the soil is difficult to secure if plowing is put off until September. Keeping down the weeds also conserves soil moisture and plant foods. From five to seven hundred tons of water are necessary to produce a ton of dry weeds and moist of this may be saved for the wheat crop.



Plant food is made available more rapidly when early plowing is practiced, due to the better air circulation. If the weeds are kept down, this food is stored up and ready to give the wheat a quick, vigorous start when seeding time comes. If, on the other hand, the weeds are allowed to grow, they will draw heavily on this plant food and while they will eventually die and decay, restoring it to the soil, the wheat will not do well, for if the wheat crop waits until the weeds decay, the danger from winterkilling will be greatly increased. This difference in growth may make the difference between winterkilling and good spring condition.

KEEP FARM TOOLS IN ORDER

Holder for Disks and Colters for Use When They Are Being Sharpened Is Handy Device.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a holder for disks and colters while they are being sharpened, invented by J. J. Hinds and M. R. Wright of Wall Lake, Ia., says:

"This holder has a frame supported by, and movable vertically relatively to, the stationary frame, the movable frame having a bearing at one end, in which a vertical shaft is journaled, this shaft having a thread meshing in a threaded orifice in a member secured to the stationary frame. The shaft has flanges disposed so that the movable frame may be raised or lowered relatively to the stationary frame of a crank secured to the shaft. Journaled in bearings in the movable frame is a longitudinally extending shaft, to the outer end of which is secured a disk or colter to be ground, the longitudinal shaft being driven by gearing, which connects a transverse shaft, having a crank, with the longitudinal shaft.

TIME FOR CUTTING ALFALFA

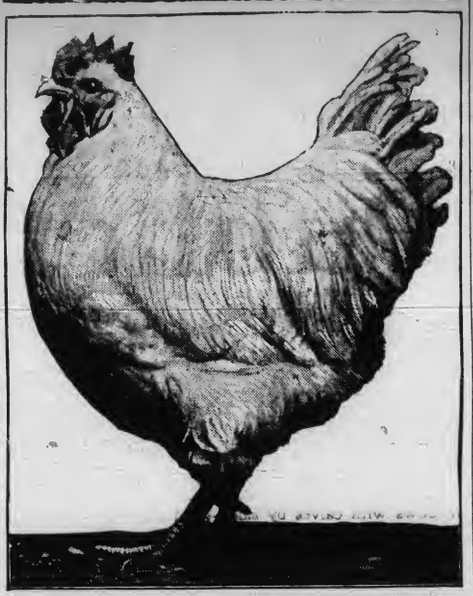
Crop Should Be Allowed to Grow Slightly Longer for Horses Than Other Live Stock.

(By A. C. ARNY.)

For all classes of animals except horses, alfalfa should be cut for hay when the new shoots or stems begin to appear at the crown. These are easily seen just as they come up among the old stems at about the beginning of blossoming time. Cutting earlier than this is not desirable or profitable, since the yield will be smaller and the hay will be more difficult to cure. It should not be allowed to get much beyond this stage for two reasons: (1) Although a somewhat heavier first cutting of hay can be secured by allowing it to stand longer than the time recommended, the hay is neither as palatable, nor as nutritious. (2) Leaving the first crop after it is at the proper stage to cut delays and reduces the second crop, since the new shoots coming from the crown are cut off with the first crop. When alfalfa is to be fed to horses, it may be allowed to grow slightly longer than when it is to be fed to cattle, but it should never be left until the second crop is injured in cutting the first crop.

GOOD AS RAT EXTERMINATOR

Exhaust Gases From Motor Proved Efficient by Illinois Farmer—Every Rodent Killed.



The exhaust gases of a gasoline engine are said to be fatal to rats. The chickenhouse of an Illinois farmer was infested with them. He attached a hose to the exhaust pipe of his motor car, inserted the other end under the floor and set the engine running. Twenty rats tried to escape, but were killed by dogs and when he took up the floor he found 140 rats dead or stupefied, not one escaping.

SUMMER CONDITIONS FOR WINTER LAYERS

FOWL WITH STRONG AND VIGOROUS CONSTITUTION.

(By W. D. NEALE, Colorado.)

For winter layers the eight-month-old pullets and the yearling hens are the best of the flock. The pullet that has been stunted is defective, or unhealthy, should be removed from the flock. Also the hens that lack in vigor should be culled out. All hens more than a year old should be sent to market. The others will be compelled to board them if left in the laying pen. They will not pay for their keep in most instances.

The long-legged, narrow-breasted and flat-bodied pullets will not be good layers. A pullet that more than pays her way must be built close to the ground with good craw capacity and have a thick body, giving plenty of room to the vital organs.

The early-hatched pullet should begin to lay in October and by the first of the year she should be doing her best. The pullet that does not begin to lay before cold weather generally delays the matter until spring opens. However, the pullets that are properly housed and put on an egg-laying diet will begin before the month of October has passed.

The aim of poultrymen should be to produce as near as possible summer conditions for his winter layers. This demands a comfortable house, one that prevents all drafts of cold air and keeps out the rain and snow. It may be open to the south, but this opening should be closed during the stormy weather to keep the flock comfortable. The floor should have a good litter of straw from 8 to 10 inches deep. Here the flock can get plenty of exercise by scratching for the whole grain feed. The scratch material should be changed every ten or twelve days as it will become foul and breed disease.

Green Feed Needed.

Grass, grit, bugs and grains are the summer food for the hens. These ingredients should be supplied in the winter when hens cannot range. The green food can be given in form of alfalfa leaves, turnips, cabbage, beets and sprouted oats. The commercial grit and oyster shells may be purchased at a nominal price from the poultry dealer. In order to have a meat diet one can purchase the meat scraps or beef meal and blood meal from the poultry man in the city or town. A mixture of two-thirds corn and one-third wheat is a good grain feed for winter time. This furnishes a variety of grains and is appreciated by the flock.

It is best to keep the hens in the house until the frosts are off the ground. About ten o'clock is a good time to open the door and let them out when the sun is shining bright. If snow is on the ground keep the hens inside the house. A hen will not lay that must stand around in the cold snow.

My experience has proved that it is wise to keep a dry mash before the hens at all times. In a self-feeder put a mixture of two-thirds bran, one-sixth corn chops and one-sixth dry beef scraps. Here the hens can get their fill and have plenty of food for egg making. Give cold water that is just drawn from the well and be sure to keep water vessels perfectly clean.

VARIETY IN DIET ESSENTIAL

Diarrhea, Indigestion and Liver Troubles Caused by Overfeeding or Poorly-Balanced Ration.

Overfeeding or a poorly-balanced ration causes diarrhea, indigestion and liver troubles in the chicken flock. A diet that is practically all of one thing may often be responsible. There may be an overfeeding of corn which causes the bird to become too fat and in that condition they are unable to throw off the germs.

Diarrhea is caused by too much animal food. Lack of this, entirely, is also just as dangerous. The happy medium should be struck in all-feeding. The ration that contains no green feed is almost as detrimental to the hen as all grain and no hay would be for the dairy cow.

Green material of some sort is needed for health and egg production. Liver trouble results, usually, from too much food of a fattening nature.

PROPER WAY TO FEED MILK

When Given to Ducks in Pans It Causes Sore Eyes—Best to Give It to Them in Mash.

Feeding milk to ducks in pans causes sore eyes. Use same in mash and feed only what will be readily cleaned up. This sore condition of the eyes is also noticed in flocks of chicks receiving sour milk as a drink and is often mistaken for a cold or roup.

A 10 per cent solution of boric acid applied to the eyelids will remove the crusts formed and relieve the irritation.

COLONY SYSTEM IS FAVORED

Really Means Less Work Than the Intensive Method—House 20 by 40 Feet Is Ideal.

A colony system of poultry keeping really means less work in the long run than the intensive system with the long house and small yards. A house 20 by 40 feet in size with 200 fowls and free ranges makes the ideal colony system.

PREVENT DISEASE IN FLOCK

Better to Remove Cause of Many Ailments Than to Try for Cure—Segregate Ailing Birds.

It is better to remove the cause of the various ailments that afflict poultry than to try to bring about a cure, and if we go about it intelligently we shall not have to search far to find what is causing the losses among our birds.

In the first place, there are the germ diseases, of which roup and its kindred troubles, such as canker, catarrh and chicken pox are the most common. These are communicated by the agency of a germ, or they may develop from latent germs retained in the system from a previous attack. At any rate, a bird that is subject to these diseases should never be used as a breeder. She may communicate the weakness to her offspring.

When a member of the flock shows signs of any of these germ diseases she should be removed to another pen and the place ventilated and fumigated. Also all drinking fountains and feeders which she may have used should be scalded and disinfected. It is well also to clean the pen. Filth and large accumulations of droppings beneath the roosts have a tendency to multiply the roup germs. Fresh air, sunlight and cleanliness destroy them.

SPROUTED OATS FOR LAYERS

Should Be Fed When Shoots Are Not Over One-Half Inch in Length—Other Good Feeds.

Sprouted oats are good for laying hens and should be fed when the shoots are not over one-half inch in length.

Tender, juicy green stuff should be fed, such as beets, cabbage, green clover or other succulent food, but it is unwise to feed green food in a frozen condition to laying hens; skim milk, buttermilk, dried milk and dry ground bone are also good for the protein in them, although they do not have much fat.

Feather eating is caused by a shortage of animal food such as meat, bugs and insects.

SOCIAL JUSTICE.

What is social justice? The term has been bandied about for many years now and volumes have been spoken and written concerning its meaning, with the effect of confusing many and enlightening but few, says Omaha Bee. None who deeply studied conditions will undertake to support the proposition that social justice prevails now, or even did prevail. Some man has always been at a disadvantage, and not through his own fault. Conditions justify the assertion, though, that we are nearer today to a realization of the square deal for all. This does not mean that any one of many utopian dreams has come to pass, nor that an ideal has been attained. It means that forces have so reacted upon conditions that men vaguely feel if they do not realize fully something of the obligation resting upon them to consider the other fellow. It does not mean that the unrest is being stilled. The man who is comfortable is inclined to agree with conditions that contribute to his situation, but under him and around him are others who are not comfortable, and whose consequent dissatisfaction is certain to disturb him. Thus is the continuation of the turmoil made sure, so the end that, with each readjustment of social relations we are coming a little closer to the time when the world will be a good place for all to live in.

In the new Rochester directory the name of every married man is followed by the name of his wife, printed in parentheses, and directory publishers say that this new idea will be adopted throughout the country. In some cases—if not in all—ought not the name of the wife to be printed first, with the name of the husband in parentheses?

Nowadays the average housekeeping, motherly type of woman is inclined to undervalue her own work and sphere and to believe that her brilliant unmarried or childless sister, who writes or speaks, or does political, professional or social work, is more useful, is having a "fuller life," than the mere wife and mother.

Aside from the fact that the volunteer system of military service lets the shirker shirk to his heart's content, imposes unjust and unnecessary burdens upon the man who loves his country and scores a failure in every crisis, it is a grand little system.

The report from the Stefansson expedition chronicles the discovery that there are more than 140 varieties of cat's cradle played by the untutored Eskimos. Not having been oppressed by a higher civilization the natives have yet to adopt poker.

Wireless telephony is said to have made great progress in Germany, because of the demand for telephone wire to be melted into missiles. Sometimes, however, one gets the impression that the law of compensation is not altogether impartial.

Men's shoes are said to be on the way to becoming as giddy as those worn by women. Conservative men, we hope, will draw the line at more than three-color combination.

If this country took half the ingenuity it uses in devising new dances and applied it to the proper solution of some of its pressing problems everybody would be happier.

Suing for $100,000 or more for heart balm appears to be getting more common every day. But getting a verdict for more than 60 cents cash is quite a sensation.

If, as the scientists say, it is the alternation of heat and cold that keeps the race from being Eskimos or mollycoddles, let us be duly grateful for the weather vagaries.

Eventually the shoemakers will have to make shoes somewhat after the design approved by the Creator, and mankind will accept no substitutes from below.

As everybody knows, nature is wonderful. But the automobiles are not so slow. They are now offering "motorcade" to the unsophisticated dictionary.

Charges against the man higher up remind us that there never was the best of feeling between the hod carrier and the bricklayer, anyhow.

Wireless telegraphy between aeroplanes is no feat at all compared with what passes when a woman who doesn't belong enters a ballroom.

ALL SESSIONS "REGULAR"

Opinion Voiced By Some Regarding Meetings of The General Assembly.

Frankfort.—In view of the fact that Section 36 of the Constitution requires the General Assembly, unless convened in extraordinary session at the call of the governor, to meet every two years for sixty days, commencing the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January, and Section 256 provides that no constitutional amendment shall be submitted to the voters at an election "which occurs less than ninety days after the final passage of such amendment" by the General Assembly, much speculation has been indulged in hereabouts concerning the meaning of the word "regular" in the first sentence of Section 255, which says: "Amendments to this Constitution may be proposed in either house of the General Assembly at a regular session."

Since the General Assembly's biennial sessions adjourn automatically in March of the even years, and constitutional amendments, under Section 256, can not be voted on except at the regular November election of odd years, when members of the General Assembly are elected, it was thought by some that the requirement for 90 days to intervene between the adoption of the resolution and the submission to the voters indicated that the General Assembly might be called by the governor at any time for the purpose of submitting an amendment, so ninety days intervened before the election.

Their interpretation is that any session legally sitting for that purpose is "regular" while others have contended that "regular" refers only to the stated biennial session.

Huge Rattlesnake Killed.

Sturlis, November 30.—Nobe Bean claims to have captured, but not alive, the huge rattlesnake that has been frightening people in the neighborhood of Heath mountain, by stopping up its den and following its trail into Webster-co., where he shot the giant snake through the head, after a vain attempt to lasso it and capture it alive for a circus company in the East, which had made an offer for the monster alive. Bean shot at the snake while it was advancing on him, and then took to his heels, not knowing until several days later that the shot had taken effect. A farmer, noticing a flock of buzzards on a hill, went to the spot and found the big rattler dead, and notified Bean of the fact. Bean says the snake was fully fourteen feet long, as large around as his body, and with rattlers the length of his arm.

A COMPLIMENT

Judge Sidney Gaines Closes a Long Term of the Gallatin Circuit Court.

The longest term of Circuit Court that has been held in Gallatin county for some time came to a close last Saturday afternoon, winding up six days of continuous grind, and disposing of many cases that had been continued from court to court for the past several years.

Judge Gaines kept the court busy disposing of cases all thru the week, and conducted one of the best courts ever held here. Ruling on all points of law or evidence with firmness and with perfect fairness, his work as judge is all that could be asked for or required. Aside from his discernment of intricate points involved in many cases—a discernment that enables him to go quickly to the real basis of things, he presides with an absolute fairness that treats each lawyer and each client just alike. All get exactly what which is coming to them—no less, no more. No favors are granted and no partiality shown, every litigant and every attorney being made to conform to the rules of the court. Judge Gaines measures well to all of the responsibilities and exactions of the position, and we believe the public is appreciative of the very excellent administration he is giving the affairs of his office. At least this appreciation and endorsement is he amply entitled.—Warsaw Independent.

BEGINNING OF NEW INDUSTRY

American Will Establish Plants In Honduras to Make Alcohol From Bananas.

An American has just secured a concession from the government of Honduras which is expected to be profitable to him and the government. The concession is for the manufacture of alcohol, which is a government monopoly. There have been great losses to banana planters in the past because many of the bunches did not contain a sufficient number of "hands" to be marketable, and have been thrown away. It is from this waste product that the American who has had experience in the industry, intends to make alcohol. He has deposited $25,000 with the government as an evidence of good faith, and this is to be credited toward the export duties of three cents a gallon. He must also pay $5,000 a year for the salaries of government inspectors and must begin operations within a year. His agreement provides that he shall take all the bananas offered up to 200,000 bunches every month. He has also secured the right to build a sugar and paper mill near the distillery. His plan is to aid planters in restoring worn-out banana lands for the raising sugarcane, to make sugar, distill alcohol from the refuse and make paper from the bagasse, the fiber of the cane.

Embargoes.

A correspondent at Henderson, Kentucky, asks the Courier-Journal what, if any, right the national government has to lay embargoes. "Has Congress the constitutional authority," he inquires, "to prohibit an American citizen from selling his bale of cotton, his pound of butter or dozen of eggs to anybody in any country to whom he may desire to sell it?"

The authority to lay embargoes is fully warranted by the clause of the Constitution empowering Congress to "regulate commerce with foreign nations." Embargoes were recognized and instituted early in our national existence. There is what is known as the hostile embargo and the civil embargo, and it is the usual form of reprisal. There has never been any question as to our sovereign right to declare it. As early as 1791 we laid an embargo for thirty days, extending it to 60 days. In 1807 Congress passed what is known as the Embargo Act, forbidding American vessels to clear for foreign ports and foreign vessels to land goods here, supplementing it a year later with an act requiring all American coasting vessels to give bond that they would land their cargoes on American soil. This act was violently opposed by New England that smuggling under the connivance of State authorities became common and when another act was passed by Congress imposing severe penalties upon all efforts to evade the embargo New England openly threatened secession from the Union. Again in 1812 and 1813 embargoes were laid against Great Britain.

The legality of embargoes is clear. The wisdom of equity of any such policy at this juncture is a very different question.—C.-J.

PATRIOT WINS

Two Hard Fought Games of Basket Ball—Frank Milner Badly Hurt.

The basket-ball teams of the Burlington High School went to Patriot, Indiana, last Saturday and played two games with the school there. Seven boys and five girls made the trip and were accompanied by Professor Caywood, Prof. Muntz, wife and little girl, Miss Atha Mae Eddins, J. L. Fowler and Dudley Blyth. The trip down was enjoyed by all but owing to unavoidable delays, the party was rather late in reaching Patriot. The first game was played by the girls and Patriot won by the score of 16 to 9 but only after a hardly contested battle. Elizabeth Kelly put up a good game for the local school, scoring five points of the total nine secured. The girls here have been playing according to a set of modified rules adopted by the northern counties in Kentucky and they were seriously handicapped at Patriot by being forced to adhere strictly to Spalding regulations which prohibits the center from throwing goals.

The boys' team was also defeated by Patriot, the score being 36 to 16. The game was exciting and well played all the way thru and our boys struggled gamely to "bring home the bacon" but could not do so, although they displayed better basket-ball playing during the second half than Patriot did. It may sound rather paradoxical but the game was really a closer one than the score would indicate. Galen Kelly at forward starred for the local team while Allcut and Couch were the bright spots in the Patriot aggregation. Our boys are good losers. They seek no excuse for losing a fairly contested game and are not doing so in this instance as pretty would have probably won anyway, but they do consider that they could have been treated with more courtesy than they received Saturday. Several things which happened caused them to take this view, the main thing being the unjustifiable charge of dirty playing made against Brown in the second half. Duncan was forced to retire from sickness and Brown, who took his place, had not played two minutes when he was put out of the game for unnecessary roughness. He did not deserve the penalty in anyway, his opponent even saying he was not guilty of a breach of the rules, but the referee would not alter his decision. Such an action as that gives a fellow the name of a dirty player when he has done nothing to deserve it. But after all is said, the fact remains that Patriot has an exceptionally good basket-ball team and the local boys or any other team are traveling in fast company when playing them. But if B. H. S. should continue to show such marked improvement again them as they did Saturday, with respect to the first game played with them here about two weeks ago, it would not be long until they could hold their own easily enough.

The day was marred by an unfortunate accident to Frank Milner which happened during the last three minutes of play. He fell, striking his back upon a large rock laying at the corner of the building. He played the game out, refusing to quit, but afterwards he seemed to be suffering so that he was taken to the office of Dr. Searcy of Patriot. After a thorough examination, the doctor assured Prof. Caywood that no bones were broken and that he saw no cause for serious complications to follow. Upon the arrival of the party at Petersburg on the return trip, Milner was left at the home of Mr. John Botts, from which place Mr. Botts took him to his home at Constance Sunday morning. It is sincerely hoped by all that he will soon recover from the accident.

WONDERFUL CHANGE

In Verona and Vicinity In The Last Twenty Years.

A person who has not visited the town of Verona, this county, for about twenty years, notices a work of progress that is almost a revelation to him. In that time the town has been practically reconstructed, and the homes have a neat, cozy and comfortable air about them, while the owners bear a thrifty and satisfied appearance. The country for miles around has kept pace with the town in its progress and well kept farms and neat residences and out buildings are seen in every direction, while that territory is traversed by good roads, and a handsome two story High School building near the town stands as a monument to educational interest in that up-to-date community.

Only three old landmarks were encountered last Sunday in Verona, they being the most excellent gentlemen, Geo. W. Roberts, Charlie Lewis and Lewis Jenkins, each of whom gave the auto party composed of C. C. Roberts, Richard Stephens, Geo Porter, Chas. Westbay and the writer a hearty welcome.

Verona precinct is one of the best sections of this county, a fact of which a great many people are not aware.

Dry Weather Retarded Progress.

Owing to dry weather this fall none of the growers have been able to get their tobacco ready to move although many of them have sold at satisfactory prices, such as are calculated to create a desire for a larger acreage in 1917. Land for the production of tobacco is not so easily obtained as it was many years ago, and the scarcity of labor is also a handicap to the cultivation of a large crop

TREE STILL PRODUCTIVE

Planted Nearly Three Centuries Ago, It Bears Yearly Crop of Fine Fruit.

Thought to be the oldest fruit tree in this country, the pear tree planted 280 years ago by Gov Endicott of Massachusetts is still thriving well and bearing a yearly crop of fruit of the first quality John Endicott purchased a large tract of land at Danvers-port, then known as the southern section of Salem village The estate afterward became known as the Endicott plantation Governor Endicott being a great lover of sugar pears, sent to a relative in Dorchester, England, for a pear tree After several months the tree arrived, and at that time few people ever believed that the tree would live, as the roots had become very dry The governor believing that he, better than anyone else, was the proper man to plant the tree, journeyed to the plantation and there, in a sheltered spot close to the Deny-ters river, dug a hole and carefully planted it For many years he cared for it himself, and it was not long before it became the most famous of all fruit trees of Miss This year it is estimated that there were close to 3,000 pears on the tree Few people who visited Danvers missed the opportunity of seeing this wonderful tree, which was carefully guarded by a picket fence The tree is made up of three distinct trunks, which are partially decayed, although the upper section of the tree is quite healthy in appearance Endicott himself used to refer to the tree as typified a sacrificial number of years to supply the entire Salem village, which in those days numbered less than one hundred inhabitants When Governor Endicott died in the year 1665 special mention was made in his will in regard to the famous tree, which was left in care of his daughter

CONCRETE ROAD WORK

On Lexington Pike Completed to Erlanger.

Contractor Fred Louin reached the railroad crossing at Erlanger with his concrete road work last Saturday, and there is now a stretch of four and a half miles of concrete road from Erlanger towards Covington, a considerable portion of which is ready for travel, but it will be several days before the entire route is opened for use. The town of Erlanger will take a vote on a proposition to issue bonds for the completion of the road through the town.

Makes Men Free.

At last the farmer is beginning to free himself of the old idea that big muscles meant good farming. For countless years he has been a slave to the idea that hard work meant success on the farm. His change of viewpoint has been brought about largely thru the inventive genius of the manufacturer of modern implements. When man gave up the scythe and the cradle for use in his meadows and wheat fields he merely transferred man power to horse power.

Today even horse power or horse muscle is being pushed aside by the magic fluid gasoline. It will make man free because it is cheaper than even the cheapest man muscle. It will pump the farmer's water, manufacture electricity for his house, saw his stove wood, grind his feed, do his wife's washing, churn her butter and never complain. Now science is telling us that probably the farmer of the future will not have to buy his fuel for the gas engine from any trust, but will be able to manufacture his alcohol out of waste product on the farm When that time comes and it does not seem to be far in the future, the story of the man who was sent to the insane asylum because he had been foolish enough to try to extract sunlight from cucumbers will have literally come true.—Farm and Family.

THANKSGIVING BAZAAR

Given By The Burlington High School a Perfect Success In Every Particular.

The annual Thanksgiving Bazaar given by the Burlington High School last Wednesday was a perfect success with the exception of a keen disappointment occasioned by the fact that Union failed to show up with their basket ball teams.

The Thanksgiving Supper at the school house in the evening was well attended and everybody present was more than pleased with the excellent quality and variety of viands and delicacies which were set before them. Everything was cooked and served in the best possible manner and the affair reflects great credit upon Professor Muntz and others who were in charge.

The play, "Higbee of Harvard," given by the Junior Class at Library Hall in the evening furnished a pleasing and enjoyable ending to an otherwise successful day. It was by far the best histrionic effort of the High School ever given here and the members of the Junior Class deserve credit for their acting ability as well as for their painstaking efforts to please. The success of the play was also due largely to the efficient coaching of Principal Caywood. Edwin Duncan as "Watson Higbee" from Montana was the leading character and his work could hardly have been improved upon. He frequently "brought the house down" with his realistic presentation of the uncouth and grizzly gentleman from Montana. William Finn as Senator Wi know was very good. The Senators sister, Mrs. Ballou was enacted in a dignified manner by Sara Ryle, she being responsible to a great extent for the success of the play. Gwendolyn Goodridge as the Senator's daughter and Maude Tanner as Madge Cummins from Montana played excellent parts as young girls in love and they were of course ably assisted by the efforts of Walter Brown as "Lorin Higby" in love with Miss Cummins and Kirtley Cropper as "Ted Daleymple," who had completely lost his heart to the Senator's daughter but still managed to remain a little independent. Agnes Carver as "Mrs. Malvina Meddigrew" an aunt of Madge Cummins was a "scream" and her presentation of the difficult character was good in every sense of the word. "Higgins" the butler along with "Mrs. Meddigrew" furnished most of the laughs to the audience and Virgil Gaines as "Higgins" transformed the lowly part of butler into one in which the audience was anxious to see him reappear at any "stage of the game." To conclude with it can only be said that the play could not have been presented in a more pleasing and efficient manner and it is gratifying that the endeavors of the pupils and Mr. Caywood to make it a success were amply repaid by the large and appreciative audience which witnessed the performance. The Standing Room Only" sign was put out early and that soon had to be pulled down. Not only did the High School furnish a pleasant and enjoyable day and evening to the community but they will be able to report a successful financial ending to the days efforts. Something like one hundred dollars was realized from the supper and show. The smooth and able manner in which events of this kind are carried through by the Burlington High School does much to show the conscientious efforts being made by Principal Caywood to make his school bigger and better every year.

Don't Sell the Good Breeding Animals.

Many farmers make a great mistake by sacrificing their breeding stock when prices get high. Just a few years ago the West demanded an unusual number of cows and heifers and the high prices caused by this abnormal demand almost cleaned some Southern districts of breeding cattle. Occasionally a farmer or a whole neighborhood will sell off all the best mares just because prices are good. The report comes now that the high prices of grain are leading farmers in some parts of the West literally to clean their farms of poultry.

Of course, it is a less serious matter to sell off the breeding stock of the poultry yard, or even to sell the brood sows, than to part wholesale fashion with the good cows or mares, but the principle in either case is the same and the result is likely to be unprofitable in either case. It does not pay the farmer to get rid of his best breeding stock if he means to keep on with that line of farming. The female moved to be a good breeder, whether mare, cow, sow or old hen, is usually worth more than can be obtained for her. Such animals should be kept unless there is a special reason for selling, and wholesale selling should be indulged in only under very exceptional conditions.—Southern Agriculturist.

LEAVING THE OLD HOME.

How many readers of the RECORDER, how many fathers and mothers in old Boone-co, know what it is to dwell 52 years in the same house, where you first went to housekeeping? Where your children were born, where your ears were saluted each day with their childish prattle. When they sat upon your knee and you whispered to them the sweet and innocent stories of your own childhood days, and as they listened eagerly for the last word of the story, then quickly came the request from that innocent child soul: "Mama, tell me another story."

And then there is the old orchard, planted in our first wedding days, where we have so often satisfied our appetite for the luscious fruit; the pear, the Early Harvest apple, the peaches, and Oh, such peaches! And there is the old meadow, the pasture by the roadside where old Dobin and old Puss where want to graze in the May sunshine to their hearts' content, coming and going at will for shelter, food and water. Then what shall I say of the old family garden where grew our table luxuries, the rhubarb and the berries? Then last but not least, the old well where for 52 years our thirst was daily quenched, and we thought no water in old Illinois was better.

But a change has come. Our children have grown to manhood and womanhood. They went out into the world for themselves. They are now fathers and mothers—one is a grandfather. Two of our four have crossed over. Two are left with us on earth. But new grandpa and grandma are lone.

We sit down to dine and we think of the living ones, Franklin and Ethel Winifred, and the two others and of the joy and pleasure their childhood days gave us, and then we sigh for the old home days.

But another change has come. Grandpa and Grandma are leaving the old home. The village where for thirty-three years I gave the Christian church my best life and work, serving as elder and minister. For 52 years our modest home was the home of the preachers and temperance lecturers who came and went. Moving? Yes, for the first time. When the last load had left, I stepped out upon the concrete walk, and turning to the old dwelling, I bowed a courteous farwell.

Reader, did you ever say goodbye to an old friend of 52 years close intimacy? I did. On the 11th of last month the writer celebrated his 80th birthday. Owing to our advanced ages we may never dwell again in the old home.

First of All, Feed Yourself.

These are good times, they say. So they are for the man who has things to sell, especially things to eat. The man who has to buy his living, especially if he is buying out of a fixed wage or salary, may be pardoned for wondering a little at times whether or not it is just the sort of prosperity he would prefer.

No farmer should be in the food-buying class. He will have to buy some things, of course, but he should have more to sell than he has to buy. The farmer who does not make his living at home is not profiting by the high price of farm products.

In fact, it is worth saying one time more that permanent agricultural prosperity comes only to the community—usually only to the man—that produces a surplus of food products. No farming section has yet known an enduring prosperity based on single-crop farming and the purchase from its proceeds of the other necessities of life.

It is the same way with live stock. The farmers who make most out of live stock are the farmers who grow most of their feeds at home. The farm flocks of poultry are big dividends, but few commercial poultry plants last more than a few years. The difference between cheap home-grown feeds and feeds purchased at retail market prices makes the difference in profits. The dairymen in the Northeast—and some nearer home—who depend on buying nearly all their feeds for their cattle find it a hard struggle to keep ahead. Dairymen who feed their own feeds find the cow a money maker.

The farm is primarily a place to raise things to eat, and the farmer who fails to raise foods for himself and feed for his stock is running a risk.—Southern Agriculturist.

Corns--What They Are.

Corns, like corsets, boarding-houses and late hours, are a menance to one's sweet disposition.

Corns are hard growths which occur on the toes or some other part of the feet. They are generally the result of wearing a shoe too small for the foot, says the Popular Science Monthly. They are thickenings of the outer layer of the skin int he center of which is a nail-like peg which projects downward and hurts when pressed upon. Soft corns form between the toes and are only different from others in that that they are soaked with spespiration all the time. The corn itself is composed of a lump of the outer part of the skin which is caused by the pressure of the shoe at that spot. How ever a corn would not result unless the pressure were taken off at intervals, and this, of course, is done when you take the shoe off. It stands to reason that if the pressure were continuously applied to this spot, the skin, instead of overgrowing at that precise point would waste away. The overgrowth of the skin is due to the irritation produced by the pressure.

A GREAT STUNT.

(Bowling Green Times-Journal.)

On Sunday at 12 noon there will be a sight show to the Bowling Green citizens that they never viewed before. Thousands of mail order catalogues will be brought to the park in front of the Chamber of Commerce and deposited on the sidewalk.

The handsome buggy and harness given to the Chamber of Commerce by the Thomas-Bike Carriage Company will go to the person who brings the greatest number of catalogues no matter what mail order house they came from.

Thus ridding Warren county of all mail order catalogues is one of the greatest stunts that has ever been pulled off in this county in some time and it keeps Secretary E. H. Hyman busy answering the phone calls from over the country by those who are interested in being the lucky contestant.

Destroy the Food Trust.

Several years ago a protest was made thru these columns against the improper methods of the men who control the cold storage business of this country. At that time regret was expressed that a great invention had been debased and prostituted and the people made to suffer. The prediction was made that eventually there would be governmental interference. It was shown then, as it can be shown today, that instead of equalizing the price of perishable foodstuffs and establishing a more or less uniform range for them, the system has operated to raise the average prices in the productive seasons, and to vastly increase them in the nonproductive periods. With the addition of new storage warehouses more and more available food supplies are abstracted from the market and stowed out of reach until it has now come to pass that the material is released only in sufficient amounts to maintain a constant semi-dearth.

Four years ago the Ohio General Assembly, after an exhaustive inquiry into the high cost of living, attempted to deal with the storage evil, but the skillful lobbying tactics employed defeated all efforts at relief. The storage warehousemen convinced the farmer members that their interests were being imperiled, and this blocked action.

Conditions are again becoming unbearable and, as before, are injuring most the workers with the lowest wages. Sporadic inquiries in New York and Chicago show that the storage warehouses and grain elevators are filled to bursting with meat, poultry, eggs, butter, grain and cereals.

One speculator in Chicago owns six mill.on dozens of eggs, and, in the language of the late Boss Tweed, has coarsely asked what the people are going to do about it. A year ago, he said, he made a loss, and now proposes to recoup himself. In practice he is finding the people because in his last venture he bought too much and the weather became too warm. It is all very well to deplore the interference of the Government with private business and individual enterprise. But it is sheer silliness to permit a few men, a small group indeed, to stand between millions of people and their food, and demand, like robber barons, a toll on every mouthful sought.

Congress acted, and with the full approval of the people, to take the taxes off the breakfast table through changing the tariff schedules on foods. If the cold storage plants and the warehouses are to be continued by their owners as agencies for the oppression of the consumers, and if gross and unfeeling speculators insist upon gambling in food supplies, Congress should repeat its tactics and strike hard and heavy for the emancipation of the American pantry.

It is monstrous that bread made with American flour and beef butchered in American abattoirs are selling cheaper in the war-smitten cities of Europe than they are in this place of their production. If this be Socialism and a blow at private property, this recommendation for stern and even harsh action, let the harriers of the poor accept it as such!—Enquirer.

The Tobacco Grop

Greensburg, Dec 3.—The highest prices of the season have been given for tobacco on the loose leaf breaks the past week Prices are far beyond the greatest expectation of the growers, altho they have a superior crop to offer. This market has a larger corps of buyers than usual, and bidding is brisk.

Bowling Green, Dec. 3.—C. G. Davenport, agent of the Bowling Green Tobacco Association, has sold to G. O. Tuck & Company, of Louisville, the pooled tobacco of Warren and Butler counties at an average price of 10 cents a pound, the delivery to begin December 11. There are about 2,000,000 lbs. in the pool.

Owensboro, Dec. 3.—There is every indication tonight of warm rain for which the farmers have been praying for several weeks, so that they could strip their tobacco Already there is a quantity of tobacco on the floors of the loose leaf houses awaiting sale in the morning To date there has been sold over the loose-leaf floors of Owensboro 316,520 pounds at a general average of $9.85 a 100 pounds. The same date last year there had been sold 247,565 pounds at a general average of only $4 42. The feature of the Owensboro market has been the high prices paid for the lower grades Trash has averaged over $6. One basket of trash, which in past years would not have been used for fertilizer, sold for $5 a hundred pounds

More than 20,000 pounds of tobacco have been sold on the loose leaf floors at Greensburg, Ky., and farmers have received the highest price ever given on the loose leaf market at that place. About an equal amount of Burley and dark tobacco has been offered. The Burley sold as high as $27 the hundred while dark sold as high as $15. Farmers have been dazed by the flattering offers of buyers at their barns, and fully 60 per cent. of them have sold. A number have recently received 16, 12 and $13 per hundred for their crops. The crop to be marketed this time is the finest in quality and color ever grown in this section, and although it does not reach the standard in weight.

Glasgow, Dec. 2.—Between 300 and 400 loads of tobacco are standing in the streets here awaiting to be unloaded at one of the loose-leaf warehouses. The wagons began coming in Friday morning, and, notwithstanding the fact that the men at the warehouses have been working overtime, they are unable to take care of the great influx. The market has been unusually strong for several days and this, together with the splendid season, has caused a rush on the market. The best dark tobacco is selling up as high as $15.50 and the light tobacco up to $20. The demand for all grades is strong. Very little change is expected in the market as long as the weed is brought in good condition. Many of the farmers will be unable to dispose of their tobacco and return to their homes until the first of next week.

Mt. Starling, Ky., Dec. 3.—One hundred and fifty thousand lbs., of excellent tobacco is on the breaks ready for the opening sales at the Robertson house Monday and buyers from every factory. Tuck & Co., brokers and several speculators are here for purchases. Sales will be held at all hours. The outlook is for a good market. The quality of the offerings is good but the outlook is that colory tobacco will not be any higher than a year ago. Low grades, which are scarce, will be from 5c to 7c higher than last year's sales. Speculators are still busy scouring the county for purchases, but growers are not anxious to sell, they believing that tobacco over the loose leaf market will bring more money than in the barns. The light weight of the crop does not indicate that it will bring any more money as a whole than was received at last years market.

The High Cost of Rabbits.

The high cost of rabbits must be an example of the ability of the vender to get what is asked, rather than a reflection of a scarcity of rabbits, or any increase of the expense or difference experienced by rabbit hunters.

There are enough rebbits in Kentucky, apparently to feed everybody. It is not easy to miss them when driving an automobile at night down a country road. The distiguishing feature presented by the head-lights is the skipping rabbit which is confused by the headlights and looks as if he would be much obliged it the motorists would use a dimmer any one who walks across a meadow in daytime kicks up enough rabbits for a boarding house a week. It was was said that rabbits were scarce last year because of an epidemic —the foot and mouth disease, or appendicitis, or influenza or something—and that any rabbits caught or killed in a state of bodily health was worth a good deal. This years rabbits born of parents more numerous than was supposed, who snicided or escaped last year's epidemic, are as the sands of the sea for a multitude Nevertheless a poor, pitiful rabbit, had all four of its legs broken by a disaharge from a shot gun last week, sells for the price of a pretty fair beefsteak.

Just why rabbits should be so high nobody seems to know. Just how to effect a break in the rabbit market before the season for rabbit pie is over nobody knows.

Is the high cost of rabbit just the effect of the habit of chalking up higher figures for everything? Is the chalking up done on the principle "all the traffic will bear."—Courier-Journal.

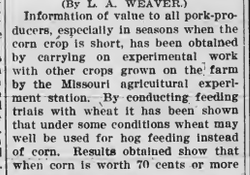
RUSTED STRAW FOR FEEDING

Value Demonstrated by Experiments Made by Canadian and Other Experiment Stations.

There has evidently not been much investigation on the effect of rust on straw as to its feeding value. Most of the analyses made show that rust increases the feeding value of the straw. The Dominion experiment station in Canada and the experiment stations in North Dakota and Minnesota, have found that the rusted straw has a larger feeding value than rust-free straw. The analysis made at the North Dakota experiment station one year, however, showed that the straw had a decreased feeding value. The reason for an increase feeding value is explained by the fact that the plant first produces the nourishment in the stem and leaves and later passes it up into the head to fill out the kernels. The rust interferes with this food passing up into the head. It has a little the same effect as cutting the grain for hay.

The value of the rusted straw depends on a good many factors, among which are the time at which rust strikes the crop, how the straw is cured, and whether it has any shriveled grain in it. Cases have been reported In which animals have been harmed by being fed rusted straw.



One way to determine if it is harmful is to feed it to a few of the less valuable animals for a week or two and observe the effect that it has on them. Some other roughage should be fed with the rusted straw and do not make a sudden change from other feed to rusted straw. Shaking the straw to remove the dust as far as possible is also advisable. Observe the animals that are being fed rusted straw to see what effect it has on them. —North Dakota Experiment Station.

VALUE OF WHEAT FOR SWINE

Tests Made at Missouri Agricultural College to Find Suitable Substitute for Corn.

(By L. A. WEAVER.)

Information of value to all pork-producers, especially in seasons when the corn crop is short, has been obtained by carrying on experimental work with other crops grown on the farm by the Missouri agricultural experiment station. By conducting feeding trials with wheat it has been shown that under some conditions wheat may well be used for hog feeding instead of corn. Results obtained show that when corn is worth 70 cents or more a bushel, wheat may be profitably substituted for corn if the wheat is worth 90 cents or less. Likewise if corn is worth 80 cents per bushel, wheat is worth $1.03 a bushel as hog feed.

It has been further shown that pork may be produced more cheaply by adding a small amount of tankage to a mixture of corn and wheat than by feeding these feeds without such a supplement.

For example, the cost of producing 100 pounds of pork with corn and tankage was 60 cents less than when corn alone was used. This would mean an additional profit to the producer of $100 or more on each carload of hogs fed.

GIVING MEDICINES TO SWINE

By Using Old Shoe With Hole Cut in Toe, There Is Little Danger of Strangulation.

If it should be necessary to administer medicines to a hog, simply cut a small opening in the toe of an old shoe, have an attendant hold hog in as natural a position as possible, insert toe of shoe in mouth, pour drench in shoe carefully, and the hog will do the rest (of course powders should be liquefied with water). By this method there is practically no danger of strangulation, no danger of breaking drenching horn or bottle or any other vessel that may be used, the hog in trying to eject shoe from mouth will simply swallow.

A careful plowman can use the mare up till within a few days of the time she is to drop her colt without danger, and likewise he can begin work with the mare ten days or two weeks after the colt is born, provided the work is reasonably light and the mare is cared for properly.

It is not necessary that the colt follow its dam while she is in harness, but it is better to leave the colt in the pasture or the barn while the mare is driven.

Make the Washing Easier.

There is no harder work in the whole field of manual labor than laundering, when done without the aid of machinery. It means lifting and carrying heavy weights. It means much stooping and bending. It means extremes of heat and cold. It means a great deal of standing and walking. It means exposure to extreme humidity or dampness of air. Good authorities place laundering at the top of the list of enervating industries. As it is carried on in the average farm home it is certainly no occupation for a woman. Only a man's physical strength is equal to such a task. It would be far better on wash day if Mr. and Mrs. Farmer would swap places. Let Mrs. Farmer ride the mower, or feed the silage cutter, or mend the harness, and let Mr. Farmer do that heavy wash, and the job would be much better fitted to the physical strength of the worker.—Southern Agriculturist.

A new and novel plan is being resorted to in Warren county to free that territory of the catalogs that are being sent into that county by the various mail order houses. Thousands of catalogs will be reduced to ashes and thus the mail order business in Warren will be given a hard jolt.

Keep the wheels of your vehicles out of the appearing ruts in the roads. By using the entire road bed the life of a pike can be prolonged many years, but when all the vehicle travel is confined to a few inches space instead of being distributed over the several feet of surface provided for it the road becomes impaired in a short time and its construction is pronounced worthless, when its condition is simply the result of being used improperly. Teamsters and auto drivers can do much at no cost of time or money to them towards keeping roads in good condition.

Aside from the monkey, man is the only animal having what we call binocular single vision. That is, he can tell not only the direction of an object, but he can estimate fairly accurately its distance. This is because both of his eyes point at the same object at the same time, like two range finders. Other animals do not concentrate their gaze in this way. Their eyes are set more nearly at the sides of the head so that they see not only forward but backward for a short distance. Man, on the contrary, sees clearly only the object at which he looks directly.—Popular Science Monthly.

HEAVY FEED CAUSES SCOURS

Common and Very Effective Remedy Is Dose of Castor Oil—Best to Feed Calf Twice Each Day.

(By W. L. FOWLER, Department of Animal Husbandry, Oklahoma A. and M. College, Stillwater.)

The change of climate and milk should not cause a calf to scour, unless too much milk of poor quality is given to the calf en route or after it arrives. Scours are generally caused by heavy feeding or by the use of cold or sour milk fed out of unclean buckets. In case the calf scours, I would cut its amount of milk to about one-half and give a dose of castor oil, or a mixture of salol and bismuth subnitrate. The latter is a common remedy and is very effective.

The best practice is to feed the calf twice a day. If you are milking your cows three times a day, the calf can be fed as often. Good results are had by feeding the calf warm sweet milk immediately after the cows are milked. If the calf is of the Jersey or Guernsey breed, eight to ten pounds of milk a day for the first few weeks will be enough. If you have no way of weighing the milk, it would be a good idea to feed just a little more than half a gallon of milk twice a day.

SAVING BEST HEIFER CALVES

Keep Record of Each Individual Cow and Save Offspring of Best Producers for Herd.

(By G. W. BARNES, Department of Agriculture, University of Arizona.)

You cannot always buy good cows, but another way to get a good herd together is by keeping records of the production of each individual cow in your herd and saving the heifer calves from the larger producers. These calves being from a good registered sire and from selected cows, it will not take many years to build up a first-class herd. You can only know your best cows by continuous weighing and testing of the milk, and keeping records of each individual so that some information may be secured as to the cost of production, which is growing more important as the prices of feedstuffs and labor advance.

KEEP YOUNG CALVES THRIFTY

Ration Consisting of Cracked Corn, Whole Oats, Bran and Oil Is Considered Excellent.

A very excellent ration for keeping young calves in good, thrifty, healthful, growing condition is one consisting of equal parts cracked corn, whole oats, bran and oil meal. This fed regularly and liberally in conjunction with clover hay will make them thrive well. The cracked corn furnishes carbohydrates in sufficient proportion to keep the calves in excellent flesh and it furnishes heat for warming their bodies in cold weather. Whole oats are very excellent for imparting bone and muscle-growing material; also stamina in young calves. Cracked or shelled corn and whole oats will be digested just as readily and efficiently by calves under one year as will these grains when ground, and calves seem to prefer them unground.

REGULARITY IS GOOD HABIT

Unequal Periods Reduce Quality and Quantity of Milk—Annual Output Is Much Less.

In all things regularity is a good practice, but in milking it is imperative. As a rule, the cow is milked at about five o'clock of mornings in summer and at seven or eight o'clock in the morning in winter. The evening milking is done very late in summer and very early in winter. The unequal periods are made for the cow by this sun-to-sun milking, and as a consequence the quality of her milk and the quantity of the same, as well as the length of her annual period of milk-giving, are reduced.

WEED OUT PROFITLESS COWS

As Result of Work of Testing Associations Many Inferior Animals Are Being Replaced.

Cow-testing associations are increasing in number all over the country and innumerable profitless cows are thus being weeded out and replaced by cows that pay their way and an interest on their value.

LIVE STOCK AIDS FERTILITY

Diversified Farming Calls for System of Rotation and Is Best Insurance of an Income.

On farms where live stock is kept the land is more productive than on farms where exclusive grain farming is followed. Where the crops are sold on the market all of the plant food contained in those crops is lost to the soil. This practice will result without fail in impoverishment of the land.

Live-stock farming is diversified farming and calls for a system of crop rotation. It returns fertility to the soil. Adds interest to the work of the people living on the farms and finally is the best insurance of an income.

Splendid Beef Type.

Every farmer should make a business of growing his own beef and pork as well as his own vegetables. He should grow his own protein feed for his stock, and stop buying bran, cottonseed meal and other high-priced protein feeds.

SWEET CLOVER FOR PASTURE

Some Farmers Regard Plant as Weed and Practically Worthless—Improves Tilth of Soil.

The value of sweet clover as a pasture or hay crop is much disputed. Some farmers regard it as practically worthless and consider it a weed, while others apparently have had good success with feeding it. Its foliage has a bitter taste due to the coumarin it contains and its stems have a tendency to become woody as they mature. If not allowed to become too rank before pasturing, or if cut for hay before the first bloom buds appear, these two objectionable features may be avoided to a considerable extent and very good feed obtained.

Since it is a biennial, sweet clover may take the place of red clover in the rotation on those lands where the latter does not thrive well, but on the best lands it cannot compete with either red clover or alfalfa for hay.

It is efficient as a soil renovator, by reason of the large amount of nitrogen it is able to take from the air as well as the humus added to the soil when it is turned under or from the decay of roots when the crop is harvested.

ADDITIONAL SPACE FOR HAY

Temporary Shelter May Be Obtained by Placing Prepared Roofing Materials on Poles.

When the rains make hay harvest so unfavorable, as was the case in 1915, it is important to provide suitable roofs under which the hay may be placed as rapidly as it can be cured sufficiently. While the substantial barn is always first to receive consideration it frequently happens that more or less additional storage is desirable.

In many cases this additional space for hay may be provided at small expense by planting telegraph poles suitable distances apart, connecting these with plates made of plank and on these plates placing roof materials. Such a structure may be built in short order and at small expense. Farm laborers may even do the building.

If a more durable and larger structure is desirable there is nothing superior to the plank frame hay barracks.

NEGLECT OF FARM MACHINES

Some Cultivators and Hay Racks Are Never Greased—Keep All Wagon Axles Well Oiled.

The oiling or greasing of no machinery on the farm is so neglected as are the axles of wagons, buggies, rakes, cultivators, etc. An oil can or box of axle grease is not carried along with these vehicles or implements, and because oiling is not needed every few hours, this is neglected.

Some cultivators and hay racks are practically never oiled or greased, when this should be attended to after a steady day or two of service or the equivalent. Nothing but close attention to wagon and buggy will keep the axles well oiled, as the trips of a few miles each day soon accumulate and get rid of all of the grease.

SEVERAL RATES OF SEEDING

Ohio Experiment Station Finds Greatest Yield of Grain Secured From Eight Pecks to Acre.

Experiments conducted by the Ohio experiment station during 17 years and including eight different rates of seeding with ten varieties of wheat show that eight pecks to the acre gives the greatest net yield of grain. Figures given in the station's bulletin point in general to a gradual increase in yield from the use of three pecks to nine pecks per acre, but seeding more than eight pecks to the acre has not paid for the extra seed.

GET BEEF FROM DAIRY STOCK

Discrimination in Color in Purchasing Meat Animals—Case of Red-and-White Holstein.

Of course all cattle can be divided into two great classes—those of the dairy type and those of the beef type.

In some cases members of the beef type have large milking capacities. These we call general or dual-purpose animals.

But all cattle may be used for beef. In fact, it is said that some of the strictly dairy types furnish a splendid quality of meat. The reason why dairy cattle are discriminated against for beef purposes is that the percentage of offal as compared to that of meat is so great that they are unprofitable as beef animals.

In the West recently a lot of steers were sold, some of them Shorthorns and others Holsteins. The Shorthorn steers sold for a little higher price than the Holsteins, with the exception of one. Now and then a purebred Holstein is born that is red and white, and in this lot there was one such steer. This animal sold for as much as the Shorthorns. This indicates that there is a discrimination in color in purchasing beef animals. If all the Holsteins had been red and white, they would have sold undoubtedly for as much in the market as the Shorthorns.

GIVE SHEEP SOME ATTENTION

Lambs Must Be Well Cared for In Order to Make Best Growth Before Marketing in Fall.

Many sheep owners have a tendency to let the sheep take care of themselves after shearing time has passed, and there are so many other duties demanding attention.

Where there are young lambs they should be well cared for in order to make the best growth possible before marketing in the fall. They are hard to get in shape to sell when they have been forced to look out for themselves.

the latter 8 inches above the frame. The knife lever is bolted on left hind leg to allow using the right for cutting and to be used on the right also.

The knife may be made of a piece of crosscut saw or scythe blade. The blade is 14 inches long. With it forage may be cut any length.—Southern Agriculturist.

GOOD STOCK IS ON INCREASE

Farmers Begin to Realize Value of Purebred Stallion—Grade Animals Are Decreasing.

That the farmers are realizing the value of the purebred stallion is shown by the fact that the number of such horses registered has increased more than 50 per cent since 1910 and that the number of grade stallions registered has decreased more than 14 per cent in the same time.

Bonds sold for county highway improvement, in the opinion of road specialists of the department, should never run for more than 30 years, and retirement even earlier is better where this can be accomplished without too great an increase in the tax rate. It is dangerous practice to have bonds run for a long period, because in such cases the indebtedness often outlives the estimated life of the improvements made with the money so raised. Money borrowed to build roads should be repaid by those who enjoy the benefit of the improvements thus financed, and not be a debt upon those who gain no benefit from the expenditure.—Weekly News Letter.

How dear to us are elections, but nevertheless an exchange modestly remarks: "Now that the election is over let us settle down and take a rest from politics. The country is not going to the devil simply because the Democrats have won. Neither would it have been headed hellward if the Republicans had won. Barring those who already had their feet under the pie counter and those others who wanted to get them there it really didn't make much difference to the ordinary citizen whether a Democrat or a Republican occupied the presidential chair."

The gasoline in the tank on John White's car gave out last Saturday evening at the foot of the Hubert Beemon hill as he and Messrs. News From Owen County.

(News-Herald)

There must be something in that Wilson thirteen superstition after all. California gave thirteen electoral votes to Wilson.

A horse hitched to a buggy and driven by Verna Cook went to kicking in front of Ransdell and Vallandingham's drug store and dropped dead on the street.

Work of the reconstruction of the Sparta road was abandoned on account of the shortage of funds necessary to carry on the work.

Buttermilk has advanced in price in Owenton from 10 to 15 cents per gallon. The demand here in the past two years has been greater than the supply.

PORK PRODUCTION.

Pork production is not receiving the attention within our State that the industry merits and farmers are slow in utilizing the pig to convert their crops into a concentrated, readily marketed, product.

Corn is advancing in price, so much so that the farmer must look to some more economical crop with which to fatten his swine.

Experiments in feeding have been made on many cheaper feeding stuffs with varying degrees of success. Among the feeds that may be produced on almost any Kentucky farm peas and alfalfa have been found the most efficient.

There is nothing to indicate that prices for pork will decrease within the next year or two, and it will be to every farmers' advantage to look to the raising of hogs. A few brood sows can be carried through the winter at a small expense by supplementing alfalfa hay or pea hay with a small amount of corn.

There need be no fear for overproduction, for when the war is over the larders and silos of Europe must be replenished and they must look to this country to do it. Be prepared.

Captured Large Chicken Hawk.

Columbia.—Mr. A. B. Cox, of near this city, trapped a monster chicken hawk a few days ago. It measured over four feet from tip to tip of its wings, and had been devouring the chickens in the neighborhood.

High School Dedicated.

Mayslick, Ky.—The Mayslick Consolidated High School was dedicated today. The address was made by Dr. W. A. Ganfield president of Centre College, Danville. The wagon to carry the children to school is the handsomest ever built for this purpose, so the builders say.

Assaulted By Negro.

Lancaster, Ky.—Mitchell Dotson, a young farmer and cattleman of Waynesburg, was perhaps fatally wounded Saturday night while being struck on the head by a negro in a colored settlement of Stanford while on his way to Lancaster to buy cattle on last court day.

Fatally Wounded.

Maysville.—Jas. Owens, it is alleged, shot and probably fatally wounded Thomas Reeves on the Owens farm five miles west of here, today. Reeves was a tenant on Owens' place and was taking down tobacco and piling it with the sticks. Owens wanted the sticks taken out and an altercation followed, Owens shooting Reeves with a shotgun, it is charged, the charge striking him in the side of the head. Owens gave himself up, and when arraigned before County Judge Rice, waived examination and was held to the December grand jury.

Planning Good Roads.

Bowling Green, Ky., Nov. 30.—Now that Warren county has voted to change the fiscal affairs from the Fiscal Court to a Board of Commissioners, it is the purpose not merely to have a change from the old to some new system that is not effective, but to introduce a practicable plan for good roads in Warren county of a permanent nature. With this in view, and in order to assist the commissioners when they begin work a year hence, the assistance of a United States engineer has been asked by the Chamber of Commerce, the body thru which the movement started.

Convicts Escape.

Pineville.—Two more convicts, members of the crew of men sent here from the State prison at Frankfort to work on the roads, have escaped from the branch prison in this city. They are: John Jones, white, and John Williams, negro. Jones was sent up from Mason county for from two to four years, and Williams was sent up from Lexington for from two to three years. The men had been employed for some time as cooks in the local prison and were regarded as trustees, and given liberties which made their escape easy. This makes seven men who have so far escaped since the convicts were brought to Bell county.

Act Upheld.

Frankfort.—The act of 1916 including the Ohio River in the prohibition against fishing excepting with hook and line, was upheld by the Court of Appeals, affirming the Jefferson Circuit Court in the case of Frank Nicoulin against Magistrate Jno J. O'Brien who fined him $15 for seining in the Ohio River this side of low water mark on the Indiana shore. Nicoulin applied for writ of prohibition to restrain Magistrate O'Brien from enforcing his judgment of conviction, but the writ was denied by the Jefferson Circuit Court. Chief Justice Miller wrote the opinion affirming the judgment.

Jury Failed to Agree.

Paris, Nov. 30.—Unable to agree the twelve jurors who held the fate of Lee Deavers, slayer of former State Representative Sidney G. Clay, in their hands, were discharged this morning at 11 o'clock. They had deliberated nearly 12 hours, and on the final ballot stood eight for acquittal and four for conviction.

At one time during the balloting the jury stood ten for conviction and two for acquittal.

Immediately following the discharge of the jury Deavers was released on bond of $5,000 and ate Thanksgiving dinner at the home of his sister, Mrs. Robt. Langston. It is doubtful whether the case will ever come to trial again, many believeing that in view of the vote for acquittal the prosecution will not be pushed.

When seen immediately following his release on bail Deavers ex pressed himself as undecided regarding his future. He said he probably would take up the thread of his life where it was broken and devote the remainder of his days to quieting, tilling the soil.

Dr. G. F. Smith has added a $500 X-ray machine to his office equipment.

FASHIONED SO SLENDERLY.

Common sense would undoubtedly refute the assumption that there can be a mode not merely in what woman wears, but in what she is. Yet the news comes from Paris that "the slim silhouette" will prevail this winter. The style will change and woman will change with it. There will be no stout girls left, nor even any of a comfortable plumpness, says Philadelphia Public Ledger. How the thing will be done we do not profess to know; but done it will be. Woman can adapt herself to anything, from crinoline to a hobble skirt. Look at any volume of ancient fashions. Were these indeed our grandmothers? Did they really have such small waists, such diminutive feet? It seems incredible. But no one who has witnessed the procession of the fashions through many a varying year will doubt it. And the marvel of it is that woman makes each new fashion more beautiful than the last. Hail to the slender girl, "the slim silhouette!" May her shadow never grow larger! Caesar wanted men about him that were fat. But a man's looks do not matter. He is at best a gross caricature of divinity. No woman ever failed to be beautiful if she chose. Nor is there much doubt that the ideal of beauty inclines more to the slender than the stout. What torture may reside in the effort to change the figure let us not too curiously inquire. Nothing is too much for woman to endure in the pursuit of an ideal.

Perhaps broiled lizard will never find its way to the menu cards of fashionable New York restaurants, but the United States marines attached to the American legation at Managua, Nicaragua, have found, as entremets to the lotus, fried or broiled iguana steaks, served with a pasty sauce made from alligator pears, to be everything claimed by the native epicures. The iguana, or giant lizard, has been used for food by the natives for many years, and iguana steak finds much favor with them because of its gamy taste. The iguana is herbivorous.

Saws and sawyers have changed. The old saw has new teeth—the nicked flint of our antediluvian ancestors has long since given way to the toothed blade of tempered steel. Closely paralleling the development of sawing instruments is progress in sawing methods. The first saw, a piece of stone with roughened edge, was worked slowly back and forth across the material to be cut. The modern saw is a narrow band of steel traveling at tremendous speed. Against the cutting edge of this logs are held by mechanical conveyors.

One curious fact may be noted in passing: This war is a war of rivers, says Literary Digest. The important battles on the western front have all been connected with some rivers, namely, the Marne, Aisne, Meuse and Somme. On the eastern front great conflicts have taken place on the Vistula, Dvina, Pruth, Dniester, Bug, Styr and Lipa rivers, while the river Tigris was the scene of the British disasters before Kut-el-Amara.

It appears there were introduced during the session of congress which has just closed 17,800 bills and 642 resolutions. Of these, 252 bills became laws and 33 public resolutions were adopted, in addition to 150 private bills and resolutions passed. Notwithstanding the lesson this teaches, there is certain to be an equally large grist of useless and impossible measures offered next year.

England's merchandise exports last June were much the largest since the war began. They were $70,000,000 greater than in June, 1915, and $115,000,000 above August, 1914, the lowest monthly level. But her imports in June were also the largest of the war, exceeding even June, 1915, by $57,500,000—this not including munitions imports of the government.

The perfected British scout-biplane, which is credited with having destroyed 27 Fokkers, is said to be the fastest thing in the world, except a projectile from a gun. And still our navy department shows a disposition to boast of a hydroplane that can go 90 miles an hour.

"A serious shortage of French brier," says an exchange, "threatens the peace of pipe smokers." Nonsense! Genuine French brier pipes will continue to be marketed as long as there is an apple tree left.

The fellow who first said life is one blamed thing after another, would be more convinced of the fact than ever during these parlous times, when one crisis treads on the heels of another.

Isn't it hard enough for the politicians to do their work now, without the possibility of wooden shoes as the result of the scarcity of leather?

One great difficulty in the latest atrocity reports is that the fighters are unable to invent anything new.

State News.

Cynthiana, Dec. 4.—The first tobacco sale of the season was held today, a total of 19,385 pounds being sold.

Glasgow, Dec. 4.—Two hundred thousand pounds of dark tobacco were sold at the Farmers' loose leaf houses here today at an average of 10 cents. Offerings were medium. Receipts at both houses were heavy.

Mt. Sterling, Dec. 4.—One hundred and one thousand three hundred and twenty-five pounds of tobacco were sold here today at the opening of the market for an average of $16.72. The market was especially strong on low grades, with demand good.

Last week was a big week at the County Infirmary. Supt. Rosser and his force killed 11 large hogs, which were put away for winter meat. During the hog killing, which lasted for three days, Constable Jas. McNamara, was on special duty as night watchman at the infirmary farm.—Maysville Independent.

Paris, Dec. 4.—The tobacco market opened in this city today with sales at the Bourbon and Paris houses, 81,040 pounds being sold. High prices were received, tips bringing from 9 to $11.10. The Bourbon house sold 41,315 lbs., for an average of $16.40. The Paris house sold 36,725 pounds at an average of $15.10.

Considerable alarm is being felt over a prospective shortage of pumpkin pie during the winter. Not only is shortage reported in the crop in the county, but it is reported that many farmers permitted their pumpkins to freeze during the recent cold weather, which will virtually render them unfit for table use.—Elizabethtown Mirror.

Hickman, Dec. 4.—For the first time in forty years corn sold in Hickman last week one day at $5 a barrel, or one dollar a bushel at the car. The crop in this section was cut down considerably by the long drouth of the summer, but those who have any crop at all are getting excellent prices for it, as well as for their cotton. Many people in this section never saw corn in the ear this high before.

Thomas Strong, living on Frozen creek, in Breathitt county, about four miles this side of Jackson, was bitten about two weeks ago by a copperhead snake, and for a while his life was despaired of. He was wild with pain, and at times bit large pieces from the bed cover in his agony. Our informant states that he is now nearly recovered from the bite and attributes his escape from death to the free use of whisky.—Hazel Green Herald.

Carrollton, Dec. 4.—A stronger tone was the general expression of growers with prices satisfactory at the opening sale on the Carrollton loose leaf market today. A large crowd of growers from this and adjoining counties were in attendance. Lower grades and reds predominated the market, the short red and green being in favor, bringing prices that surprised the growers. On account of weather conditions only 88,105 pounds were offered, averaging $14.62.

While driving through her farm yesterday morning Mrs. Gano Hildreth's driving mare became frightened at sever al carcasses of horses and came near throwing Mrs. Hildreth from the vehicle. On making an investigation it was found that unknown parties had driven the horses on the front part of the Hildreth place, near Stony Point, removed the hides, and left the carcasses lying on the ground. It is supposed that the guilty parties bought the horses in Winchester court day, drove them to the Hildreth farm and destroyed them to secure their hides, which are quite valuable at this time. The matter was reported to the county officials, who are making efforts to apprehend the offenders.—Paris Kentuckian-Citizen.

FARM ANIMALS

SMALL LITTERS FROM GILTS

Time for Breeding Depends Largely on Size, Vigor and Age—Liable to Be Stunted.

The time for breeding gilts depends upon their size and vigor as well as their age. However, it is seldom advisable to breed a gilt before she is eight months old, and in many cases ten or twelve months is a better age. What is gained by getting a litter of pigs soon may be lost in getting a small litter. And if the usefulness of the sow as a brood sow be impaired the total loss in the end overbalances the gain in getting her to produce early.

Too young gilts almost invariably have small litters. Then their mammary organs do not develop right, and this in turn affects the size of litter they will raise next time. If a sow gives milk out of only six teats she cannot raise a dozen good pigs. Also too young sows cannot stand the strain of nursing a litter. They do not have the vitality to produce a large flow of milk and grow at the same time.

If a gilt is once really stunted in this way she never develops as she otherwise would. She is likely never to raise such strong and vigorous litters as she could if allowed more maturity before breeding.

SHORTHORNS IN MUCH FAVOR

Argentine Breeders Pay High Prices for Pedigree Stock—Price Lincoln Ram Brings $4,000.

Argentina breeders are long on enthusiasm and prices of Shorthorns, says Breeders' Gazette. And they also opened wide their purses for other varieties of pedigree stock at the exhibition which marked the half-century anniversary of the Argentine Rural society. 43 Shorthorn bulls averaged $8,800. This average owes considerable of its extraordinary height to the fact that the bull which was reserve to the champion brought $50,000, which was the record price for a reserve champion bull. The champion was not sold. It must be left to the imagination to fix the probable price he would have brought if offered.

When the champion Lincoln ram brings $4,000, it is an easy inference that things are going swimmingly down there. A little matter of 800 Shorthorn bulls was shown.

STRAW UTILIZED IN EUROPE

Made Quite Palatable by Mixing With Beets, Mangels, Silage and Other Forage Crops.

In effect, a recent bulletin of the United States department of agriculture asks why the American farmer cannot put straw to the same use as it is put by the European farmer. In Europe the farmer knows as well as the American farmer that straw is not liked by stock, but instead of burning it, or otherwise wasting it, the European farmer chops it up, mixes it with beets, mangels, silage or other feeds, and makes it so palatable that it can be fed to good advantage.

The report states that the bureau of crop estimates has found that 15 per cent of the straw produced in the United States is burned. In many districts there are no cattle and remoteness from a suitable market makes the sale of the straw unprofitable. But in such cases farmers would profit by an investment in a few cattle.

SWEET CLOVER WON'T BLOAT

Belief Been Held Long and Supported by Good Testimony—Cases Reported in Iowa and Nevada.

The belief that sweet clover will not cause bloat has been held so long and has been supported by such good testimony that it has come to be accepted as a fact. Several authentic cases of sweet clover bloat have been observed, however, in Nevada and Iowa, and owners of cattle and sheep who have sweet clover pastures will do well to exercise caution.

The danger is not as great as in pasturing alfalfa, since sweet clover has in it a substance known as coumarin, which offsets bloating, though in view of the latest observations it does not prevent it entirely.

THE DAIRY

HOUSE-CLEANING IS NEEDED

Thoroughly and Systematically Clean Barn Before Dairy Cow Is Taken From Pasture.

Before the dairy cow is taken from the pasture, the barn should be thoroughly and systematically cleaned. All cobwebs should be brushed down and the walls and ceiling should be whitewashed or painted some light color. Either whitewash or paint will give a clean surface and make the whole stable look lighter and brighter. It might be well, too, to put in a few extra windows.

The dairy cow has had the freedom of the pasture and the fresh air of the fields for the last five months; she has practically maintained herself and produced milk upon succulent feed; she will soon be returned to the barn where she will spend the greater part of each day. It should be the aim of every keeper to see to it that his cows are housed as comfortably as possible and provided with a goodly quantity and variety of palatable feed that will nourish her abundantly and help her produce an even flow of milk.

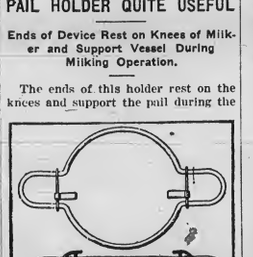
The right kind of a cow will repay with interest every cent invested for her comfort—for warmth, light, ventilation, and feed. If she is not comfortably housed her returns will be cut down in proportion to her discomfort.

CUTTING HAIRS FROM UDDER

From Sanitary Standpoint and Comfort to Cow While Being Milked, Filaments Are Detrimental.



It is not at all uncommon among dairy cows to find the udder covered with a thick growth of long hair, which may be of some protection to the udder in some respects, but from a sanitary standpoint and a comfort to the cow while she is being milked, these hairs are detrimental. Under the usual farm conditions this growth of hair is commonly covered with filth, and even in well-kept dairies this hair, unless kept well clipped, will collect more or less dirt and trash.

In many cases, too, these hairs will persist in falling into the milk pail. To prevent occurrences such as these the udder should be clipped closely at least twice each year, and in this way prevent the accumulation of filth.

PAIL HOLDER QUITE USEFUL

The ends of this holder rest on the knees and support the pail during the operation of milking. It is made of a single piece of stout flexible wire.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

FILTHY HABIT OF MILKERS

Practice of Wetting Hands With Milk Is Liable to Cause Cow's Teats to Chap In Winter.

Milkers should be allowed to milk only with dry hands. The practice of wetting the hands with milk is a filthy habit and is liable to cause the cows' teats to chap in the winter time.

Milking should be done quickly and thoroughly, with no violent jerking of the teats. After each cow is milked the milk should be removed immediately to the milkhouse.

PRICES FOR DAIRY PRODUCTS

Prospects Good That We Will See Highest Mark for Butterfat During Coming Winter.

The shortage in dairy products which began last winter has not at this date been made up and there is every evidence that we will this winter see the highest prices for butterfat we have witnessed for many years.

The man who stuck to the dairy business through good and ill repute is the man who is going to profit by this condition.

Interesting Facts Gathered During the Week by Our Regular Correspondents.

VERONA.

The most important event that has taken place in St. Patrick's parish for a long time occurred last Saturday morning when Miss Katherine M. Dempsey was united in marriage to Edward J. Maddin.

As the wedding party entered the church the choir softly chanted a hymn begging God to give the contracting parties grace always to know and do the will of their Heavenly Father.

Before the simple altar, which had been artistically decorated for the occasion, they knelt, while the pastor, pronounced the solemn and impressive words which made them man and wife forever.

The attendants were Miss Josephine Maddin, sister of the groom, and Mr. Jerry Dempsey, brother of the bride.

The bride was tastefully attired in a gown of white embroidered net and wore a white picture hat and white shoes.

The handsome groom was dressed in a suit of dark blue.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Dempsey and is an intelligent and very lovable young lady.

The groom is a most popular and highly esteemed young man. He has for the past few years been chief warden of the parish, and the work accomplished during that time has been due largely to his earnest and untiring efforts in behalf of the church.

After the ceremony a sumptuous and elaborate wedding feast was served to about sixty relatives and close friends at the home of the bride.

The happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful and valuable presents. They will reside on their farm near here.

Mr. and Mrs. Maddin have a host of friends who wish them many long years of happiness and prosperity.

Among those present at the wedding from a distance were Mrs. Mary Foley and little son, William, and Patrick J. Dempsey, of Lebanon, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Maddin, of Sparta; Mrs. Jno. Powell and Mrs. Jas. Conner, of Cheviot, Ohio; Miss Mamye Powell of Bridgetown, Ohio, and Mrs. Jas. Cavey, of Cincinnati.

FAITH IN GOOD ROADS

Country Spending $200,000,000 Yearly on Improvements.

Ratio Expected to Be Double That Amount in Next Decade—Government Won't Aid Community That Doesn't Help Itself.

The country is now spending well toward $200,000,000 a year on rural roads—perhaps twice what it was spending for that purpose ten years ago. Faith in good roads probably increased during the decade in an even greater ratio, and it will be surprising if the expenditure ten years hence is not double $200,000,000.

This is mainly, of course, an effect of the motor car; but a lot of people misjudge the motor car because they forget—or do not know—that in all the more prosperous rural regions a gasoline vehicle nowadays is just about as standard an implement as a mowing machine. The day has long gone by when good roads agitation could be discredited by ascribing it to bloated urban plutocrats who wanted to ride comfortably.

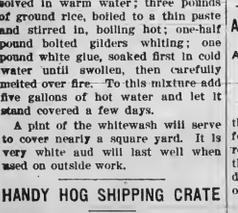
By an act that became law last month the federal government purposes to contribute $75,000,000 for good country roads used by the postal service, sharing the expense equally with the states or other local units. The work is to be done on specifications approved by the department of agriculture, duly inspected and approved.

The federal government ought to contribute, for highways are a legitimate national interest. Under this law it helps no community that does not first help itself. Its participation will tend powerfully to standardize road building and to distribute the results of experience; so it should tend to give a better quality of road for no greater cost.

Twenty-five years ago any given so-called public highway was usually the exclusive affair of a board of supervisors or commissioners who ruled for a year over a territory three or four miles square. Presently the counties came in; then the states; now the federal government—which is as it should be.—Saturday Evening Post.

WHITEWASH OF HIGH VALUE

Government Standard Is Very White and Will Last Well When Used on Outside Jobs.



Following is the well-known standard recipe for "Government Whitewash:" Slake one-half bushel fresh lime with boiling water, covering it to keep in the steam. Strain liquid through a fine sieve and add seven pounds of fine salt, previously dissolved in warm water; three pounds of ground rice, boiled to a thin paste and stirred in, boiling hot; one-half pound bolted gilders whiting; one pound white glue, soaked first in cold water until swollen, then carefully melted over fire. To this mixture add five gallons of hot water and let it stand covered a few days.

A pint of the whitewash will serve to cover nearly a square yard. It is very white and will last well when used on outside work.

HANDY HOG SHIPPING CRATE

Timber Used in Construction Should Be Southern Yellow Pine—List of Material Needed.

A strong shipping crate for hogs is an easy thing to make. It should be well built of southern yellow pine. A neatly built crate, a shipping tag bearing the shipper's name and that of his farm often will aid in selling stock.

Hog Shipping Crate.

In case the shipment is to be a long one, wire a pan of water in one corner.

Material for crate, 2 feet wide, 5 feet long and 3 feet high.

1—1 by 12, for bottom end board; 1—1 by 1—6—16 uprights and opening end; 3—1 by 16—10 sides and closed end; 2—1 by 12—10 floor and bottom side boards; 1—1 by 6—8 cleats.—Farm and Home.

SMALL TRACTOR IS FAVORED

Profitable Implement If Enough Land Is Cultivated to Use It Economically, Say Users.

The farm tractor is generally a profitable implement if enough land is cultivated to use it economically. This is the opinion expressed by three-fourths of the two hundred tractor users in Illinois to investigators for the United States department of agriculture. About one-third of the men on this list increased the acreage, on an average 120 acres to the farm, after buying the tractors and finding that they did not have room to use them to the best advantage.

CANDLING EGGS ON FARM IS PROFITABLE

SEPARATING EGGS INTO GROUPS.

The market demand for candled eggs has so increased in the last few years that many egg farmers are candling their shipments before they go to the commission man or ultimate consumer. The call for eggs in various degrees of freshness necessitates egg brokers to grade according to blemishes and usage. For instance, the high-class restaurant trade demands strictly fresh eggs in various degrees of freshness and free from spots upon the yolk, while the baker, although desiring fresh eggs, will utilize those slightly stale or having various blemishes, visible but not offensive. The sorting necessarily results in a different selling price for each grade. In general, however, the farmer receives a uniform price, while the middleman profits by candling and selling at different prices, all of which are above the flat price and the farmer.

Candling on the farm, which requires comparatively little time and can be done at slight expense, is bringing farmers now in the business a price nearer to that of the city consumer. Although under improved commercial methods an expensive outfit is used, the process does not require an extensive outlay or any particular machine.

Years ago, before electricity was so generally used, farmers and egg men candled with nothing more elaborate than an ordinary spermaceti candle and a darkened room. No apparatus whatever was used to condense the light, and the contents of the egg were made visible by holding the egg in front of the light. Some have become very expert at this and use the same method today. The light is not bright, however, and special care must be taken not to bring the candle too near the egg, as the shell becomes smoky very readily.

To center the light and focus the rays through the egg in a more condensed form a simple apparatus is now used on many farms. A piece of 4 or 5-inch tin tubing, 8 or 10 inches long and having a shiny inner surface, is fastened to any kind of a standard. Holes are made around the lower rim for ventilation. The top is covered with a flat piece of tin, amply perforated to allow air circulation and permit the candle to burn without smoking. A hole slightly smaller in diameter than the circumference of an egg is made about three-quarters the way up the cylinder. Short tubing of the same diameter may or may not be soldered at this opening to conduct the rays out to the egg.

A large candle is placed inside the cylinder on a firm, spring holder, the spring of which is adjusted by experiment, so that the candle rises as it becomes of lighter weight in burning. The purpose is to have the body of the flame always opposite the aperture. The room or closet in which this apparatus is used is darkened and the contents of the egg show quite plainly when the egg covers the opening. Where available, an electric light bulb is used instead of a candle, and better results are obtained from its more powerful rays. Although many defects are visible through the candling machine, farmers have found the recognition of some of the more common to be a great advantage. Since candling investigation work has been independently conducted in several parts of the country, a slight confusion of terms has arisen, due to various naming of the defects. The terms used here are those in most common usage, but the important consideration is not what the defect is called, but what it is.

The illustration shows a candling apparatus in operation. Figs. 1 and 2 show how the egg is held before the light. Fig. 3 is an ordinary incubator lamp; 4, untested eggs; 5, infertile eggs; 6, good eggs.

AVOID DRAFTS IN HEN HOUSE

Attention Given at Right Time Will Prevent Roup and Other Troubles—Leave Window Open.

Be sure that the house is tight on three sides and that there is no chance for a draft to strike the hens. If hens roost or are placed in a draft during the fall and winter, colds are sure to develop, which may result in roup and other troubles.

The south side, or front, of the poultry house may be left comparatively open, but should be under control, so that the openings may be closed gradually as the weather becomes cold.

Have muslin curtains in the front of the house, or leave a window partly open even on the coldest nights, to allow some ventilation in the house.

Fowls will stand considerable cold air, provided it is dry, and ventilation will keep the air thoroughly dry in the house.

CLEAN MATERIAL FOR NESTS

Worn-Out Straw or Hay May Cover Multitude of Lice and Mites—Hens Shun Such Places.

How long since the nesting material in your hens' nests has been renewed? Ten to one the worn-out straw or hay covers multitudes of lice and mites lying in wait for the next unlucky hens that enter the nests.

Wouldn't you shun those nests if you were a hen, and hunt a nest in the grass, or knock off laying altogether?

POOR VENTILATION OF HOUSE

Overcrowding and Overheating Decrease Vitality and Make Birds Easy Prey to Disease.

Poor ventilation claims a large toll from the flock. Overcrowding and overheating decrease the vitality and make the birds an easy prey to inherent and acquired germs that may have lain long in the system awaiting a favorable opportunity to increase and do mischief.

EXHIBIT CHICKENS AT FAIRS

Practice Helps to Encourage Interest in Poultry—May Bring About Some Good Sales.

Plan to exhibit some of the fowls, and the earlier chicks if big enough, at the nearest agricultural fair. If you have standard-bred stock. By doing so you will help to encourage interest in better poultry and may find that showing will make several sales at good prices.

DUST BATH ERADICATES LICE

Where Fowls Are Confined, Boxful of Fine, Loose Dust Is Essential—Coal Ashes Will Do.

If fowls are confined to a place where they cannot find dust to wallow in, a boxful of fine, loose soil or road dust should be provided in which they can take a dust bath, as this is necessary to their health, acting as a cleanser and lice-killer.

If soil or dust is not procurable sifted coal ashes will answer, but wood ashes should never be used, as the alkali in them destroys the oil in the plumage and, what is equally objectionable, takes the gloss off the shanks.

TUBERCULOUS HENS IN FLOCK

Make Examination at Night While Fowls Are on Roost—Destroy Those Appearing Sick.

Go through your flock at night while the hens are on the roost and handle the birds. All that are emaciated or appear sick in any way should be killed and burned or buried deeply after covering with lime.

The principal symptoms for tuberculosis are emaciation, diarrhea, lameness, enlarged liver and spleen. Usually the two last mentioned organs and the intestines are covered with nodules in the advanced stage.

WHY SOME HENS DO NOT LAY

Poorly Constructed or Damp Houses May Be Cause—Vermin May Also Be Reason for Condition.

Poorly constructed or damp houses may be the cause for such nonlaying condition of the hens, improper ventilation or overcrowding of the laying houses, or perhaps unclean, insanitary surroundings.

At certain seasons of the year vermin may also cause such a condition of the laying stock, or in the fall and early winter months molting of feathers will cause the hens to stop laying.

STUDY CHARACTER OF FOWLS

Where Points Are Found Indicating Good Layer Breed for That Object—Don't Mind Color.

If we want eggs, let us first get a hen that lays, no matter what her color or shape. Let us study her external character, and when we find that certain characters or points indicate the good layer, let us breed for those characters regardless of anything else.

OPENING SALE

Of The Loose Leaf Warehouse Last Saturday Was Very Encouraging

The Walton Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse was opened last Saturday under very encouraging conditions. Notwithstanding the very dry conditions that had prevailed for so long a time the growers managed to offer 7193 pounds for sale that day, and all was taken quickly by the buyers representing the large manufacturers at prices ranging from $9 to $10, and but one sale was rejected, that of 300 pounds by Hugh Vest, of Verona, who did not believe it brought enough money considering the condition of the market. The average of the sale was $15.12. There was a very large attendance of buyers and growers and the entire warehouse was covered with the offerings, most of the baskets containing only a small quantity of tobacco, as few of the growers had stripped much of their crops, and what they had was of the poorest quality, and there was scarcely any good tobacco in the offerings. There was a large percentage of green and frosted tobacco, and considering the quality the prices paid were very high, but it seems as if the prices will prevail as the buyers were very anxious and announce they will be at this market as long as there is any tobacco to sell. All of the big manufactories were represented by buyers. J. C. Hughes sold the first basket. DeWitt Collins, of Cincinnati, and R. E. Holland, of North Carolina, were the auctioneers, and they are first class. Mr. Holland is the auctioneer at the Glencoe market. The next sale will be held Saturday, Dec. 16th, and afterwards every Wednesday and Saturday. There will be a big offering at the next sale and all of the big manufactories will have buyers present.

The Piano Recital by the pupils of Mrs. Wallace at the high school auditorium Monday night was largely attended and the pupils acquitted themselves with much credit. The following pupils took part: Mary and Edna Gordon, Glenna Rose and Jennie Lee Gaines, Aileen and Mary Chambers, Mariam Brooking Tompkins, Wendell Rouse, Mary Jane Houston, Mabel Mayhugh, Lula Edwards, Grace Duggeon, Virginia Bevarly, Ethalyne McIntyre, Louise Colston, Margaret Ingram, Myrtle Grubbs, Elizabeth Dickson, Susan Hance, Georgia Rouse, Dorothy Northcutt, Eula Yelton, Dorothy Sechrist, Thelma Johnson, Wm. Readnour, Raymond Bevarly, Jno. Hamilton Tompkins.

Daniel M Roberts, aged 77 years, a life long resident of Boone county, died at the Roberts farm between Walton and Verona Dec 11th, after a short illness He became ill Saturday and pneumonia developed and caused his death Monday He was born near the place he died and had lived his entire life in Boone county, enjoying the respect and esteem of a large circle of friends The funeral took place Wednesday, the services being held at his late home by Rev W B. Gariott of the Methodist church after which the remains were laid to rest in the Baptist cemetery at Walton

Joseph Severance, lecturer for the Kentucky Tuberculosis Commission of Frankfort, delivered a very interesting and instructive lecture on the cause, prevention and cure of tuberculosis, at the Methodist church last Friday night. The speaker was introduced by Judge J. G. Tomlin who is the President of the Seventh Tuberculosis Sanatorium District.

A small but very attentive audience was present, and all pronounce the lecture full of instruction and well worth hearing. A strong effort is being made to organize Kentucky for an effective fight against the most common and deadly of all diseases —tuberculosis.

Until you serve it, you will never know how much pleasure coffee can give

A million other women have learned what good coffee means—they have solved this question in their homes for all time.

They know now that to get good coffee, the coffee itself must be right.

There are hundreds of varieties of coffee grown. The coffee itself must be put up by men who know coffee. Arbuckles' Coffee is. It is put up by Arbuckle Bros., the greatest coffee merchants in the world. There is more of it sold than any other coffee—that is why they can afford to give you the biggest value for your money.

And no matter how good coffee itself is, if it isn't well taken care of, it makes a poor drink. Arbuckles' Coffee is put up in sealed, dust-proof packages, carefully wrapped to protect it from moisture, dirt and store odors. It arrives in your kitchen with all its original strength and flavor.

Have in your home the enjoyment of drinking the coffee which, of all the coffees in America, is the most popular! Solve your coffee problem in the identical way a million other women have. Serve Arbuckles' Coffee tomorrow—know how much pleasure coffee can give.

Several young people enjoyed a rabbit roast at J. E. Gaines out on the Petersburg pike last Saturday night. Don't Trap Too Long.

Boone county's army of trappers must bear in mind that their war on the fur bearing animals must cease on the 31st day of this month, says the game law of Kentucky. If the law is obeyed for several years trapping in this county will become worth while.

Some Life on the Wharf Then

According to the Rising Sun Recorder something was doing on the wharf there fifty years ago

On Monday last, flatboat No. 14, of Grace, Lostutter, & Rabb, left our wharf for the South, Pilot James Daly. Her cargo is as follows: 75 tons hay; 3,146 bushels corn; 654 barrels potatoes; 21 barrels onion; 21 barrels turnips; 11 barrels onion sets; 6 barrel Sorghum molasses; 2 barrels vinegar; 4 tierces lard; 110 kegs lard; 5,500 pounds pork; 700 gallons stoneware; 352 pounds tobacco; 100 bushels oats; a large lot of candles and soap.

A Complex Road Machine.

A complex and highly ingenious machine has been perfected which runs over a sample of road surface at the National Physical laboratory, shows the wear caused by different loads at different speeds and in various climatic conditions. In other words, given a specimen of a new surface, the machine will tell pretty accurately what, say the Manchester-to-Wilmslow road, would be like in a year if that surface were laid on it. It seems a pity that so valuable a wear-and-tear recording device cannot be applied to more than roads.—Manchester England, Guardian.

Road Engineers' Convention.

On January 17th to 20th, inclusive, there will be held at Bowling Green, Kentucky, the County Road Engineers Convention It is the first time that such a meeting has ever been held in Western Kentucky and all county officials and the State Department are endeavoring to make the meeting the largest of its kind ever held in Kentucky

At all previous meetings of this character, the theory of road building has been mostly discussed but, after two years work under the state aid plan, road men thru out the state now have practical problems to discuss and the program has been arranged with that end in view

It has been recommended by the State Office that every County Judge bring his entire court to the meeting and that the county pay the expenses incurred by such a trip It is a known fact that travel broadens a man and it is believed by all concerned that it will be a great help to the various counties thru out the state to attend such a meeting where they can learn what other counties are doing and will have an opportunity to inspect the excellent roads in Warren and adjoining counties, as well as the Kentucky Rock Asphalt fields about which so much has been written in recent days

Other States in the union have several road meetings a year and they are attended by between two and three thousand people and in no state in the union are people more alive to the road movement than in Kentucky, and there is no reason why the meeting at Bowling Green should not be attended by at least three thousand people Efforts are now being made to induce the railroads throughout the state to give reduced rates and it is believed that such will be done

The meeting is held at a time of the year when no road work is being done and no working time will be lost by those interested in road building and it is earnestly hoped that all County Officials all Contractors and all citizens interested in road building will make a special effort to attend the meeting

When the owner got home that night he discovered his horse still attached to the buggy and nothing about the vehicle or harness broken. The buggy seat and lap cover had fallen out of the buggy somewhere. The night was very bright, and several places were noticed where the horse had turned around in the road with the buggy, the turn having been made apparently as carefully as if a driver had been hold of the lines.

Sweeping Changes to be Made

Frankfort December 10 Sweeping changes in the present system of this state are recommended in the report of a special commission promised at the last session to the Kentucky General Assembly to devise a new tax laws The report will be presented to Governor Morrow tomorrow

—The most radical change recommended by the report is the classification of property for purposes of taxation must end of levying a general property tax as at present This classification of property is made possible by a constitutional amendment voted upon at an election held in 1915

Embracing three bills, the enactment of which is urged at the earliest possible moment, the report of the State Tax Commission, which has been placed before Gov Stanley by Chairman Rite H Buffaker, and which represents the commissions labors of several months, recommends not only a reduced State tax rate, but seeks, under the constitutional amendment providing for the classification of property to stimulate the development of industry and the growth of the State by dissolving from local taxation all intangible property and such property as machinery of manufacturing concerns, raw materials on hand and materials in process of manufacture

By recommending a State tax rate of 10 cents on the $100 valuation instead of 55 cents and the creation of a permanent bi-partisan tax commission with wide supervisory powers the report reflects the belief of the commissioners that enough property now escaping all taxation, will be brought out to offset the decrease and meet the state's financing problem. In this direction a sweeping change is proposed in the method of the State's supervision over taxing bodies in the various counties in that it recommends that the bi-partisan commission of three members shall have full power to bring about equalization of the tax burden by virtue of its right to reassess

Good Men Wanted.

F. Lee Sheppy, 172 N. Halsted Street, Chicago, Ill., General Sales Manager of the largest concern of its kind in the world, wants three or four men in Boone county and several men in adjoining counties, to work for him spare time or all the time. He can use only those who have a rig or auto. Work is very pleasant and no previous selling experience is necessary. Work consists of leaving a wonderful new household necessity in the homes on free trial. Tests at more than thirty of the leading Universities and the Government Bureau of Standards show this new article to be four times as efficient as article now in general use in this section. Article is needed in every rural home and benefits every member of the household, bringing cheer comfort and happiness into the home. Not necessary to be away from home nights. Pay from $6.00 to $15.00 per day according to ability and number of homes visited. In writing Mr. Sheppy, mention what townships will be most convenient for you to work in; what your regular occupation is; your age; married or single; how long you have lived in the community; what kind of a rig or auto you have; whether you wish to work spare time or steady; how much time you will have to devote to the work; when you can start, and about how many homes are within six miles of you in each direction. This is a splendid opportunity for several men in Boone county and counties adjoining to make good money, working steady or spare time. Some of the field men earn $300 per month; one farmer earned $1,000 working spare time only. No investment or bond necessary

A High-Priced Beefsteak.

Probably the highest price ever paid for a beefsteak was that charged at Circle City, Alaska The first steak that ever reached that town is said to have sold for something like $48 a pound There were 10 pounds of this steak which was shipped 250 miles to Circle City When the owner of the precious bit of meat reached the camp the miners turned out in a body to see it which was placed on exhibition and attracted as much attention as if it were the rarest of gems Everybody wanted a piece of it and the prices offered were such as would have resulted in a mining camp quarrel if it had not been for the discretion of the owner, who decided to raffle the steak off for the benefit of the hospital that Bishop Rowe was trying to establish for the miners at Circle City

Bids were started at $5a pound and rose briskly to $35 Finally, in order to avoid complications, it was determined to sell tickets at prices from 50 cents to $2.50 for the privilege of drawing for a slice After $400 worth of tickets had been sold the drawing began, and, to the relief of those in charge of the sale, no trouble resulted —Los Angeles Times.

FORTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Items Taken From The Recorder of December 14, 1876.

Monday the county court appointed Esqs. Geo. W. Baker and W. W. Garnett a committee to confer with J. P. Ely and others with a view to leasing to them the country's land at Big Bone Springs for the purpose of exhuming bones.

Jonas Close weighed forty-eight hogs here last Tuesday that averaged 381 pounds. He sold them at 5½ cents a pound.

The cold weather last week caused navigation on the Ohio river to suspend. Persons who for many years lived near the river say they never before knew it to be blocked in such a short time.

E. E. Foster is now in charge of the common school at this place for the time being.

There are six grown persons and six children in the poor house.

William Wake, of Grant county, will bid on the Belleview pike.

Monday week is Christmas.

Saturday morning was a stinger, seven below zero.

Some very nice ice was put up last week.

No tobacco buyers have been among the growers in this vicinity.

A little daughter of Owen Tanner, while coasting one day last week, broke a bone in one of her lower limbs.

Road Talk.

With the coming of the winter months when people will be transporting agricultural products to the market, it is thought well that the people in general be cautioned about the weight of load that should be hauled over macadam and gravel roads in order that the roads may not be badly damaged

For wagons having tires two inches and less in width not more than 4000 pounds including weight of wagon should be hauled

For wagons having tires 2½ inches in width not more than 4800 pounds including weight of wagon should be hauled

For wagons having tires three inches in width a load of 5600 pounds may be hauled, and for wagons having four inch tires 7200 pounds may be hauled

The following rule may be used to calculate the amount that should be hauled on any wagon, cart, automobile truck or any other vehicle The load should be so limited that the bearing of the load on each wheel, including the weight of the vehicle, all of which is transmitted through the axle shall not exceed 500 pounds per inch of tire for tires two inches in width or less and for tires in excess of two inches in width the limit shall not exceed 500 pounds per inch width of tire for two inches of width plus 100 pounds for each additional inch of width

There is no penalty attached to the weight of the load that may be hauled over the roads, but people should be public spirited enough not to want to damage the roads and should not haul more than the limit when it is a known fact that such action on their part is rapidly tearing up the roads

The various counties have gone to considerable expense to put the roads in proper condition for winter traffic and all county authorities will deeply appreciate cooperation on the part of the public using the roads

Make the Cave a Park.

Mammouth Cave should be made a national park Now is a good time to take the necessary action. The Federal Government should be able to acquire the property upon reasonable terms The management of the cave has been such as to suggest that an adequate hotel will be built at once if at all, but even if it is the intention of the managers of the estate to replace the hotel that has been burned the history of the cave as a private property is a history of failure to induce the number of visitors which the importance and the interest of the natural wonder warrants. As a national park improved by good roads, provided with a good hotel, Mammouth Cave would be seen by ten times as many persons as see it under present conditions

The area surrounding Mammouth Cave is well forested, picturesque, well supplied with streams and in every way suitable for a national park Kentuckians should urge their Representatives in Congress to interest themselves in securing a sufficient appropriation to acquire the cave and enough ground around it to make a reserve representative of an exceptionally interesting section scenically considered and now almost as primitive as it was when Mammouth Cave was discovered

The burning of the hotel is regretable, despite the unsuitability of the building and its equipment for the purpose of a modern hotel Its age and quaintness make it a sight above ground hardly less interesting to the visitor than subterranean chambers and corridors beneath it The loss of the registers, which should have been in fireproof safes, was avoidable and will arouse resentment A wood building where there is no fire protection must sooner or later be claimed by fire The hotel at Mammouth Cave stood longer than might have been expected —Courier-Journal

ROOTS FOR STOCK IN WINTER

Mangels and Turnips Act As Appetizers and Bowel Regulators—Use Care in Feeding.

Most stockmen realize the worth of roots in the winter ration for the cattle, but few recognize the fact that the mangels and turnips may be fed in such a way that much of their value is lost, says a writer in an exchange. Roots act as appetizers and bowel regulators rather than as actual milk producers; hence they should be fed with care. They are largely composed of water, and therefore they use up the heat of the body. For this reason, in extreme cold weather we cut down the usual quantity of roots fed, and on severely cold days we even skip the roots altogether, feeding something else having less water content.

Roots should not be taken from the storage pits or cellars, where the temperature is not far from the freezing point, and fed immediately. A better way is to bring them into a heated room for 12 to 24 hours, after which they may be cut and given to the live stock. We like to bring the roots into a warm room in the morning, leaving them until the next morning, when they are cut and fed. Cows that are giving milk should eat the roots just after being milked in the morning.

FATTENING OF BEEF CATTLE

Value of Silage Strongly Emphasized by Indiana Station—Ration for Substantial Gains.

The value of the silo in fattening cattle was strongly emphasized by the Indiana station. In this experiment substantial gains were made on the following ration:

2.5 pounds cottonseed meal.
4.4 pounds clover hay.
14.4 pounds shelled corn.
27.7 pounds corn silage.

When silage was fed the cost of gain was one-half cent a pound less than with dry feed and the increase in profits amounted to from $3 to $8 per steer. The cottonseed meal gave much better results than oil meal and tended to produce firmer flesh with silage.

Splendid Beef Type.

Where there is not an abundance of grazing when cattle are fed the silo will be almost indispensable to economy in feeding. The amount saved in feeding silage will soon pay for the silo. It helps utilize the coarse feeds, and it takes the place of green pasture when this is not available.

CRUDE OIL DESTROYS VERMIN

Oilers Are Cheapest and Most Efficient Means of Ridding Hogs of Harmful Lice.

Hog oilers are the cheapest and most efficient means of ridding the hog of lice, says the veterinary department of the Nebraska College of Agriculture.

One application of crude oil kills both lice and nits. The most convenient method of applying the oil is by means of a hog oiler, of which there are several good types. They are always ready and require little attention. The best oiler allows the pig to rub the oil on any part of the body.

The oiler can also be applied with a sprinkler, spray pump, broom, or brush. If there is any indication of skin disease, the parts may be scrubbed with a broom or brush so as to get the oil well into the skin. When crude oil is used, the appearance of skin and hair is greatly improved.

SUNSHINE IN CATTLE STABLE

Animal in Sunlight Takes on Flesh More Readily—Southern Exposure Is Favored.

A farmer, whose cattle have always been kept in a stable on the north side of the barn, well lighted and ventilated, had occasion to enlarge his stable, building the extension with a southern exposure, into which the direct rays of the sun were permitted to enter with no obstruction.

He discovered by accident, what he subsequently demonstrated by repeated experience, that the same creature in the sunlight took on flesh more readily, ate less and produced more than when kept in the stable where the direct sunlight never entered.

More than this, he proved conclusively that creatures suffering with various diseases, or reduced physical condition from divers causes, recovered more readily when afforded the energizing influences of the sunshine.

Tobacco Stems.

It is an old story that the packing houses save and utilize everything in the slaughter of hogs but the "squeal."

What was once a by-product of the copper smelting plants, sulphuric acid, which was allowed to go to waste or begging for a market, is now in great demand at prices approximately ten times its former value.

Today tobacco stems are sought after and utilized for fertilizer purposes. The demand is beyond the supply and prices are attracting manufacturers who are fitted for grinding them into dust. Tobacco stalks are even purchased, ground fine and used for the same purpose.

Stems are a by-product of manufacturing tobacco and carry in considerable quantities the elements of nitrogen and potash. This is why the fertilizer manufacturers want them.

The leaf, including stems, take from our Kentucky soils untold thousands of tons of plant-growing elements. What are we doing to increase, rather than decrease our soil supply?

The Future Not Entirely Unkind

There are times when our spirits are lightened by the hope of better things only to be met by discouraging conditions. This is a time when we should bring into use all the better elements of our nature, and smooother the approach of reverses by exerting our best efforts to achieve success though the paths look dark and uninviting.

There are those who can meet adverse conditions with more assurance than others. There are those who never care for anything beyond the present, and it is this element that seem happiest and better contented than their condition really justifies.

Again, there is an element that expects all sunshine, and if misfortune crosses their path, they give up to melancholy and instead of putting forth greater effort they sit down to nurse misfortune and to cradle blighted hopes.

Those thus constituted are incapacitated for the greater things of life. They lack the stamina and the "true grit" that characterizes the successful business man, or the prosperous, cheerful mechanic.

There are the times that try the "staying qualities" of the average individual—times of high prices and the approach of winter. To meet such times successfully we must put on the armor of industry and perseverance, and above all, inject into our every day life a spirit and habit of economy. We can not afford to indulge to any great extent the longings for luxuries, but rather should be thankful for just the actual necessities of life.

With economy as our safeguard we can the more easily overcome the obstacles of high prices and meet the unpleasant conditions that confront us with a determination to at least "keep the wolf from the door."

We are sure to feel the result of the wasted moments of summer's sunshine, when perhaps we could have turned an honest dollar that would come in good play during the cold, chilly winds of winter, but it is useless to worry over the past.

Look upon the future as not entirely unkind, and especially do not fail to lay your burdens at the door of Him that is ever compassionate to the poor, and whose love and tender mercies are graciously disposed to those who sincerely seek His aid.

Farmers Want to Borrow.

Washington, Dec 7.—Officials of the Farm Loan Board announced today that more than 50,000 farmers have applied for mortgage loans aggregating about $150,000,000, or more than 17 times the amount of money which will be immediately available for loans upon the organization of the 12 farm loan banks.

Most of the applications have come from the South and West. They still continue to come in by hundreds every day. Requests for application blanks, 2,000 farmers, have come from Iowa alone.

Although the location of the banks probably will not be announced before December 20th, it was said today that almost immediately after organization, the banks would find it necessary to issue bonds for virtually their entire capital stock to meet the demand of borrowers.

The rate of interest on bonds is a subject now engaging the board's attention. It is thought that it will not exceed five per cent and may not exceed four and one half per cent.

The bonds will be offered at the maximum allowed by law of one per cent less than the rate charged for loans.

Daily conferences are being held by board members with bankers from various sections to determine the minimum rate at which the bonds will be absorbed by investors, as this will determine the interest rate to be charged on loans.

The board also is considering whether the bonds shall be offered to individual investors or underwritten by banking houses in sizable blocks. As the capital stock of each bank is to be only $750,000, repeated turn-overs of the capital and frequent bond issues covering loans will be necessary if all applications are to be taken care of.

A valuable stallion, the property of Powhatan Wooldridge, proprietor of the Powhattan Stock Farm, at Pewee Valley, was accidentally electrocuted Saturday. Marketing Tobacco.

Looking forward to the marketing of this tremendous crop of tobacco, both Burley and Dark, grown in Kentucky this year, it must prove of paramount interest to many thousands of farmers to consider how this the most important Kentucky product should be disposed of.

The two principal channels thru which it must move are the hogshead market and the loose-leaf or basket market, and the object of this article is to compare the two systems, so as to place before the farmer, whose advocate this paper is, the arguments generally used by the exponents of each and to bring out, as far as possible, the facts on both sides of the question in order to assist the farmer, if we can, to reach a conclusion.

The advocates of the hogshead market emphasize the following arguments:

1. Tobacco in hogsheads is the logical and ultimate package best to handle, convenient for the manufacturer, protected best from shipper to user against the elements and against loss in weight.

2. Tobacco in hogsheads may be held indefinitely by the producer, enabling him to select the time at which to offer it for sale, and also enabling him to secure for his holdings storage, cheapest insurance, liberal advances and best preservation.

3. In the judgment of many farmers, the labor of prizing and detail work of securing hogshead material and setting up casks is more than offset by the advantages above set forth.

4. The hogshead markets command the daily attendance of all classes of tobacco buyers. Manufacturers, brokers, dealers, speculators, exporters must all be diligent in following the auction sales, and their aggregate attendance naturally stimulates market activity.

5. Free storage for a period of four months is allowed all purchasers, which prevents inordinate haste in movingt obacco thus purchased.

Advocates of the loose-leaf or basket system argue:

1. From the labor-saving stand point, including the convenience of delivering their product, without excessive labor or expense, by direct delivery by wagon to the sales warehouse.

2. The advantage of assorting and displaying to advantage all grades produced, and thus being able to impress the buyer with the actual worth of his crop.

3. The value of the local interest of the warehouseman, his auctioneer and other employes, growing out of personal acquaintance, through which the seller may expect material assistance.

4. The benefit of general co-operation from local bankers and merchants, who are generally large stockholders in loose-leaf warehouse companies and who naturally encourage their promotion.

A serious objection to the loose-leaf market plan would appear to be that it can only be operated within a period of three or four months following the curing of the crop, which is naturally in the dead of winter. This fact calls for rush and hurry for everybody concerned, and the briefest possible time is allowed the auctioneer. The farmer must have his tobacco at the warehouse door promptly. The warehouse force, assisted by the farmer and his help, must rush to strip the tobacco from the sticks and assort it in the baskets assigned him. This hurry is transferred after the sale to the purchaser, who must promptly remove purchases from the floor and dispose of same by prizing or shipping, or both.

It is estimated that the four principal domestic manufacturers of tobacco have in their employ as buyers, assistants, etc., in Kentucky, approximately fifteen hundred men—assuming an average of $1,000 per man, salary and expenses. This means an outlay for such service from these companies alone of $1,500,000 per annum, which, it has been stated, must come out of the pockets of Kentucky tobacco growers.

Concerning the 1915 crop, it was charged by advocates of the hogshead sales system that the hurried marketing of ninety per cent of same during the winter months cost the Kentucky farmer at least $5,000,000.

The foregoing is submitted by Kentucky Farming for the consideration of its readers, at a time when the question of how to market his tobacco is uppermost in the farmer's mind, that the sweat of his brow he is entitled to all possible profit from this most difficult of all crops.—Kentucky Farming.

Does it Pay, My Boy?

"I am going to leave the old homestead, Mother."

"Forever?"

"Yes, forever."

The little urchin who gave utterance to these words the other day little thought what significance lay behind them. It was only an echo of the silent drama but thereby hangs a tale.

Back on the farm where the air is pure, but where the sun shines hot on a summer's day, the young farmer boy reins in his team and wipes the perspiration from his brow. When I have finished this field it will be the last time I will ever follow a pair of mules around a field," he says. "It will break mother's heart," he reflects, "and its true that father has not paid off the mortgage yet, but they'll manage somehow without me."

The old mother follows him to the gate with tear-stained eyes and the father sees him to the station and bids him God-speed.

Glad to be rid of the work on the farm the boy begins to feel a sense of freedom for the first time. Already the lure of the bright lights have taken possession of him and he longs to show the folks at home the degree of success he means to attain as a man of affairs. It's true there will be a few lonely days and nights when thoughts of the loved ones will creep into his mind, but once in the maddening whirl all is forgotten. An occasional letter and a short visit now and then only serve to open afresh the wound. For back in the old homestead are those who will never forget until nature draws a veil over what was to them the tragedy of life.

At the end of a busy day the tired business man pulls down his desk and reaches for his hat. the same as he has done for many years. But a picture flashes before his eyes and memories crowd into his tired brain that will not out. It is of the old homestead he is thinking, and of mother. He sees her sitting in the old chimney corner, as she sat in years gone by, knitting yarn socks for father and the boy. The old father is telling of his hopes and plans for the future and his eyes sparkle as he contemplates that soon the boy will be old enough to help bear the burden he has borne alone so many years. He recalls the profferred sacrifice when the old father urged him to take an agricultural course and thereby equip himself to some day take active management of the farm and keep it in the family.

Almost the tired business man is persuaded to go back. He is weary of the daily grind of city life and the things that once amused but never satisfied him are a pleasure no more. But he suddenly realizes that once the old homestead is sold they seldom go back—and then it has fallen into the hands of those who appreciated its worth and its possibilities. The soil has been built up to a high state of cultivation; new barns and fences have been constructed and even the old homestead has been enlarged and beautified. It would require a considerable fortune to buy it back now. And then there are the ties that bind him to the city forever. But above all these father and mother are there no more. The time has passed when he can gladden their hearts by surprising them with a receipt for the payment of the mortgage that so long oppressed them.

It takes many dispositions to make a world. The cultivated flower blooms and flourishes in the hot house. But the wild rose thrives best in the open country. There are opportunities in the city but are they less in the country where men with ideas are needed as never before?

Does it pay, my boy, to leave the old homestead when the very earth is crying aloud for someone who will cause it to bring forth all that God intended it should? and then there is something in living nearer to nature's heart, and thereby a step nearer to the Great Creitor.

Tax Reform.

When a piece of machinery stops going the engineer investigates the cause and if he finds some essential part worn out and retarding the rest, there is but one thing to do—to replace the useless part and overcome the obstacle

The forward movement of the State of Kentucky has been retarded and in some directions stopped by a worn-out Tax System which Tax Commissions, Legislatures, Commercial Bodies, News papers and thousands of individuals have investigated and pronounced "inadequate unequal and unjust," and after twenty years of incessant labor a Tax System has at last been devised to give this State a new send-off, but something seems to be interfering with its adoption

The first attempt to remedy the trouble was defeated by technicalities which the Courts declared unconstitutional. The record by the faul of a prominent State official who failed to advertise the amendment according to law, and the third attempt after the most careful preparation and profound publicity now seems to be hanging in the balance

The people by their votes have thrice demanded a change The Legislature has several times listened to their appeal and the remedial piece of mechanism has been prepared but not as yet applied

It has been six years since the Tax Amendment was introduced in the Legislature, six months since a tax commission was appointed, and six weeks since a new Tax Law was drafted and reported to the Governor, and the new measure, in which all the taxpayers of the State are so deeply interested, is now proposed to be linked with other questions of remote affinity, to say the least

Can it be that questions involving these other interests, however disinterested their advocates may be justified in their views, are to control the paramount question of Taxation which affects every citizen of the State and that a measure for the relief of the people from an intoleranc burden shall be sidetracked for the benefit of a comparatively few

The advocates of Tax Reform have no issue with these interests but the people who have spent twenty-two years in the effort to advance the interests of the State by securing tax laws that will invite, instead of repel, the essential elements of capital populations and developments—without which no State can prosper—have reason to resent the coupling of such irrelevant questions with the most important movement the State has essayed in the last quarter of a century

And the taxpayers themselves? Are they disposed to stand by and see the great principle they have worked and voted for and almost accomplished, made the shuttlecock of practice for the benefit of a few and the detriment of the many and utter no protest?

The highest authorities unanimously agree in the assertion that our Tax Laws are not only retarding the growth and prosperity of the State, but actually driving capital and people away and a noted publicist recently stated that "The present Tax Laws in Kentucky are the very worst in the world," and with this condition staring us in the face and the remedy in reach are we going to let it slip from our grasp because of the disparity between partisan and politics in the estimation of those who seem to be willing to sacrifice a great public principle to mere political ends

Taxation is a question so comprehensive in its effects as to cast into the shade all other political problems with which the state has to deal and especially is it the case in Kentucky where the laws are unfair in overtaxing some classes of property while suffering other classes to esape, where the revenue is insufficient for the expenses of government, where the growing deficit is kept down only by increased taxation on property already taxed out of proportion and where the attempted enforcement serves merely to drive more people and property away

At such a critical time, the patriotic citizen should repress all personal aims and ambitions until the Tax question is settled and not permit this important measure to be strangled by extraneous matters, which after all the expressive of the views of the comparative few, while taxation concerns all

The necessary amendment to the Constitution has been adopted by the Legislature and ratified by the voters A nonpartisan Tax Commission has been appointed and a new Revenue and Taxation Law prepared and reported to the Governor and the Resolution provided and in which it was left to the Executive to "decide as to the time it shall be submitted to the General Assembly at a special session to be called for the consideration of this measure only, or at the next regular session"

The present Legislature is peculiarly qualified to enact a rational Tax Law proposed by a Commission of its own creation and if the momentous question is relegated or deferred to the next regular session its submission must be to a body comprised of new elements who may not have the same knowledge and experience as the present members, who have been thoroughly convinced of the propriety of a change, and any interference with the carefully matured plans of the present Legislature and Administration to provide an acknowledged essential measure for the benefit of all the people for which there is an imperative need can only be regarded as unwarranted and unfair in view of the positive declaration of the Resolution

It is only fair that the new taxing system shall have the right of way as the steps taken contemplated and a hundred thousand voters have sanctioned Assuming that the new measure, as framed by the Kentucky Tax Commission, is in accordance with the amended law and that its provisions are just and adequate, there is no good reason why it could only be at the expense of the greater question

If Kentucky is ever to have rational Tax Laws, now is the opportunity and any element attempting to frustrate the will of the people should beware of offending public opinion too far on this long-labored-for principle Parties may come and parties may go, but Taxation goes on forever, and there is no room for politics in the question The Tax-gatherer is no respecter of persons, parties or politics, and the party that will give the State a rational Tax Law will be entitled to the gratitude and confidence of all the people

The State Tax League,

Boys' Corn Club.

At the beginning of the year we had about 15 boys enrolled but our enrollment decreased until five remained. The five remaining raised the following number of bushels per acre:

Names	Bushels.
Myron Garnett	85.
Robt. Clore	76.
Howard McGlasson	71.
Chester Goodridge	63.
Robt. Youell	40.

Myron Garnett was ruled out of the acre contest on account of changing his acre to another field and not keeping a record on it.

Robt Youell was awarded first prize on the best 10 ears and best single ear. This corn was raised on about the poorest ground in Boone county. This ground was treated with 2 tons of ground lime stone and 200 pounds of P2o5. These two elements caused the ears to be of a superior quality.

We want to organize another corn club next year; also increase the membership yield, quality and last but not least, interest in the corn club work.

Robt, McGlasson.

Big Suit Lost.

By reversal of a decision of the U. S. Circuit court at Cincinnati by the Circuit Court of Appeals, Robert O'Neal loses his suit against the Samuel F. Carey and the Gazlay heirs for property valued $300,000 and in the neighborhood of $50,000 in back rents. The property involved is a part of the Mabley & Carew store on 5th street and the Family theatre site on Vine street. Old court records, that were supposed to have been destroyed in the "riot" fire back in the eighties, were found which caused the court to reverse the decision. The will of his grandfather, Elmore Williams, had been set aside and the property had been divided by the court. O'Neal's claim was that the will had never been set aside.—Rising Sun Recorder.

Drs. G. C. Rankins, A. N. Jones and J. F. Daugherty attended the meeting of the Pendleton county Medical Society at Butler last Wednesday, going over in Dr. Daugherty's auto.

The residence of Wallace Garrison caught fire on the roof from sparks last Saturday and for a time it was threatened with destruction but fortunately the flames were subdued before much damage was done. The loss chiefly caused by water will amount to about $100 and is fully covered by insurance.

Mrs. Araminta Conrad died at her home near Richwood last Wednesday, Dec. 13th, in her 78th year from ailments due to her advanced age. She was the mother of Eli Conrad of Walton, and Jerry Conrad of near Florence, and was a most lovable christian woman. The funeral took place Saturday from her late home.

John Sleet, who has been assisting in the Equitable Bank and Trust Co., left last Monday for Birmingham, Alabama, accompanied by his wife, and hey will go from there to St. Petersburg, Florida, where they will spend the winter on account of Mr. Sleet's health, he being badly afflicted with asthma.

Mrs. Olus Hamilton was taken to Bardstown, Nelson co., where she will remain with her aunt and under the care of the family physician, and if an operation is necessary she will be taken to a Louisville hospital. Mrs. Hamilton was in such a weakened condition that she had to be carried on a cot to the train Sunday. Her husband Rev. Bagby, occupied the pulpit of Walton Baptist church, Sunday, Dec. 17th, morning and evening. Rev. Atwood is the State Secretary of the Mission Board of New Mexico, and presented some good thoughts along the line of that work. The pastor Rev. Olus Hamilton was present and assisted in the services.

John E. Williams sold on the Chicago market last week 18 long yearling Hereford and Polled Angus cattle at ten dollars and 25 cents, bringing $1,723.09. This shows what silage and a little corn will do as Mr. Williams only fed these cattle sixty days on his farm near town, and they run on grass before that period. Mr. Williams bought 40 of these yearling Herefords and Polled Angus on the Chicago market at a total cost of $1,609 and the 18 sold brought him $1,723.09. He has 22 left. The cattle were brought to his farm a year ago and he then said he would double his money. He says the Herefords did much better than the Polled Angus, though they did well.

Johnson Rogers of near Florence, was here Wednesday, returning from Carroll county where he had been attending the funeral of his father Thos. N. Rogers, who died at his home near Sanders, Dec. 4th, in his 87th year. The funeral took place from the farm Dec. 6th, the remains being interred in the family cemetery, Rev. Scott of the Baptist church conducting the services, the deceased having been a life long member of that church. His wife died years ago, but he is survived by seven children, viz: J. W. Rogers, of Georgetown; Johnson Rogers, of Boone county; Noah Rogers and Mrs. Lucinda McClure, of Carroll county; Mrs. Elizabeth Utz and Mrs. Rebecca Utz, of Boone county, Mrs. Sallie Loomis of Kansas.

The second sale on the Walton Loose Leaf Tobacco market was held last Saturday when 61,010 pounds of ordinary tobacco were sold at prices ranging from 6 to $23 per cwt., averaging thirteen dollars and 10 cents. The very dry and cold conditions rendered it impossible to have a large sale as the tobacco could not be gotten ready for the market and it was difficult to handle what was offered. There were no rejections. The market was not considered as good as it was the week previous, but the quality of the tobacco was below an average of the presnet crop, and that had considerable to do with the bidding, tho many competent judges expressed the opinoin that the tobacco brought full values. The attendance of the people was very good considering the very cold weather, and the buyers from the manufactories were there in full force. As there is very little tobacco stripped or ready for the market it was considered to not hold another sale until Wednesday, December 27th, as that will give the growers an oppertunity to get their tobacco stropped and in the proper condition for the sale. The next market promises to be better than any so far as the buyers expect to be liberal in their bidding, and want the tobacco and express themselves as delighted with the Walton market and its facilities for handling the purchases.

The general business in Walton has been constantly growing to such a degree that the postoffice has been placed in the third class and is now a Presidential office. This gives Congressman Rouse the privilege of making an appointment of the postmaster at this place and it is understood that he has recommended W. Tilden Dudgeon as the postmaster to succeed the incumbent Rev. A. Kirtley Johnson, and the change will be made before the first of the year. Mr. Johnson was appointed postmaster under the civil service rules governing 4th class offices, and as his church work was so extensive that he could not give it his daily personal attention his son-in-law E. F. Pinner and his daughter Miss Nellie Johnson were appointed his deputies and conducted the office in a highly satisfactory manner, being prompt, careful and very accommodating, and at the last inspection of the office the U. S. Inspector pronounced it first class in every particular. The law requires, the postmaster to give the office his personal attention and this Mr. Johnson could not do and for this reason the change was made. Mr. Dudgeon, the new appointee, is a first class man in every way and will be sure to give good public service and satisfaction in every degree. For some months past he has been in the employ of the John Shillito Dry Goods Co., Cincinnati, and as soon as his commission arrives and the office is checked up he will resign his present position and take charge of the office as postmaster.

Will Send Out Accounts.

A large number of accounts for subscription will be sent out from this office in the next few days, and it is hoped that those receiving them will respond promptly. The cost of all kinds of printing material has gone up so that close collections are necessary in order to stay in the business. The bills that will be sent sent out will amount to a considerable sum in the aggregate and a response to them by return will assist matters materially at this end of the line.

Have Ordered Pike Opened.

The Kenton county Commissioners have ordered the Lexington pike to be opened for travel December 30. The pike has been closed since September 1 for its reconstruction with concrete. That portion between Ft. Mitchell and Thomas Codeys' residence will be open next Saturday. Between Covington and Erlanger the pike is said to be one of the finest roadways in the state.

Tributes of Respect.

Early in November the sad news reached Kentucky of the death of Bro. F. P. Wolcott, of Los Angeles, Cala., formerly of Covington, Ky.

Bro. Wolcott was an ex-Master of the Ky. State Grange, having been elected Master at its reorganization at Burlington several years ago, and as long as his health permitted was its stalwart and efficient leader, giving not only his time and strength, but largely of his means for its advancement. Never being discouraged by difficulty or obstacles his motto was ever "Go Forward," and like Joshua of old stood ready to lead the Patrons of Husbandry of Kentucky thru the deep waters of difficulties. His name was, and will ever be, revered and honored by all Kentucky patrons.

Though he was hundreds of miles away from us Bro. F. P. Wolcott and wife held their membership with Golden Grange No. 316, Union, Ky., therefore, as an order we bow in submission to Him who doeth all things well, commend to his wife, our sister, our deepest sympathy, and to the loving care and keeping of the Master of the great Grange above.

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be spread on our record, our Charter be draped in mourning sixty days, and a copy sent to the Boone County Recorder and one to the National Grange Monthly.

By order of the Pomona Grange
Committee—N. C. Hamer, Anna M. Bristow, Roberta Smith.

One thing can be truthfully said of the teachers in our schools at the present time, and those employed for the ensuing year, that their daily walk and conversation and their moral lives are such as to form a good example for their pupils. Our pupils can safely follow the teacher. "When the roll is called up yonder" the teachers of our schools can all answer present. Good morals and good manners are taught in our schools and the worthy example set by our present corps of teachers has a great influence in moulding the character of the youth in our city. —Owenton Democrat.

Will Attend the Mardi Gras.

Chas. Clore, of Hebron, is organizing a party to visit the Mardi Gras at New Orleans. He is beginning in time that there may be no possibility as to any doubt as to who will compose the party. Walton--Alden.

Mr. Hubert Walton and Miss Pauline Alden, of Petersburg, were married yesterday, Wednesday afternoon. The bride is the accomplished daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Elihu Alden, of Petersburg, and the groom is a son of the late N. S. Walton, and was cashier of the Petersburg bank until a few months ago when he resigned that he might give his farming interests his undivided attention. Mr. and Mrs. Walton will accept the Recorder's congratulations.

Seems Like an Old Friend.

Renewing his subscription to the Recorder, W. G. Estes, of Colton, California, writes under date of December 11: "It always seems like meeting an old friend when I get the RECORDER. We are having some cold weather for this country, having had ice for the last four mornings. Oranges and lemons are damaged but to what extent it cannot be told yet. I wish you a merry Christmas and a happy New Year."

Cashier Resigned.

The large circle of friends of the banking institution were surprised to learn that Mr. Lucian Harris has tendered his resignation as cashier of the Rising Sun Deposit Bank to take effect at the close of his term of contract. Mr. Harris had an offer from Messrs. J. W. Whitlock and Co., to take up the management of that growing industry at a salary that he could not well refuse.—Rising Sun Recorder.

State Game Warden Indicted.

J. Quincy Ward, State Game and Fish Commissioner, who has waged such a vigorous campaign against violators of the Kentucky game laws, was indicted by the grand jury of Mason county on a charge of setting and maintaining a fish net in running water. The indictment further charges Ward with having employed a local fisherman here to catch small fish in the Ohio river at this point, the fish then being taken by Ward to ponds of wealthy Central Kentucky farmers.

Can't Forget His Old Home.

Remitting for his subscription, E. E. Fry, of New Albany, Indiana, writes: "It is impossible to tell how much we enjoy the Recorder when away from dear friends, those we knew in days past and gone; the many pleasant ties of former days can never be forgotten though we are separated by distance I still hold dear the pleasant memories of Boone county and old Kentucky. I extend my best wishes to all my friends and may the Recorder continue to flourish."

Frank McMullen Dead.

Last Friday morning Asa McMullen, who lives about two miles south west of Burlington received a telegram announcing the death of his brother Frank at his home 335 North Soto St., Los Angeles, California. About ten or twelve years ago the young man's health failed him and he went to Denver, Colorado, hoping to restore it, but he was not benefitted by the climate there. He returned to Kentucky and after a short stay he went to Los Angeles, where he was engaged in business which he followed until only a short time before his death. He was a grandson of the late Elijah Ryle and is survived by his mother who was with him in California, and two brothers Asa and Leslie of this neighborhood. The deceased was in his 34th year, was a most estimable gentleman and his death is mourned by a very large circle of Boone county relatives and friends.

Enjoys the 40-Years Ago Items.

I enjoy reading the Forty Years Ago items in the RECORDER. I remember the old friends of bygone days with their laughter, their smiles and their ringing voices. Few remember those times in our little village, born in the forest a century ago, and had grown to be the most picturesque town in Kentucky. Serpent like, it winds its way along the Dixie Highway, with its hovel and palace, its school and bank, its stores and factory. Sister, brother, you may emigrate to the sunny south or the frozen north, but you will come back to that little cottage with its rose bush clamoring over the door, where, as an infant you cooed in the cradle, but now you are tottering with age. Yes, neighbor, you will come back toward the setting sun where, on that beautiful knoll is the city of our dead, lies the Atheist and Christian, where the old elms wave and the sunbeams fall lightly upon the sod, where nature extends with a mother's smile her pity and her love for all.

Circuit Court.

The trial of Omer Adams for assault and battery consumed last Thursday and resulted in Mr. Adams being fined $30. Thomas Horton was the prosecuting witness.

The case of the commonwealth against Thos. Horton was continued, Omer Adams is the prosecuting witness in this indictment.

The trial of the suit of The Home Insurance Co., of New York against the C. N. O. & T. P. Railway Co., occupied the time of the court last Thursday and Friday. The 2nd day of June, 1914, the residence belonging to T. J. Crowe in the town of Walton, this county, was destroyed by fire. The building was insured for $1,000 which Mr. Crowe collected by suit in the Kenton-co, circuit court from the Home Insurance Co. It was claimed that the fire that destroyed the house was caused by sparks from an engine on the Southern Railroad, close to which the house was located, and the insurance company brought suit in the Boone circuit court to recover from the railroad the amount it had paid to Crowe, claiming the fire was the result of negligence on the part of the railroad. The evidence of the plaintiff all being in the defendant moved for a peremptory instruction which the court granted on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to show which of the defendants engines was responsible for the fire, and instructed the jury to find for the defendant. The Insurance Company prayed an appeal to the Court of Appeals which was granted.

The grand jury was in session two days and made the following written report to the court:

To the Honorable Sidney Gaines, Judge of the Boone Circuit Court of the State of Kentucky for the December term in the year 1916, do hereby make the following report:

That the grand jury has been in session two days and have examined five witnesses and have returned one indictment.

Having examined the public buildings we find the jail and court house are in fair condition, and we recommend that the roof of the county infirmary be patched and painted.

We also recommend that the circuit court clerk notify the following merchants to close their stores on Sunday, namely:

Walter Garnett, Hebron, Ky., C. G. Riddell, Rabbit Hash, Ky., Milner's store, Constance, Ky., Fritz Zimmer, Constance, Ky., Alfred Dolwick, Constance, Ky., and that we refer same to next grand jury.

AL ROGERS, Foreman.

The jurors were excused Friday afternoon until Monday morning.

Judge Cammack was present a couple of days last week, presiding as special judge in cases in which Judge Gaines was employed as counsel previous to his election as judge.

Joe Abdon was brought into court Friday and sentenced to ten years' confinement at hard labor in the penitentiary.

Twelve of the petit jurors were finally discharged Monday afternoon and the other twelve on Tuesday.

In the suit of the Burley Tobacco Co., to recover of J. E. Young $360 rent for the use of the Burley Company's warehouse and scales in Walton, Young was allowed a credit of $220 on the amount claimed because of the scales, which weighed too heavy the tobacco received over them.

Court expected to adjourn yesterday some time in the afternoon.

An old time snow fall began Wednesday about 9 a. m.

Lloyd Rex Berkshire has been promoted to be position as official scorer at Sullivan's box ball alley.

Mrs. Minta Conrad.

Died—At her home near Devon, Dec. 20th, of pneumonia, Mrs. Minta Conrad, born May, 5, 1846, being in her 74th year at the time of her death.

The death angel has again visited our midst and taken from us one of our most lovable women, Mrs. Minta Conrad. She is no more; her spirit has taken its flight to Him who gave it. Loving hands could do no more when God in his infinite wisdom saw best to call her home to dwell with Him and the angels above, and she so willingly accepted her call. She has gone from a world of sin and sorrow to a home beyond the sky where she now awaits us.

The deceased was highly esteemed for her many traits of noble womanhood which won for her many dear friends. Her life was full of deeds, deeds that were noble, kind and true, always a pleasant smile and kind word for all.

Mrs. Minta Conrad was married to Mr. Louis Conrad in 1863. To this union were born four children, three of whom survive, Mrs. Claud Robinson of Ludlow; Mr. Eli Conrad, of Walton, and Mr. Jerry Conrad, of Devon, who was living with his mother at the time of her death. Besides her children she leaves to mourn her death, three sisters and two brothers, Mrs. H. Hearne, Mrs. John Dennard, Mrs. Glacken, Mr. Jim Carpenter and Mr. Jerry Carpenter. There are also four grandchildren.

She united with the Ebenezer church in 1857, being a faithful member and follower of Christ for 59 years. The funeral services took place at the Ebenezer church, conducted by Revs. Dapp of Ludlow and Royer, the latter being the pastor of her church, in the presence of a large number of sorrowing friends and relatives.

Messrs. Lon Robinson, Eli Rice, Will Rice and Will Glacken were the pall-bearers. May the bereaved ones trust in God who doeth all things well for your loss is mother's gain.

A FRIEND.

Plenty of Rabbits in Nicholas.

Nicholas county, Kentucky, is certainly sustaining her reputation for being the rabbit county of the State, as the crop this season was never known to be so large. On one small farm, near this city, a party of nimrods of Lexington killed 64 in one day, and in one field within a mile of town three men killed 39 in one afternoon. This is only two instances and many others could be mentioned. Rabbits are in a very healthy condition this season, and the demand for home consumption has been strong. In years past many would pass them up, as at the time the season came on disease destroyed hundreds of them. A rabbit at 10 cents is about the cheapest meat the consumer can procure.

Union Services.

The Baptist, Christian and M. E. churches of Burlington will hold Union services in the Burlington Baptist church on Sunday evening, Dec. 24th. This Xmas Eve service will be conducted by Rev. DeMoisey and he will take "PEACE" as the text for his sermon. There will be special singing and everybody is cordially and urgently invited to attend and also requested to bring anything they can, from a potato to a barrel of flour, for the benefit of the poor. If any one has any old and discarded clothing of any kind they are also asked to bring that. Arrangements have been made to forward whatever is collected to the Associated Charities of Covington or Cincinnati.

Mr. John O. Campbell, of Big Bone, has for some time been engaged in exhuming large bones that have for centuries been concreated in the valley about Big Bone Springs. His labors have been rewarded by a large harvest of fossil remains. Those who have seen all the bones taken from this valley say Mr. Campbell's collection is the largest, and the specimens the best, that have been dug since the days of Capt. Ben Funnell and Major Bullock. Funnell, it will be remembered, unearthed the skeleton of the mastodon, which is now on exhibition in Europe. In Mr. Campbell's collection are immense teeth, tusks, jaws with teeth in them, ribs, spinal columns, in fact there are bones from nearly every part of the mastodon, besides many that are unlike any ever before found at that place. Among the latter is a flat tusk, sword shaped, and a jaw bone with three teeth in it, and a tusk that grew out of the chin or center of the lower jaw. There can now be seen at the Kirkpatrick House, a fragment of an immense thigh bone, the socket in which is nine inches in diameter and about four and one half inches deep.

Wilson Thanks James.

Washington, December 17.—Senator James, who took an active part in the recent campaign and who had much to do with bringing about the unprecedented victory for the Democratic party, has received the following letter from the President:

"The White House, Washington, December 12, 1916. My Dear Senator: I am sure you know what I think of your work in the campaign without my telling you, but I want to give myself the pleasure of telling you.

"It was generous of you to busy yourself to help in so many parts of the country, and I have reason to know that the help was very effective indeed. Your own ardor and your own unqualified devotion to the things that we have been fighting for proved contagious as soon displayed them and I think the whole party is your debtor.

"Cordially and faithfully yours,
"WOODROW WILSON."

Hon. Ollie M. James, United States Senate."

Colonel William Jennings Bryan has been "a dead one" so many times that he doesn't mind it any more. A big dinner was given in his honor in Washington, and there has been a scrambling among Democratic leaders to stop with the Peerless One. The Democratic Leaders guessed some Democrats less they might run with the reorganizing of Congress. Washington is again crowded places of political and diplomatic fashion, Colonel Bryan is admired, was one of the biggest factors in the campaign. His work as head of President Wilson undoubtedly had a very far reaching effect.—Ex.

Miss Mary Green is entitled to the blue ribbon on the biggest turkey sold in this community. She sold one on Monday to Ed. Allen that weighed forty-two pounds at 22½ cents, bringing $9.45. Who can beat that?—Smith Grove Times.

Dan Peed, of Paris, recently bought a crop lot of 7,000 pounds of tobacco from Mr. Lafe Endicott, of this county at 25 cents a pound. He also bought a crop from Mr. William Layson, of Millersburg, at 25 cents.—Cynthiana Democrat.

At a neighborhood hogkilling on the Clarence W. Whalen farm, in this county, Wednesday of last week, David J. Casey, in cutting open the heart of a large hog he was dressing found a large hard, clot of blood. Pressing it with his thumb he found it contained a large cocklebur.—Cynthiana Democrat.

John Williams, who is paying $5 per bushel for hemp seed, says there are 60,000 bushels yet unsold in Jessamine county by the cultivators. This is above the normal crop. As hemp is as high as tobacco per pound and may go higher, an increased acreage is predicted if patent hemp breaks prove workable.—Nicholasville News.

Some fancy Christmas beef cattle, which J. R. Knox, of Boyle county, had extra fat and fine, brought the highest price heard of for beef cattle in this part of the state, and probably the whole state this season. Acting for Simon Weil & Son, of Lexington, who buy for the Consolidated Dressed Beef Company, of Philadelphia, J. B. Baughman, south of Danville, paid Mr. Knox $10 a hundred pounds for them, which is from a cent to a cent and a quarter above the local market. These beeves were extra fine in every way however, and were for the choicest eastern Xmas trade. They averaged 1,500 pounds when put on the scales for delivery.—Stanford Interior Journal.

The Tribune-Democrat favors submitting the questions of State wide prohibition and woman suffrage to the voters of the State at the earliest possible date that it can legally be done, for the good reason that in a government like ours, where the people are the sovereigns, they are entitled to anything a majority desires, whether it be best or not. Submit these great questions to the people to be acted upon, with out interference by any political party, and it will sweep the state like a prairie fire. But as long as politicians politicians and persons who live by political agitation are permitted to play with this matter, these important questions to the people will never be settled. One of the many good results from an election and settlement of these great questions would be the elimination from public life of the little fellow who is always skipping around with a blind bridle behind him, endeavoring to slip up on some hobby that he can ride into office.—Benton Tribune.

There are politicians and politicians in Kentucky, but when it comes to the master of them all it is hats off to Gen. Percy Haby. Single handed he can give Governor Stanley, Gen. Haldeman, Campbell Carnill, Eli Brown and the whole bunch cards and spades and beat them out in the game. His recent achievements, under the most adverse circumstances, add largely to his previous reputation as a master mind in the game of politics. Let all he balked the game of the liquor interests, backed by the Governor and his cohorts, to put none but liquor men in as election commissioners, and, instead of allowing them to carry out their program, he deliberately turned the cards on themselves before they saw the play and succeeded in having none but "dry" men appointed election commissioners.

Again he scored last week. Equal in importance to the election commissioners, are the Democratic county committees as strategical vantages in the political game. Haly worked while the gang at Frankfort seemed to be asleep. He went up against the State administration, and all of its patronage; the Federal administration, with its officers; the distilleries and the brewers, with all of their money, and whipped out the whole bunch, capturing the organization in more than two-thirds of the counties. Haly is a wonder and in addition, he is so absolutely honest that his worst political enemies have never been able to attack his character. Hats off to Haly.—Elizabethtown News.

Premier honors for butter were won at the last National Dairy Show, Springfield, Mass., by the creamery at Grove City, Pa., operated under the supervision and direction of the Dairy Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

Twenty-seven states and the Dominion of Canada were represented in the 151 samples entered. All the entries were of high quality, but in the opinion of the judge the 10-pound tub from Grove City was the best, with a score of 96. The award is the more interesting because the creamery had been in operation only a little more than a year. Only fresh, sweet cream and whole milk of good flavor are accepted by the creamery and are carefully supplied under sanitary conditions. All cream is pasteurized and then ripened with lactic-acid cultures. The high quality of the product may rightly be attributed to a good raw product and proper methods of manufacture.

ADAPTED TO HOG PASTURAGE

Alfalfa, Clover, Rape, Soy Beans and Blue Grass Are Recommended by Ohio Station.

That green forage crops lower the cost of pork production materially is demonstrated by experiments at the Ohio experiment station. Alfalfa, clover, rape, soybeans and bluegrass are adapted to hog pasturage.

In one experiment lasting 11 weeks in midsummer, clover pasture replaced 71 pounds of corn in every 100 pounds gain made by the hogs. Rape replaced 64 pounds and soy beans 54 pounds. All these hogs received corn in addition to pasture. They made cheaper gains than those fed only grain in dry lot.

Rape makes an abundant, palatable growth and has a long grazing season. An acre will usually supply green feed for three months for 30 hogs weighing about 100 pounds.

Soy beans may be grazed from July 1 for a period of about ten weeks. Since blue grass is susceptible to drought, it has its greatest value for early spring use.

FASTENER FOR MANGER DOOR

Convenient Arrangement Is Shown in Illustration Herewith—Not Hard to Adjust.

A convenient fastening for the feeding door, which lets down in front of the horse manger, is shown in the cut, says a writer in Southern Agriculturist. As the door is pushed against the beveled end of the latch it raises in the slot cut for it the cross piece which fastens to the wall above. As it lifts the door drops into its place in the wall and the latch falls in front of it. The door can be pushed shut with the fork or whatever happens to be in the hands, and takes but a single motion. A dropped door like this should be at the front of every horse's manger, as nothing helps more to keep the stable warm.

Fastening For Door.

AGE FOR BREEDING HEIFERS

Majority of Beef Men Use Animals About Two Years Old—Some Breed at Twenty Months.

The majority of beef men breed their heifers at around twenty-four months of age. A few breed as early as from twelve to eighteen months, and quite a number breed between eighteen and twenty-four months.

There are a number of arguments in favor of the different practices. If the heifers are well grown, it probably will be well to breed them at eighteen or twenty months of age.

FEEDING PUMPKINS TO HOGS

Vegetable Should Form but Small Part of Ration to Get Best Results—Cut In Pieces.

Pumpkins should form but a small part of the hogs' ration to get best results. The method of feeding pumpkins is very simple. Many feeders throw them on the ground in order to break them open. This may be all that is necessary in the case of small specimens, but big pumpkins should be cut into small pieces.

USES FOR SKIM MILK

One of Best Feeds for Both Young and Old Chickens.

Also Considered Excellent for Pigs of All Ages—Valuable in Itself and Assist in Digesting the Other Foods.

Milk is one of the best foods for both young and old chickens. The casein, or curdy part of the milk, largely supplies the protein necessary for laying hens, while for table fowl there is nothing superior to milk for making white, juicy, delicious flesh.

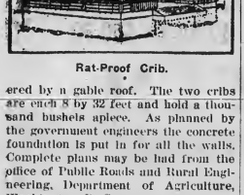
The milk may be either sour or sweet, and may be given as a drink or mixed with the meal, or both. Sour skim milk or buttermilk fed to chickens confined to limited range keeps them in health. The acid of the milk supplies the lack of vegetable acid they would obtain if running at large, and moreover it aids digestion.

Poultry farmers living near a creamery gladly pay for the skim and sour milk, which can be had at very reasonable rates.

Farm Dairying says: "Skim milk is considered one of the best of foods for pigs of all ages. It is not only valuable in itself, but it helps to digest other foods and so makes them more valuable. Milk makes a firm, excellent quality of pork.

"About a gallon and a half a day for a 100-pound pig will bring economical results, or feeding at the ratio of three pounds of milk to one of meal."

Mixed milk and wheat bran make the best ration for pigs and shoats in connection with clover and grass pasture.



All animals like a variety of food. No one food, however good it may be, will answer. Give a variety and only what will be eaten with a relish. Keep the feed troughs and feeding yards clean and dry.

No rancid food should be fed. Hotel refuse is not a healthy food.

RAT-PROOF CORN CRIB PLAN

Structure Will Aid Both in Drying of Crop and Protecting It From Rats and Mice.

The rural engineer bureau of the department of agriculture will be glad to tell you all about this crib that will aid both in the drying of corn and in protecting it from rats and mice. It is really a sort of double crib, separated by a driveway 12 feet wide and covered by a gable roof. The two cribs are each 8 by 32 feet and hold a thousand bushels apiece. As planned by the government engineers the concrete foundation is put in for all the walls. Complete plans may be had from the office of Public Roads and Rural Engineering, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

GOOD WAY TO MEASURE HAY

Four Hundred Cubic Feet Has Been Found to Be Fair Estimate for Ton—Weight Will Vary.

Sometimes hay is sold in the mow or the stack. When this is done it is necessary to estimate it.

It has been found that 400 cubic feet of hay will be a fair estimate for a ton. The actual weight of 400 cubic feet of hay, of course, will vary, as will the kind of hay, time of cutting, position of the mow, etc. But it will be a fair estimate to both buyer and seller to consider 400 cubic feet a ton.

When you are making an estimate multiply together the length, breadth and height of the mow or stack in feet and divide the product by 400. The quotient will be the number of tons.

FARM OF RIGHT PROPORTIONS

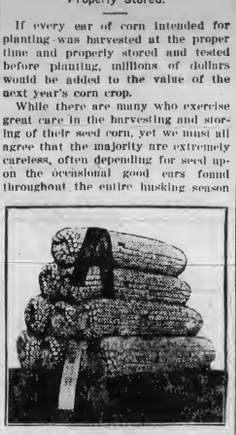
Records Show That Farmer Either Has Too Many Acres or Not Enough for Successful Work.

The size of business often has much to do toward making the farm profitable. Farm management records show that farms are often either too small or too large for the most successful farming.

There may be too few as well as too many acres. A man may not have enough land or he may be "land poor," thereby rendering all his acres unprofitable.

LATE FALL PLOWING EASIER

Cool and Stimulating Weather Makes Work Less Difficult for Horses—Keeps Them Strong.



Late fall plowing is much easier on the team than early spring plowing, as the weather is cooler and stimulating, and they can stand the work much better than they can next May. Besides, the work will keep their muscles and vital organs stronger and more vigorous, so that they will not become fatigued at the advent of warmer weather.

PROPER SELECTION OF SEED

Millions of Dollars Would Be Added to Value of Crop if Corn Was Properly Stored.

If every ear of corn intended for planting was harvested at the proper time and properly stored and tested before planting, millions of dollars would be added to the value of the next year's corn crop.

While there are many who exercise great care in the harvesting and storing of their seed corn, yet we must all agree that the majority are extremely careless, often depending for seed upon the occasional good ears found throughout the entire husking season and in thousands of cases the seed is simply selected in the spring from the crib.

If the harvesting of seed corn, like the feeding of the stock, came every day, it would be attended to on time, but it is nothing more or less than human that the work which comes only occasionally or once a year, as in the case of harvesting of seed corn, should be put off or neglected altogether, unless there is a definite time and plan for the work.

PREPARE SOIL FOR LEGUMES

Trouble Experienced in Getting Stand of Alfalfa, Clover, Peas, Etc., on New Land.

Legume crops (clover, alfalfa, peas, etc.) are among the most valuable of farm crops. Trouble is experienced at times, however, in growing them in new agricultural districts or regions where legumes have not been grown before. This difficulty oftimes is due to the absence of the necessary tubercle bacteria from the soil in question. The practice should be followed, therefore, of inoculating the soil or seed when any of these crops are grown upon ground which has never grown the crop before.

This inoculation may be made by the use of soil from a field in which the legume has grown. This soil should be obtained from the old legume field and distributed over the field to be sown in legumes at the rate of approximately 300 pounds per acre, and at once harrowed or disked in. This operation should take place during the morning or evening, or upon a cloudy day.

MOST PROFITABLE FARM JOB

Many Farmers Cultivate Alfalfa After Every Cutting—Profit Returned in Following Crops.

One of the most profitable jobs on the farm—is cultivating the alfalfa fields. A good many farmers cultivate after every cutting, and find that it pays big dividends in the following crops. Cultivation roots out the weeds and grass, loosens up the ground, and the alfalfa responds by making an increased growth.

The best implement for cultivating alfalfa is the spring-tooth harrow. It tears out the weeds and loosens the soil without injuring the alfalfa crowns. The disk harrow is a fairly good tool for alfalfa cultivation, but there will be more or less injury to the crowns when using it.

Whatever tool you use, cultivate the alfalfa. It is a crop that will pay liberally for all the labor spent upon it. —Prairie Farmer.

TREATMENT OF COLLAR GALL

Tannic Acid Is One of Best Remedies —Easily Applied by Rubbing Lightly Over Collar.

Tannic acid is one of the very best remedies for collar galls, according to L. S. Backus of the Missouri college of agriculture. It can be secured from any drug store and is easily applied by rubbing lightly over the collar every morning and evening if the horse is working.

Collar galls usually appear either at the top of the neck or at the point of the shoulder where an improperly-fitted collar rubs. It is important that the collar be kept clean at all times in order that it may be kept from cutting into the neck, but special care in keeping it clean is necessary after these galls start. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

FINDING OUT FOR YOURSELF

A record was made in Hardin county last week, when at Lambert Riney's public sale, a sow and eight pigs, two months old, brought $66.

On a bid of $174,706 the Montgomery Perkins Co., of Hopkinsville, was awarded the contract for constructing avbout 21 miles of road in Daviess county.

It is real interesting to see the crowd climbing in the Statewide band wagon; and, by the way, the boy ought to do a big business in breath-killers.—Cynthiana Log Cabin.

William Havens has two cows that give ten gallons of milk per day. Any person doubting this statement can be convinced by calling at Squire's residence at milking time.—Hazel Green Herald.

A fine vein of barytes has been found on the farm of W. T. Robinson in the Faulconer neighborhood, and mining will begin at once. The mineral rights have been leased to the Thompson-Weiman So., of Nicholasville.—Danville Advocate.

The nine barrels of wine ordered to be destroyed will, we are told, be hauled to a sewer and poured out by Sheriff S. O. Keown. This is the wine that was seized from Bruno Frey. He was fined $100 and twenty days in jail in each of two cases and fought both to the Court of Appeals, and having lost there the wine is ordered destroyed and he having paid the fine and cost went to jail last Saturday to lay out the jail sentence.—Hartford Herald.

The town is full of tobacco and the warehouses are doing all in their power to take care of the wagons and teams. Every barn in town has been rented, and the management of the local houses are to be congratulated on the excellent manner in which they are taking care of the enormous amount of tobacco that has poured into Horse Cave in the past week. The prices are steady and the farmers are aware that they can get as much or more for their crops here as any place in the State.—Hart County Herald.

Elmer Hopkins, aged 19 years, son of Jack Hopkins, who resides on the Maysville and Lexington turnpike, lost his thumb and two fingers on his left hand as the result of the explosion of a dynamite cap he held in his hand. He was at the rock qarry of Chandler & Son, near the intersection of the Headquarters and Maysville and Lexington turnpikes on last Wednesday, and noticing a dynamite cap on the ground picked it up and began fooling with it. In his desire to see the contents of the little brass shell he began to remove the high explosive with a nail and presently the explosion took place with the above result.—Carlisle Mercury.

While dressing a chicken, the other day, Mrs. John A. Stewart, wife of Sheriff Stewart, found a bright dime in the fowl's crop. The money was minted in 1901, but of course had not been in the chicken that long unless it started in a Chicago egg and came on down through several generations. The fowl was bought from Forrest Smith, the merchant at Colville. With the reputation of returning money with each purchase, Mr. Smith may expect a rapid increase in business. Who knows how much money the next fowl may contain? If an ordinary chicken holds a dime, an old hen may have a quarter, and a turkey at Thanksgiving prices ought to have at least a five dollar gold piece in his gizzard. Any old rooster looks like 50 cents.—Cynthiana Democrat.

Judge H. C. Eversold is responsible for the following interesting bit of history:

On the farm of Isaac Chestnut, in Clay county, there is an old log house, built in 1808, and now 108 years old, that is probably the most interesting old building in the State. The rafters are six to eight-inch boards, one inch thick and were nailed on when the building was first built. These boards are of a reddish color, indicating that they were put on while wet. On the bottom of the boards are the plain prints of a child's and a dog's feet. The presumption is that the child and dog walked across the boards while they were wet and soft. There are a number of these foot-prints, which are plain and unmistakable, although made more than a century ago. Judge Eversole wants to know if this story can be beat.

This little story comes from the Big South Fork: John Wright, who lives on the farm of W. J. Shreves, got everything ready one day last week to kill his two hogs, which were estimated to weigh 300 pounds or more each. These hogs had been sleeping in a bed out in the pasture by the side of a big hollow log. He went to their sleeping place but no hogs. A hunt was instituted which lasted for two days. Having despaired of finding them he offered a reward of $5 for the return of the hogs or evidence that would lead to their recovery, whereupon Joe Simmons walked out into the old woods where they had been sleeping and peeped in at one end of the log and saw one. He swam, like-ise to the other end, and saw the other one. They had met in the middle of the log and couldn't back out. A generous use of axes and cross-cut saws soon relieved the unfortunate pigs from their imprisonment.—Lebanon Enterprise.

COVERING FOR GRAPEVINES.

In Colder Sections of Country Artificial Protection Should Be Given in Winter.

In the colder sections of the county, wherever varieties are hardy enough to withstand severe winters are grown, grapevines should be artistically protected. Under such circumstances the vines should be pruned as soon as they become dormant. The system of pruning should be such as to easily admit of laying down the stalk and canes for next season's fruit production. The next step is to cover these parts with litter, leaves, or earth in such a way as to protect them from severe or repeated freezing and thawing and to leave them covered until just before the season for growth the following spring.

There are several species of grapes, each adapted to particular sections of the country, and each responds best to a particular method of culture, pruning and training.

The vine normally produces its fruit on shoots of the current season's growth, which in turn grow from buds developed the previous season. All pruning must, therefore, be based on this characteristic of the plant. After determining the system of pruning best suited to the conditions, species, and variety the vine should be so handled during its early life as to develop a general framework of the type desired.

WHITE HOUSE GOSSIP.

George Washington, the first President, was sworn in in Wall Street on the steps of the Subtreasury building.

John Adams, the second President, drew more persons weeping at his inaugural than he had ever seen at any funeral and said of it,

"Whether it was because of the loss of a beloved President or the accession of an unpopular one, I can not say."

A prize of $600 was offered in Washington's administration for the best design for a house to serve as a home for the President in Washington. Jas. Hoban, an Irishman, from South Carolina was the successful competitor. His sketch contained so many wings and colonnades that the public was horrified and frills and ginger bread decorations were eliminated. The result was the two story White House as we know it now. Washington laid the cornerstone of the building in 1792. It was completed in 1799, the year of Washington's death.

John Adams was the first President to occupy the White House, and it was said of Abigail Adams, his wife that she hung up the family wash in the East Room.

Theoretically, the President of the United States can not be arrested or restrained by any public official but Ulysses S. Grant, while President, was held up and arrested by a negro policeman for fast driving. He put up a bond of $20 and forfeited it the next day in police court.

The President may go beyond the borders of the country if he chooses, but seldom, if ever, does so. A good deal of talk was caused in Grover Cleveland's administrations by the report that he had gone beyond the three-mile limit on the Atlantic while fishing.

The President appoints his cabinet advisers, and he alone is responsible for any action taken by them. Lincoln's cabinet is said to have voted against a measure which he favored. Lincoln declared the vote to be seven "noes" and one "aye" "Therefore" said he, the eyes have it."

At James Madison's inauguration four hundred persons "crowded into Washington." At a recent inauguration it required two hours for the parade to pass a given point — a driving rain while 200,000 umbrellas lined Pennsylvania Avenue.

Tobacco in Kentucky.

Dark tobacco has sold in Henderson at $20 per hundred, the highest price since the Civil War. Burley is relatively high. Many Kentucky farmers who planted tobacco this year will realize net profits equal to the value of the land on which the tobacco grew. The situation will encourage the planting of a large acreage next year. A low market next winter would mean disappointment and meager profits to many planters.

Tobacco is no soil builder. It rifles the soil of its richness, after, in many cases, causing the sacrifice of timber. How many noble "wood pastures" in Kentucky have made way for tobacco?

The profits of tobacco are immediate and obvious. The weed is the great "money crop" of the sections which produce it. While it often is a money maker for the farmer, it always is a heavy drain upon the farm. The problem for the farmer is how often tobacco should be planted, and how much of the land should be devoted to it, to the end that the farm will not be sacrificed to the money crop." That problem should be of special interest in 1916 when the market is suggestive, and the temptation is to "plunge in" tobacco planting. It should be borne in mind that a "money crop" may become after the expense of production it is deducted, and the land is capital. If expenses income means shrinkage in capital the business is running in a dangerous course.

Tobacco is a crop to be grown with caution. Limited production necessary to the individual farmer as a means of adding capital than to the ultimate means of maintaining it.—Journal.

"DO UNTO OTHERS."

Friend, have you ever asked yourself the question? "Is my neighborhood any the better for my presence in it?" Has your community life been such that were you to remove to some other locality you would be really missed, and missed with regret?

We believe that many of us who consider ourselves good citizens and good neighbors, if we were to seriously consider this question, would be somewhat puzzled to find the correct answer.

We all know people of our community of whom it were idle to ask this question. We know beyond that they are a real asset to any community that is so fortunate as to claim them. Let us, then, in the light of their lives, truthfully and impartially judge our own lives, and let us profit by that judgment.

All of us know that good angel of the neighborhood. Frequently she is a frail little mite of woman kood, quiet, and unassuming, with the most humble appreciation of her own virtues. Yet whenever sickness or sorrow develop in the countryside we instinctively look to find her in attendance, ready to efface herself in her ministrations to others; giving out the faith of her own large heart to sustain the failing courage of those in need.

And who does not know the handy man of the community? He is always busy, yet never so busy that he can not grant a favor to a neighbor. He is the man who, when he starts to town, is hailed by every housewife and loaded down with commissions and orders to be filled, until frequently when returning home his neighbors get most of his load. You call on him if a subscription is to be circulated, and he is always ready to not only chip in, but he cheerfully takes the paper from house to house and from man to man until the object is attained. In fact, when we contemplate the number of "handy" jobs he gets through with in the run of a year we often wonder how on earth he has found time for his own affairs. But he has, and he has attended to them well.

The truth is that we all waste many valuable hours and days that might better be given to these kindly ministrations to others comfort and pleasure. We ponder our own cares and perplexities, burdens and sorrows until they loom as mountains in our pathway obscuring our neighbors and their affairs, until we frequently forget that they, too, have cares and sorrows, many times more grievous than our own.

It would be of real benefit to us if we could at times forget self, and enter into the joys and sorrows of others.

Try it, friend, and you will be surprised to realize how soon the care and sorrow have flown from your own life and naught but joy and peace in their stead.

The Yuletide.

The Yuletide season is with us again

It is with us, but not of us, for much of the earth knows little of joy today

Upon many millions of people the sun shines as brightly as in the days of old, but its lustre is dimmed by the shedded blood of suffering humanity

The benign smile of the Divine One is as tender and as loving as when the world was young, but the twentieth century finds too many of the human race bent upon pleasure and profit, and revenge, and forgetful of the beauties of life as seen through eyes that are better and holier than ours

It is with this knowledge that the people of our community approach the Yuletide time, when all should be sunshine and gladness, and joy

But if we may not sway the rest of the world, if our voice be not heard beyond the confines of our own fireside, we yet may look upward with a feeling of gladness and thankfulness that the horrors that are engulfing the rest of the world have at least passed us by

We may be thankful that we have even an hour of peace and prosperity for our country though no one knows when the withering hand of the blight of the century may be spread over our own fair land

Let us be joyful today, but let us mingle that joy with compassion for the stricken ones of other lands, to whom the Yuletide season is but a mockery and an agonizing delusion

Canada's Sad Accounting.

In one of his earlier poems thru which ran the martial note, Kipling recounted the cost of England of her Admiralty power Both treasure and lives had been poured out in profusion for this distinction Now comes Canada, his Lady of the Snows, with her sad accounting of a credit of blood for a debit of loyalty to the empire Since the great war began she has enlisted 377,205 men, and of this number 65,680 are dead, 47,187 are wounded and wounded and 2,707 are missing Statisticians have discovered that the average of casualties to Canadian troops is equal only to the new enlistments for overseas service In the six months, from June to November, this list of losses was 15,765, upward of 2,000 a month The condition is a serious one, because it foreshadows the realization of the fear of the people to the north—that, driven by necessity, their Government will in time conscription This will incur an exodus from the already scanty stricken Dominion to the U S whether it may be said many thousands have already come because of the dread of being drafted into the war levies.—Ex.

SOME THORNY PATHS TO MEET

Ere We Travel Life's Uneven Journey—Cheerfulness a Valuable Asset.

Along the uneven pathways of a business career, there are many things of a perplexing nature that come up to try the patience of the toiling man of business. Just how to meet the situation sometimes puzzles the brains of the most adept, but somehow he removes the obstacles from his course and travels on to success. But all this takes nerve and will power for those who are so easily exasperated find difficulty in achieving success.

The constantly employed are those who have less difficulty in overcoming the perplexing problems that confront one through life's journey. Their tempers are more evenly balanced than the speculators, some of whom have been known to grow madly ill-tempered at the decline or a market in which they were interested.

The average business man who reaches a success in life is the one who accepts things philosophically, not giving way under reverses, but one who fights the harder to succeed when there is a decline in his dealings or other misfortunes beset him. Failure with some people, however small, means a complete and utter giving up, while with others it is an incentive to extra exertions until all difficulties are overcome and soon forgotten. Fortunate is the man who can act thusly, for in that kind of a determination he possesses a great advantage over his brother who yields so readily to disappointment.

A cheerful disposition is one of the valued assets of a thorough, progressive business man, with him the silvery lining of the threatening cloud is always visible and it is good to be found in his presence, for he invariably reflects up on you an inspiration to do greater and nobler things.

Cultivate the habit of cheerfulness and self-reliance and you will be able to travel the thorny paths of life as if they were strewn with roses instead of piercing disappointments.

COUNTY AGENT WORK

Improvements in Farming Methods Due to Demonstration Work of States Relations Service.

Through development of improved organization the growth of a more definite project system the Office of Extension Work in the North and West carried its demonstration activities into closer relation to the practical needs of the farmers of the region during the past year, according to the annual report of the States Relations Service of the department. Local associations of farmers took a greater part in the work and more attention was devoted to studies of local economic facts upon which to develop demonstrations of permanent value. Extension work in the special interests of farm women was undertaken in the territory under the office, and a number of women agents were placed in the field.

Among the specific results from the county-agent work of the Office Extension Work in the North and West during the year were:

Yields of corn in fields managed as demonstrations under supervision of the county agents increased on an average 12.8 bushels per acre over the average yield in the region

Yields of wheat in fields managed as demonstrations increased 8.1 bushels per acre.

Yields of oats in fields managed as demonstrations increased 11.7 bushels per acre.

Alfalfa was introduced on 11,311 farms.

Several score registered stallions and rams and several hundred registered bulls and boars were placed on farms.

Nearly a thousand fine bulls no longer useful in their communities because of danger of inbreeding were saved from the block and transferred to other communities.

One hundred and forty-three cow-testing association, 20 live-stock breeding associations, and 142 hog cholera control associations were organized.

More than 200,000 hogs were vaccinated against cholera.

Better farm management was promoted through assistance given to farmers in determining the factors that make for success or failure in farm enterprises.

Farmers' exchanges and cooperative marketing associations were organized and effected large savings to members.

Three hundred and twenty-one water supply systems were introduced into farm homes.

Club work was carried on with more than 200,000 boys and girls. Over 21,000 of these engaged in profit-making projects, producing over $500,000 worth of food products.

The club work was placed on a more permanent basis as an extension agency, and boys and girls are now enrolling to pursue the work for a series of years.

If you absolutely insist that a woman pause for reflection, place her in front of a mirror.

Take a penny or a dime and place it in the hollow of your hand. Now, with the other disengaged hand take a clothes or hat brush and try to dislodge or move the coin from the hand by the action of brushing it. Try, and try again. Remember, you must only brush the coin in trying to remove it.

Many a boy has had an immense lot of fun from the use of what he terms a "sucker," I generally made from a piece of leather, to which through a hole in the center he attaches a string, and with this bit of leather, when wet, he is enabled to lift stones and other heavy materials, but here is a sucker he never dreamed of. Take an ordinary radish —if you can get a large one so much the better—cut it away at the bottom, leaving a flat surface. Apply this to a dinner place, and you will find they will become attached friends.

A coin is placed on the table and a request is made for the coin to be handed to you in a person's hand, but they are not to remove the coin from the table by using hands, feet or picking it up with the mouth. Now, this seems a puzzle, but it is as simple as A. B. C. All the person has to do is to place his mouth within a short distance of the coin, and giving a strong blow with his breath, directing it at the coin at about an angle of forty-five degrees, causing the air to pass under the coin and propel it into the air, where it is caught in the hand which is ready to receive it.

For the Christmas party begin with a guessing contest. Provide a tumbler exactly level brimful of water and a box of inch and a half wire nails. Each person estimates the number of nails that it will require, when dropped into the tumbler, to cause the water to overflow. The result will be surprising. That much may be said. A small prize may be given for the best guess or a first choice of a cut of the turkey at dinner. And the beauty of it is the thing is so deceiving that the youngest reasoning member of the family may make as good a guess as any of the older members.

How Ancients Bathed.

Ancient Rome is said to have consumed no less than 340,000,000 gallons of water a day; and one of the most noticeable features of the modern town is the prodigal effervescence of its water, gushing from fountains of every conceivable size and design. The Trevi is the most magnificent in the city, its waters—aqua vergine, virgin water, because of its purity—the finest. The old Roman baths required a lot of water. The splendid Thermae built by the degenerate Emperor Caracalla had accommodations for 1,600 bathers Besides the baths proper, the establishment included within its area, of about a quarter of a mile square, a gymnasium, athletic field library, and even a race track. Its ruins tower above the plains today like some mountain blasted by nature.—National Geographic Magazine.

The first street railway in the United States was built in New York City in Fourth avenue, between Prince street and Harlem, in 1832, the principal American cities between then and 1881, when the use of electricity was begun.

Broke the Record.

At the sale of Jas. W. Cleek & Son, near Richwood, this county, on the 13th inst., two cows and calves sold for $278, which breaks, by considerable, the record of sales of cows in Boone county. The two cows were sired by Messrs. Cleeks' herd bull, a son of Hood Farm, Torrono, No. 60336. This is an example of what a pure bred sire will do for the dairy business, and the above named gentlemen are entitled to much credit for what they have done to improve the dairy cattle of Boone county.

The people who are looking for trouble get to be very far-sighted.

Kentucky Schools

The Government report, from Washington, shows that the school attendance of Kentucky is low. In fact everything denotes that the school spirit in the state is low in common schools, high schools and colleges.

This is the fault of all parents, guardians, teachers and students. There is too much spirit of go, style and poverty stricken pride. High collars, long cuffs and big feelers. Many a boy is driving a rubber tire buggy or an auto who had better be wearing a check shirt, plain clothes and going to school. Clothes, style and ripping around does not make the man, but the amount of cultivated, trained intellect, industry and principle.

Go to work, attend school pay your debts and build your home and your bank account and you will be happier and will not have so much time to run around, talk about your neighbors, and the Government report on Kentucky school attendance will not be such a dark blotch upon the reputation of Kentucky.

An Organized Scheme.

It is now plain to be seen that there is an organized scheme to force out of business the country newspapers. The paper trust has taken into this game the daily newspapers and ready print house. We never imagined for a minute that the daily papers which are the greatest institutions of the republic would stoop to this, but it is clear to us that they have entered into this conspiracy. The daily newspapers are the most powerful institutions of all. They are powerful enough to shape the destiny of this government for good or bad. They can call a strike in a day's time that would ruin the nation, or they can prevent a strike; they can cause a panic or stop one, just as they please; they are the speaking tubes of the people and can be used for good or bad. They are paying from $1.90 to $2.06 per hundred for news print paper while the country publisher is paying $7.00 per hundred for the same paper. If they are in this robbery, they should be made to pay it. What we would like to know is how long is the country publisher going to stand for it.—Falmouth Outlook.

ART OF GIVING.

Ordinary business sense would seem to compel the verdict that about the best activity in the world is the getting of things. Business consists chiefly in the art of getting and holding. And yet the greatest authority on human life puts the value of giving above that of getting. Jesus said: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Every wise business man organizes the receiving department of his business. But the giving department of the average American is wholly unorganized. Comparatively few men know or plan at the beginning of a year how much they will give during this year. With such men giving waits upon solicitation. The man on the street who begs the price of a meal, the man in the pulpit who pleads the need of the heathen, the begging letters coming through the mails, all fumble at the purse strings of the unorganized man until he often gives from pure irritation. Yet the man who thus spasmodically dispenses his charities is rarely either a great success as a giver or much of a beneficiary of his own giving, says Minneapolis Journal. The distribution of his gifts usually is disproportionate to the worth of the cause, nor does he often give in the total as much as the man who wisely planned his giving beforehand. A sound head may safely join in with a warm heart in the art of giving. The giver who gives by a settled plan, carefully and heartily considered, rarely has reason to regret having given too much.

That man who originally named Havana the "Paris of the Western Hemisphere" had a discerning eye. Yet he deserves little credit. The title was inevitable—the parallel is so striking. Not that Havana looks so much like Paris, but that its atmosphere and spirit are so epitomic of the French capital. To stroll down the Prado or along the Malecon of a summer's night, you would think the people of the city were entirely given over to pleasure. Restaurants, theaters, cafes and roof gardens furnish amusement for thousands, while royal palms and beautiful flowers form a fairylike setting.

The nervous man should associate as much as possible with other men who have courage and ginger, and not with other neurotics. A man with backbone is a tonic, and courage is contagious, says World's work. Let the patient associate with normal minds and absorb from them; above all, keep away from the wild-eyed, long-haired, frantic radicals—nine out of ten of them are neurotics and the thing they think is the matter with the world isn't—it can be traced to the fact that their own engines are "missing."

The old waltz may, as the dancing masters predict, come back, but the old waltzers, those who used to glide through the mazes with the very poetry of motion, will they come back? Probably not. It is not merely a matter of less suppleness, but of that glorious independence, conferred by increasing years, that enables them to go to bed as early as they please without caring what anybody thinks about it.

In Alameda, Cal., dwells a young woman who is an expert carpenter and joiner. She has already made two large mahogany tables, a piano bench and a walnut china closet. Isn't it about time for the professional humorists to quit their old wheeze that a woman cannot use a hammer without hitting her thumb?

One of the most beautiful traits of womankind is that sweet, unfailing innocence that enables them to think that when they are a thousand miles away from home today their husbands are at church instead of in the poker game.

HOW TO MAKE BUTTER OF GOOD QUALITY

REMOVING THE BUTTER FROM THE CHURN.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Buttermilk is washed out of the butter and not worked out. When in the granular stage this washing is easily done, as water poured into the churn settles through the grains and washes each one just as is done when water is poured over a pan of rice or peas. The temperature of the water should be two or three degrees colder than the buttermilk which was drawn off, and the quantity added should be about the same as that of buttermilk. Before the water is poured into the churn its temperature should be ascertained by means of a thermometer. When the water is added the lid should be put on and the churn given two or three revolutions, so as to turn the butter in the water. The water is then drawn off through the same strainer used for the buttermilk. The same quantity of water, at the same temperature, is again added, and the washing operation is repented until the water drawn from the churn shows no color of buttermilk. In addition to removing buttermilk the wash water has the effect of hardening the butter.

Salting and Working Butter.

After the washing in the churn has been finished the butter-worker is scalded and cooled with cold water to swell the pores of the wood and prevent the butter from sticking. The churn is then drawn near the worker and the butter granules are taken from the churn with a paddle and ladle and placed on the worker. The hands should never touch the butter, as their warmth melts the fat, and if they are not clean such handling is insanitary.

The butter is salted on the worker. Fine, clean salt in the proportion of one ounce to the pound of butter should be sprinkled uniformly over the butter. More or less salt may be used as the taste of the consumer may prefer.

Working the butter should be done by pressing the pile of granules with the lever until the butter is in a fat mass about one inch thick. This should then be folded over upon itself and the flattening process repeated, the butter being pressed carefully in order to avoid making it greasy. It should be worked in this way until the salt is evenly distributed throughout the mass. The working of butter distributes the salt and expels the excess moisture. The edges of the butter when broken or pulled apart should have a granular appearance similar to broken cast steel or a broken half-baked potato. Properly worked butter retains its granular form at all times. Too much working or working the butter when too soft destroys the grain, and the edges when broken or pulled apart have a slightly stringy appearance, like chewing gum pulled apart.

FOWLS NEED PROTEIN

Nitrogenous Material Essential to Egg Production.

Small Proportion of Beef Scrap With Bran, Shorts and Whole Wheat Produces Good Results Says Kansas Expert.

Protein is essential to heavy egg production. In just what form to supply this food element is a question that puzzles many farmers, as well as townspeople, who are not in a position to grow their own feed.

Insects—in season—furnish much protein where the birds are on range. Poultry feeders have used raw meats or by-products of packing plants, known as beef scraps. As the demand has increased, the price of the latter has advanced. Now a few poultry raisers consider it too expensive and are supplying protein through vegetable sources.

Cottonseed meal is the most commonly used substitute, but where this has been given in place of all other heavy protein supplying feeds, the result has not been all that could be desired, points out N. L. Harris, superintendent of the poultry farm at the Kansas State Agricultural college. On the other hand, where cottonseed meal has been used as a supplement to beef scrap at the rate of 50 per cent of the ration, it apparently has given as good results as an exclusive meat-scrap diet. On account of the bulk needed it is impossible for a hen to consume enough sour milk or buttermilk.

Ordinarily the beef scrap should constitute 10 per cent of the ration, in the opinion of Mr. Harris.

STRENGTH OF COMMON WOOD

Government's Figures of Breaking Power of Those Usually Found In Lumber Yards Everywhere.

Every farmer should have a reference book or a card laid away which shows the comparative breaking and crushing strength of the principal woods commonly used in building and for everyday purposes. Here are the government's figures of the breaking strength of various woods, the specimens used in the tests being all two inches square, 28 inches span, and clear, green wood:

Woods Tested.	Breaking Point.
Southern yellow pine (long leaf)	8,850
White oak	8,160
Black cherry	8,020
Elm, slippery	7,710
Post oak	7,380
Black ash	6,000
Silver maple	5,850
Cypress	7,110
Hemlock, eastern	6,180
Spruce, red	5,710
Fir, Alpine	5,150
Spruce, Englemann	4,300

These are only a few of the woods tested and the figures resulting, but they show those commonly found in lumber yards everywhere.

MANNER OF SEALING A SILO

When Not to Be Opened at Once Some Farmers Run in Few Loads of Cornstalks and Wet Them.

When the silo is not to be opened at once some run in a few loads of dry cornstalks and wet them well.

Others put on oats straw, two or three inches of earth or wet sawdust or an inch of oats, which sprout and effectually seal the silo so that little of the silage spoils.

When the silo is opened the rotten silage should be drawn out and spread where cattle cannot get it.

ORCHARD TOPICS

COVERING FOR GRAPEVINES

In Colder Sections of Country Artificial Protection Should Be Given in Winter.

In the colder sections of the country, wherever varieties not hardy enough to withstand severe winters are grown, grapevines should be artistically protected. Under such circumstances the vines should be pruned as soon as they become dormant. The system of pruning should be such as to easily admit of laying down the stalk and canes for next season's fruit production. The next step is to cover these parts with litter, leaves, or earth in such a way as to protect them from severe or repeated freezing and thawing and to leave them covered until just before the season for growth the following spring.

There are several species of grapes, each adapted to particular sections of the country, and each responds best to a particular method of culture, pruning and training.

The vine normally produces its fruit on shoots of the current season's growth, which in turn grow from buds developed the previous season. All pruning must, therefore, be based on this characteristic of the plant. After determining the system of pruning best suited to the conditions, species, and variety the vine should be so handled, during its early life, as to develop a general framework of the type desired.

YOUNG APPLE TREES INJURED

Buffalo Tree Hopper Causes Much Damage by Cutting Slits in Twigs In Which to Lay Eggs.

(By S. A. BEACH, Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station.)

The Buffalo Tree Hopper is a small bug of bright grass-green color. It feeds upon all kinds of succulent plants, especially such as are found growing beneath trees in orchards or groves. It damages young apple trees by cutting slits in the twigs and smaller branches in which it lays its eggs. These slits are so made that an oval piece of bark is cut free from the wood. Where these scars are numerous the whole branch may be come bark-bound, stunted and warped out of shape. The harm is greatest in young trees. One of them badly attacked even for a single year becomes bark-bound and stunted, so that it never recovers. Where the hoppers gain a foothold in nurseries the trees are rendered unsalable.

The fact that the young nymphs must find tender vegetation at comparatively short distance from the tree in which they are hatched makes it possible to starve them out by following the practice of clean culture in the nursery or orchard during the summer months.

INSECTS HIBERNATE IN TRASH

Much May Be Done to Destroy Bugs If Rubbish in Vineyards Be Raked Together and Burned.

Several grape insects winter among the fallen grape leaves in trash in vineyards, and much may be done to destroy them if the trash be raked together and burned. Such work will be of value against the grape-berry moth and the grape leaf-folder, which hibernate in the pupal condition in the fallen grape leaves. The grape-vine flea-beetle and the grape leaf-hopper spend the winter as adults under trash of all kinds in and about vineyards, and the destruction of trash as indicated will expose them to adverse climatic conditions.

CARE OF BLACKBERRY CANES

Bend Tops Down to Mellow Soil and Fasten With Weight—Save Much Trouble in Spring.

Have the tops of the blackcap raspberry canes bent down to the mellow soil and fastened with a stone or crotched stick. Better make sure of enough new plants to fill the gaps in the arid plot or to set a new one. Next spring you may have to buy several dollars' worth of plants that now can be had for a half-hour's attention given to the matter.

Does yours bring joy to the breakfast table?

North — East — South — West — women are solving the coffee problem.

Armies have solved it. "An army travels on its stomach" and of the army breakfast, ask any soldier what he would miss most.

One of the greatest American judges has said that unhappiness in the home commences with the first cup of poor coffee.

There is a coffee which brings a million men to breakfast "in a hurry."

Today you can introduce its rich, full flavor in your home. Serve Arbuckles for a week and notice how much more his breakfast means to him. Bring joy to your breakfast table.

Today there are whole towns where Arbuckles is practically the only coffee used. In one State alone, in a year, four pounds of Arbuckles' Coffee was used for every man, woman and child in the State—four times as many pounds of coffee as the population of the State!

The Failure of the Argetine Crops.

The crop news from the Argentine Republic is exceedingly unfavorable, and points almost exclusively to yields with a heavy percentage below the average of those of the past three years.

This makes it more than ever incumbent upon the cultivators of the soil of the United States to do their utmost to produce the largest possible crops of foodstuff.

We trust that the farmers in every State of the Union will unite in this great work of providing food for the hungry populations of the globe, and incidentally securing for themselves the profits which the prevailing high prices will enable them to obtain.

Every grain of wheat, corn, rye barley and rice that can be raised is needed by human beings to maintain life and sustain strength and while our people complain of high prices they are not suffering from the lack of food which is known in almost every household of Europe from the Caspian Sea to the westernmost point of the coast of Ireland.

While believing that the cotton crop of the South for the year 1917, even if it should exceed 16,000,000 bales, will command a high price in the markets at home and abroad, yet we would regret to see the farmers of the South fail to increase the yields of their farms in all the grains, grasses, poultry, hogs and other farm animals.

They should not endanger their diversified farming profits thru concentration of their efforts upon the production of that single crop, cotton.

The South has made great strides forward in agricultural importance and in financial profits through its taking up of diversified farming in recent years, and it has opportunities during 1917 to forge far ahead on the avenue of permanent prosperity by still greater efforts in this diversified field.

The South can add millions of dollars to its profits in the next 12 months by extensive production of foodstuffs.

The entire country doing its very best, North, South, East and West, cannot produce such yields in 1917 as will fully meet the world wide demands, but it can relieve great distress by producing immense crops, and these great crops can be sold at very high prices.

The appalling conditions as regards foodstuffs in Europe, Mexico and parts of Asia can only be remedied during the coming year through very large productions on the farms of these United States.

Every regard for humanity calls for alleviation of the famine which is forcing these people.

Our people has contributed millions of dollars to the relief of victims of the war in Europe, and, without in the slightest degree seeking to minimize the relief those dollars brought to the suffering, we yet deem it clear that the farmers of the United States can benefit more largely fully 300,000,000 of the people of Europe by concentration and systemitization of efforts to produce the greatest possible yields of foodstuffs during the year 1917.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

New York, Dec. 15.—The latest addition to the collection in the American Museum of Natural History is an entire petrified skeleton of a mammoth treachodont, or duck-billed dinosaur, 8,000,000 years old, recently unearthed in Montana. In life the dinosaur was 45 feet long and weighed about a ton. Its tail was 15 feet long, its body 25 feet and its skull four or five feet. In the trachodont's jaws were 2,500 teeth.

The New Tax Bill.

The features of the new tax bill which will attract most attention are those altering the basis of State taxation seeking by classification larger revenues, while lessening the burdens of taxation upon those who now pay by bringing within the reach of the Assessor property which now escapes.

A new system of taxation necessarily means a readjustment of investments and new business plans and methods. Whether these changes will result in larger revenues and greater contentment can only be determined by practical experience.

The present system has driven into concealment millions of property which cannot pay an aggregated tax rate of from one and a half to three per cent. This "general property tax," which seeks to exact the same revenue from all the varied forms of property, has everywhere proved a failure, has everywhere resulted in inequalities, has everywhere lessened the loan on funds of every community, has driven investors into perjury, and finally imposed the heaviest burden upon the borrower.

It has been sentenced to annihilation, but it is easier to register the decree than to carry out the judgment. The government must have revenue and it must come from existing and chiefly from immovable property; property that cannot conceal itself and cannot run away.

The report of the Tax Commission just made public is based upon general principles, which tax payers of every class should seek to make workable. It will not suffice to transfer the burdens of one class to another, or of one individual to another else the last condition of the State will be worse than the first.

It may be well to secure favorable consideration for the new measure in the beginning, with the declaration that the present tax rate of 55 cents is too high, and to fix 40 cents as the maximum hereafter, but for this lower rate of taxation we must provide an increase in the taxable property of 50 per cent.

The Commission has undertaken to accomplish this by a number of measures designed to bring to light large amounts of hidden property and to attract to the State a large amount of capital unfairly taxed elsewhere.

All of these suggestions will be subjected to the strictest analysis by men of business experience and by public officers If millions are to be withdrawn from local taxation, the local authorities must be provided with other sources of revenue to make good this deficit; for the constitutional maximum of local taxation has not been changed, and the constitutional limitation on debts has not been raised.

The Commission does not recommend, but the necessities of the State require an annual State budget, and a revision of the tax rate every two years. We cannot have rigid economy, with permanent appropriations exceeding the State's resources.

Every Legislature, through an appropriations committee should revise the estimates of every department, curtail them, enlarge, add to them needed items, and then fix a levy for each item and each department, and keep the total levy in view throughout all of these conditions.

This will be "the beginning of righteousness" for tax reform in Kentucky. — Louisville Evening Post.
